DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, MARCH 10, 1891.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 21st February; from N.W.P. and Punjab to the 19th February; and from Bengal to the 17th February.

No date has yet been fixed for the Viceroy's departure from Calcutta, but in all probability His Excellency will leave on one of the early days in April.

LADY LANSDOWNE will probably leave Calcutta on March 12th, going for a short visit to Lucknow on the way to Simla.

SIR GEORGE CHESNEY has returned to Calcutta from his visit to the Rangoon and Hughli defence works.

COLONEL PEMBERTON, the officiating Public Works Member of Council, has reached Calcutta to take up his appointment.

MAJOR-GENERAL COLLEN, Secretary to the Government of India in the Military Department, was to rejoin his appointment on return from leave to England on March 5th.

THE Legislative Council for the North-West Provinces met on February 16th, when the new members took their seats, and leave was granted to the Hon. W. C. Benett to introduce the Water Supply Bill. The Council meets again on the 16th March.

LIEUTENANT PRINCE CHRISTIAN of Schleswig-Holstein, 60th Rifles, and Lieutenant Wilberforce, 2nd Dragoon Guards, will be orderly officers to General Elles on the Black Mountain Expedition.

CAPTAIN J. STRACHEY, Private Secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, takes two and a-half months' privilege leave, in order to accompany his regiment, the 11th Bengal Infantry, on the Black Mountain Expedition. Mr. O. S. Nugent, 60th Rifles, officiates during Captain Strachey's absence.

THE severe weather that has been prevalent in Beluchistan has greatly interfered with progress on the Khojak Tunnel. In the first place work has often been a physical impossibility, and again on the bleak and exposed heights of the Kwaja Amran the severity of the weather has naturally told heavily on the health of the workmen.

THE first through passenger from Calcutta to Bombay by the direct route of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway was Sir Charles Crosthwaite, who went over the line accompanied by the Agent and Chief Engineer, Mr. Wynne, on his way home last week. The journey from Assansol to Nagpore was accomplished in twenty-eight hours, no bad time considering the many stoppages incidental to all travel on lines not yet opened to public traffic.

MAJOR BROADBENT, R.E., Deputy Secretary in the Military Department, has returned from furlough. Captain Bird, who has been officiating, will be placed on special duty in the Accounts branch.

A NEW Government House is to be erected for the Governor of Bombay upon Malabar Point, on the site of the present bungalow. The new house will have large reception-rooms and proper accommodation for the staff and band.

MR. C. H. HILL, Conservator of Forests, has returned from Burma, where he has been examining the progress made in forestry operations in the Province.

A TERRIBLE outrage is reported from Upper Burma. A Pathan naik ran amuck at Fort Stedman on Wednesday morning, Feb. 11, and shot Major Nixon, commanding the 33rd Burma Regiment, dead in his house while the unfortunate officer was dressing for parade. Lieutenant Jamieson, of the same regiment, was seriously wounded, two sepoys were shot dead, and one sepoy slightly wounded while attempting to arrest the murderer. Eventually the fanatic was arrested, himself severely wounded. Lieutenant Jamieson has since to be added to the list of the Pathan murderer's victims, he having died in a few hours from his wounds.

THE Sub-Judge of Coconada pleaded guilty to the charge of bribery in having received twenty-five thousand rupees from one Peda Venkanna, plaintiff in an original suit in his court, and has been sentenced to eighteen months' simple imprisonment, of which three months are to be solitary confinement, and a thousand rupees fine, or, in default, four months' further imprisonment.

THE Ameer is now so completely recovered that he has resumed personal direction of affairs at Cabul.

THE Governor of Khost has suggested to the Ameer that an Afghan force should be permanently located near the Peiwar Kotal to control the Kurram passes.

THE Gaekwar of Baroda, who has been indisposed for some time, is now much improved in health.

A SKIRMISH is now reported from the hitherto quiet region of the Southern Lushais. Mr. Murray, Political Officer, having with him a party of fifty rifles, was suddenly attacked near Jacopa's village, and lost some men before he could extricate himself. A subsequent telegram gives a more serious complexion to the late outbreak in the Southern Lushai country than it wore in the light of the first intelligence. It appears that Mr. Murray had divided his men into two parties, which were both simultaneously attacked by the tribesmen. The party which was with him lost three men, and the other no less than ten, before the attack was repulsed. Such a heavy list of casualties seems to indicate that the detachment must have had a narrow escape of being destroyed outright.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL SIR W. LOCKHART is returning from across the frontier to Kohat, to have a meeting there with the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. The troops meanwhile will remain in their present positions on the Samana ridge, until it has been definitely settled what roads are to be made and what posts are required for the permanent control of the Miranzai border.

IT is rumoured that Brigadier-General Smart will be succeeded by Colonel Rawlinson in the command of the Madras District.

SIR CHARLES ARBUTHNOT vacates the command of the Madras Army, and will proceed to the South of France. He will be accompanied by Captain Preston, who has obtained a year's furlough.

THE supporters of the Age of Consent Bill in Bombay have determined to hold a public meeting in Bombay as a demonstration in favour of the Bill.

IT has been decided to commemorate Sir George Birdwood's long connection with Bombay, and his continued and beneficent interests in this country, by a public memorial.

CALCUTTA is to have a new hotel on a scale sufficiently large to meet even the greatest demands during the cold season. A syndicate of capitalists has been formed, and it is proposed to acquire a site in Chowringhee facing the Ochterlony monument.

AN outbreak of small-pox has occurred at Shillong, and several Europeans are suffering.

OWING to severe weather on the frontier, the operations of the Black Mountain Expedition continue to be interrupted.

SRINAGAR in Cashmere is suffering very much this winter from the severity of the weather.

MEETINGS are being held all over the country just now in favour of and against the Protected Age Bill.

AN expedition is to be sent out to occupy and disarm the Wuntho State, the Sawbwa being reported to be the instigator of the recent violent crimes on the border.

MAKHMADDIN, the Kohat Chief who incited the recent disturbances on the frontier, has surrendered to the officer in charge of the Miranzai Expedition, thus bringing hostilities to a close.

H.E. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF has commuted the sentence of death passed on Driver Harding, of the 44th Battery of Field Artillery, for murdering a comrade, to penal servitude for life.

H.E. SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS, Commander-in-Chief of Forces in India, visited Bombay on February 16, and inspected the batteries, leaving again for Calcutta next day.

Four men having committed robbery near Thamine, Rangoon, on Sunday, attempted to cross a railway to escape, when a train came up and cut them to pieces.

CAPTAIN HUTCHINSON has started from Fort Tregear with a small armed force for the Jacopa's village to quell the rising in South Lushailand, recently renewed. He will be reinforced with more troops en route.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL AUCHINLECK died at Allahabad on February 14.

NOTES.

ALL the most important and interesting information from India will be found in the copious telegrams which have been wired from Calcutta and Rangoon during the past week. The news by "Overland Mail" must, therefore, read somewhat "stale, flat, and unprofitable," and this is likely to continue to be so, but in a greater degree, if the proposed reduction in the cost of telegraphic messages between India and England take place. Mr. Henniker Heaton's views on this point are, perhaps, a little too sanguine, but he is not easily daunted by difficulties, and as one victory has been achieved in the way of reduction of postage, another may be looming in the near future in the way of Indian telegraph charges, which are more grossly exorbitant in proportion than were the Indian postal rates.

IT is a hopeful sign for all who are interested in the well-being and progress of India to find the Times now devoting so much of its valuable space to the discussion of, or comments upon, Indian questions, political and social. The able writer who is now giving his views weekly in that journal on "Indian Affairs" has this week very exhaustively argued the necessity of immediate attention being called to the subject on which we have written editorially to-day, viz. the Poor Eurasians in Calcutta. He dwells on the facts formulated by the Englishman, from which we have quoted, to the effect that of the whole Eurasian and half-caste population in Calcutta and Hourah, one-fifth are in receipt of charitable relief—a proportion probably without parallel in any other community in the world.

BUT where is the remedy to be found? Allowing that indiscriminate charity only intensifies the evil, these paupers, even when undeserving from vicious or idle habits, cannot be allowed to die of starvation. The writer in the Times owns that the problem is a hard one to solve, and he does not attempt to solve it himself. In Calcutta, the Bengal Government has been asked to appoint a Commission for the purpose of "collecting evidence and making suggestions," and it is to be hoped that some good result may come of such inquiry, although, as a rule, little good does come from "Commissions," Royal, Parliamentary, or Local.

THE latest copy of the Englishman to hand suggests the enrolment of an East Indian Regiment as a means of partly diminishing the evil of pauperism throughout the Eurasian community. It thinks that a corps of at least 2,000 strong could be raised in Calcutta alone, and it recommends that the recruits should be enlisted for a period of ten years or more, and be given the same pay as European soldiers, as such enrolment would save the heavy expense of a similar number of British soldiers to and from England.

IT might save that initial expense, but our Calcutta contemporary seems to forget that the experiment has already been tried in India, and it was not satisfactory. The Lahore Light Horse did, certainly, some good service in the Mutiny, but it was found that the expense of keeping up a Eurasian corps in India was as heavy as that of keeping up a British regiment, and there could be no doubt where the efficiency lay. The Eurasian is not as a rule physically fitted to endure the rough-and-ready work which a soldier has to do in the field; and to embody a battalion of such men merely for garrison duties, would simply be to organise an expensive military police. But the economic question will always be a pressing one, so long as the Eurasian youth marries early as he does, begets many children, and keeps in his family his mother, mother-in-law, sisters, and aunts. He would have to be freed from his Hindú traditions in this respect before he could be made into a cheap, if doubtfully efficient, soldier.

AN important improvement occurs in the mail service from the 1st March, which will benefit the whole of India, except perhaps Bombay. At present the mails for Southern India, both from the Punjab and Calcutta, go to Bombay, and suffer several hours' detention there. A through service has now been arranged viâ the Dhond and Manmar Railway. The arrangement will save an entire day each way on the journey between Calcutta and Madras, or between Lahore and Madras. Passengers will also be benefited. There will now be a through service without break or detention between Tuticorin and Kurrachee, a distance of 3,128 miles.

DEPARTURE OF I.M.S. CANNING.

Her Majesty's Indian Marine steamer Canning, Captain C. W Hewett, sailed on Feb. 16 for Kurrachee, with the 1st Royal Fusiliers and details, consisting of 21 officers, one lady, and four children, 13 warrant officers, 11 women. 21 children, 970 men (Europeans), 12 women, and 14 children, 5 men (natives), 7 women, 9 children, and 108 followers. LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

BY TELEGRAPH.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 2.

The Delhi, Umballa, and Kalka Railway was opened for through traffic yesterday.

The Viceroy and the guests invited to the opening of the Bengal Nagpore Railway leave Calcutta to-night for Chakardarpore, where the ceremony takes place to-morrow.

The condition of the Calcutta Small Cause Court is exciting grave dissatisfaction, especially among the mercantile community. The president of the Chamber of Commerce, on a recent public occasion, said it had become a serious question for merchants whether they had not better pay unjust and forego just claims, rather than submit to the vexatious and harassing delays of that Court. This state of things arises from the fact that the Court is overburdened with work, its jurisdiction having been increased some years ago and more complicated procedure introduced, while no addition has been made to its judicial strength.

The Press urges the Government to deal promptly with this public scandal, and recommends that the Court's jurisdiction be reduced to its former level, and that such changes be made in the High Court as will enable the latter tribunal to dispose more rapidly and cheaply of cases of small value.

CALCUTTA, MAR. 6.

The Select Committee on the Age of Consent Bill presented its report to-day. It recommends no substantial alteration in the measure except limiting the jurisdiction inquiring into the offences to the higher grades of the magistracy. The committee has received a great mass of opinions from local Government officials, public associations, and private individuals. It is impossible within the limits of a telegram to give more than a brief summary of some of the more important.

The authorities consulted by the Governments of Madras, Bombay, the Punjab, and minor administrations are favourable to the Bill on the whole.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal states that, of 40 associations and individuals consulted, 24 approve of the Bill either as it stands or with modification, and 16 disapprove of it. Omitting the associations and dividing the individuals into classes according to position, character, &c., he considers that 10 authorities of the first class and 11 of the second class are favourable, while seven of the first class and eight of the second are adverse to the measure. He discusses and condemns the various modifications suggested, and desires to record his distinct and hearty support of the Bill, and adds that his inquiries have satisfied him that there is scarcely any opposition in Eastern Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, and that there is no serious hostility in Central Bengal except in the immediate neighbourhood of Calcutta.

The majority of the Calcutta High Court decline to discuss the policy of the measure, and suggest some improvements in procedure, but Justices Ghose and Banerjee submit a separate minute, stating that, while fully sympathising with its objects, they are unable to support the Bill as it stands, and proposing various modifications.

The Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces considers from the terms of the reference to him that the Supreme Government has assumed the responsibility of deciding to raise the age of consent, and does not desire advice in that regard, and accordingly confines himself to suggesting safeguards to prevent the very grave possibility or even probability of the law as drafted being made the instrument of the greatest evils in the hands of unscrupulous and designing men; and it seems evident from the general tone of his letter that Sir A. Colvin disapproves of the Bill.

The Maharajahs of Travancore and Jeypore express entire approval, and the latter adds that he has already in his own State fixed the minimum ages for marriage for Rajpoots at 18 for males and 14 for females.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 8.

The exact modifications suggested by the Select Committee on the Age of Consent Bill are that only a district or chief presidency magistrate be permitted to take cognizance, and that no police officer below the rank of inspector is to investigate a charge against a husband. Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter appends a long minute of dissent, repeating the arguments brought forward by the opponents of the measure during the past two months.

The report of the Select Committee on the Factories Bill was presented on Friday. The following are the chief amendments proposed:—

A factory is to come under the Act when it employs 50 people; but the local Governments are to be empowered to apply the measure to any factory employing over 20. This proviso is inserted to enable the Bombay Government to bring within the Act the small ginning factories which were reported to be in an insanitary and objectionable condition. The age of children who may be employed is to be raised from 7 to 9, and the adult age to be raised from 12 to 14, as recommended by the Factory Commission. All operatives are to enjoy complete rest on Sundays unless a holiday occurs during the three days immediately before or after. Several industries, the nature of which necessitates continuous production, are excluded from this provision as recommended by the Berlin Conference.

The labour of women is to be restricted to 11 hours daily, and to two hours between 8 in the evening and 5 in the morning, except where the shift system is in force. Factories not worked on the shift system must stop for half an hour at midday, and women must get one and a half hour's rest for every 11 hours' work, or a proportionate rest for a less amount of work. Children are only to be permitted to work for seven hours unless in shifts, when they may work two shifts of four hours each, provided that an interval of two hours is given. Children are not to be employed in any circumstances between 8 in the evening and 5 in the morning, and an interval, or intervals aggregating at least half an hour, is to be given to children who work for six consecutive hours. Several new clauses are introduced providing for ventilation, water-supply, sanitation, and the prevention of overcrowding.

The committee was closely occupied on the Bill the whole of last week, and it is believed that the measure as amended will not only meet the demands of the Secretary of State, but will also be acceptable to the Indian manufacturers. At any rate, it is perfectly certain that the latter are not prepared to go further, and any attempt by the home authorities to interfere in a greater measure with adult male operatives, women, or children would lead to a serious agitation.

The report is signed by the native non-official member from Bombay and by Mr. Mackay, President of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Bliss and Mr. Nugent, the official members from Madras and Bombay, concur, but add a note that the Bill ought to be sent back to the local Governments for their reports. Sir A. Scoble and Mr. Hutchins are the other members of the committee.

Lord Wenlock, replying to an address of a native association, said that the anxiety regarding the scarcity of crops in several districts had been much relieved lately. Doubtless careful attention to the condition of the people was necessary, but he did not anticipate that anything more than the ordinary public works would be required.

The publication of the first rough returns of the census in Madras and Bombay, showing their respective populations to be 450,000 and 804,464, has caused considerable surprise in both cities, as larger totals were expected. Some doubts are thrown on the accuracy of the Bombay return. The Calcutta result is not yet announced, but it is expected that the city, including the suburbs, which have been brought under the municipality since the previous census, will show a total of about 750,000.

The Viceroy will leave Calcutta on the 24th inst., and will spend two days at Allahabad, and will then proceed to open the Pillibit Railway. He will reach Naini Tal on the 28th, where he will remain for two days.

The official despatches of the recent Zhob expedition were published in yesterday's Gazette, also a Government letter expressing the Viceroy's cordial appreciation of the good work done by the troops under trying circumstances, and the ability, judgment, and vigour with which General White conducted the operations.

LATER.

The following is the general result of the census in Lower Bengal. The population has increased in ten years from 69½ to 74 millions, or 6½ per cent. The principal increase is in Eastern Bengal, the tea districts, and the neighbourhood of Calcutta.

THE Australian Irrigation Colonies (Chaffey Brothers) offer a pleasant occupation, a healthy life, a cheerful home, a soil of unequalled fertility—producing by irrigation results unparalleled in the annals of Horticulture—comfort, civilization, and material prosperity combined. They consist of half-a-million acres, in the sunny and salubrious climate of Victoria, and South Australia, on the great River Murray, which affords an abundant supply of fertilizing water for the Irrigation of Vineyards and Fruit Farms, and for the production, in assured quantity and excellence, of Grapes, Oranges, Lemons, Olives, Apricots, Figs, and other Fruits (already so successfully grown in Australia), by Cultivators with large and small Capital, holding from Ten to Eighty Acres and upwards. The Wines and Fruits of Australia are now in extensive demand in British and Colonial Markets, and there is a practically unlimited field for such production under most profitable conditions to the Settlers. Matthew Vincent, 35, Queen Victoria Street, E.C., from whom all information, &c., may be obtained, also an illustrated folio descriptive work, price 4s., post free.—Advt.

The Darjeeling district has increased 43 per cent., Noakhal 23·9, Julpigori 16·3, Howrah district 15, Howrah town 24·5, Dacca district 13·7, Tipperah 17, Chittagong 13, and the Twenty-four Pergunnahs 11·6. Naraingunge, the centre of the jute trade, has advanced from 12,508 to 23,868, nearly cent. per cent. Maimansingh, the largest district, has advanced from 3,051,000 to 3,444,000, or 12·98 per cent. Five districts, Birbhum, Nuddea, Rajshahi, Rungpore, and Jessore, show a decrease varying 6 to 2·8. The State of Kuch Behar has fallen 4 per cent.

RANGOON, MARCH 2.

Pinlebu was occupied by the mounted police on the 27th ult. The Tsawbwa, on hearing of the British advance, burnt the stockade which he had erected, and fled northward, followed by a detachment of the Duke of Cornwall's mounted infantry and the mounted police under Captain Keary.

Brigadier-General Wolseley will reach Pinlebu to-day, and will to-morrow hold a durbar, at which he will confirm all the local authorities who surrender. The villagers, now being reassured, are delivering up their arms, of which there is great abundance.

The health of the troops is excellent, notwithstanding their severe marches over the mountains. The country is delightful.

Captain Hutchinson, who was wounded in the recent action near Okkam, died on Friday.

RANGOON, MARCH 2.

Pinlebu has been occupied by mounted infantry.

The Tsawbwa has retreated northwards, having previously burned his stockade. He is being pursued by mounted infantry of the Cornwall Regiment and mounted military police under Captain Keary.

General Wolseley will hold a durbar in Pinlebu.

RANGOON, MARCH 3.

The column commanded by Captain Burton was on Sunday night attacked by a strong force of Kachins. Some smart fighting ensued, and in the course of the engagement two Goorkhas were killed and ten wounded, while Mr. French, the executive engineer with the column, was wounded in the foot.

A column consisting of fifty men of the 2nd Battalion of the Devonshire Regiment, fifty military police, and fifty of the Madras Infantry leave Bhamo to-day to reinforce Captain Burton.

The country south and east of Bhamo is disturbed.

RANGOON, MARCH 3 (LATER).

Intelligence has reached here from Wuntho that the Katha Column reached Banmauk on the 27th ult. Some opposition was encountered during the advance, but the loss of the column was limited to one Karen wounded. The old Tsawbwa, who was within three miles of Banmauk, retreated to Mansi, and a mixed force of 100 men was sent forward, the main body remaining temporarily at Banmauk.

RANGOON, MARCH 8.

Although all the returns have not yet been received, the general result of the census in Burmah is known. The population of Lower Burmah in the last census was, in round numbers, 3,730,000, and, according to the present census, is 4,430,000, being an increase of about 700,000 souls, or 18¾ per cent. In Upper Burma the population was estimated at 2,100,000; but it is ascertained that the actual population is not less than 2,500,000. The enumeration of the population in Upper Burma does not include the Shan States, the population of which may be roughly stated at 200,000 in the Northern and 300,000 in the Southern States. The Chins, Kachyens, and Red Karens are also excluded. These combined races certainly exceed 100,000. The total population of the country under the control of the Chief Commissioner of Burma will be found to exceed 7,500,000.

The population of Mandalay, including the garrison and cantonments is 188,000. In Mandalay town are included a long string of straggling villages having little real connection with the town, and extending over a district of some 15 miles in length by 6 miles wide. The final return of the population in Rangoon, within the municipal limits and the cantonments, is 181,000.

Brigadier-General Wolseley has submitted to the local Government a list of the fortified posts which he proposes should be held in that portion of the Wuntho territory already subdued. Each post will be provided with six months' rations.

Detailed reports from Pinlebu show that the stockade prepared there by the Tsawbwa was of extraordinary strength.

The local Government have not yet received a detailed report of the march of Captain O'Donnell's column in search of Chinese marauders. Sir A. Mackenzie is, however, arranging for establishing a line of strong permanent posts to watch the route from China to Mogoung, thus blocking effectually the roads which marauders and opium smugglers now use, and bring the communications with the jade and amber mines under control. Four posts will be established on the Irrawaddy. Hokat, about 50 miles north of Bhamo, will probably be given up.

A large portion of the Bhamo district continues to be disturbed. Its pacification will be long and troublesome. Mohnyin was recently attacked by Kachyens, who were easily repulsed. The reinforcements sent from Bhamo have reached Captain Barton's column. Major Smyth, R.A., who took command of the united force, has attacked and burned two Kachyen villages. In a skirmish on the 1st inst. between the Kachyens and Captain Barton's column the Kachyens surprised and rushed Captain Barton's camp.

The Mandalay Herald announces that the Mingoon Prince has returned to Saigon, and it states that the streets of Mandalay are now patrolled by military police.

Captain Drury, of the 3rd Goorkhas, continues under arrest without any definite charge being preferred against him or any Court inquiry held. The treatment experienced by this officer has excited considerable feeling in military circles, which is heightened by the peculiar circumstances of the province. In Burma any real fighting to be done by the native troops falls on the Bengal regiments in the province. Burma is under the Madras Commander-in-Chief, and the substantive rank of the officer commanding the Burma division is that of Lieutenant-Colonel of the Madras Army. The belief is widely entertained that the Bengal officers and troops have received somewhat scant justice in Burma. This feeling is strengthened by the harsh and extraordinary treatment of Captain Drury, who commanded the wing of one of the choicest Bengal regiments.

FORT WHITE, MARCH 3.

In the Northern Chin Hills, Captain Rundall, after obtaining the liberation of the surviving captives carried off by the Kanhow Chins in the raid of Jan. 7 on the village of Pinthawa, called upon the Kanhows to surrender the captives previously taken, and to pay up in full the balance of the fine inflicted upon them for the Pinthawa affair.

The Kanhows made many promises, but deferred action from day to day on various excuses. After many warnings had been disregarded, an ultimatum was sent to the effect that unless all the terms had been complied with by Feb. 23, Tungzang would be attacked.

The ultimatum being disregarded, the troops advanced, and on the morning of the 24th the village was surrounded and attacked. The Kanhows resisted, and in the engagement twelve were killed, while the three principal chiefs were captured. The immediate effect of this success was the surrender by the Kanhows of thirteen more captives, and the payment of three elephant-tusks, being the balance of the fine imposed for the Pinthawa raid, which is now fully paid up.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

SIR ALEXANDER WILSON.

(Englishman.)

Sir "Alec" Wilson, who is on the eve of leaving India for good, has been a leading personality in Calcutta for the past six years, and during a long residence in India has earned the reputation of being a man of liberal tastes and wide sympathies, equally capable in the pursuit of business and sport, and the happy possessor of those by no means common qualities which go to the composition of a "good fellow," as the term is generally understood. A son of the Dean of Aberdeen, and born in 1843, Alexander Wilson began life in the English Civil Service, and spent five years in the National Debt Office in London. At that time he was an enthusiastic member of the Kingston Rowing Club. He rowed in the Club Eight three years in succession, and was in the boat that won the Grand Challenge Cup in 1864. From the Debt Office to an Assam tea-garden was a sweeping change, but Mr. Wilson was "equal to either fortune," and took as kindly to field sports in India as to rowing on the Thames. After three years in Assam, he moved to Mirzapur, and in 1869 took up the management of the great local lac factories belonging to Messrs. Jardine, Skinner and Co. Here he spent nine years, being admitted a partner in the firm in 1877, and succeeding Mr. Keswick as its head in 1885. He had been a dozen years in India before he took his first short spell of leave, and during his whole quarter of a century he has been absent little more than two years. From the day of his arrival in Calcutta, his life has been a phenomenally busy one, for it is difficult to name an interest or a cause, whether in the field of business or recreation, that he has not been identified with in something more than name. He has been Sheriff of Calcutta, President of the Chamber of Commerce. Chairman at the St. Andrew's Dinner, President of the Defence Association, Director of the Bank of Bengal, Commandant of the Calcutta Light Horse, and Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, and in addition has held a score of other offices and distinguished himself in a host of divers and kindly ways. As sheriff he received the honour of knighthood in the Jubilee year. The farewell dinner which was given in his honour last night was a crowning proof of the popularity of Sir Alec Wilson, and of the appreciation that has been accorded to the numerous and valuable public services which he has succeeded in crowding into a few short years. The hearty wishes of all sections of the community will go with him to his home in the old country.

THE VALIDITY OF INFANT MARRIAGE.

(Madras Mail.)

A recent judgment of the High Court of Madras illustrates the religious and social life of the Hindus in this Presidency, and the tone of thought which prevails on the subject. There was a Brahmin couple residing at Srirangapuram in the Kistna district, who disputed with each other regarding the marriage of their daughter, aged three years. The mother had selected a youth as an eligible bridegroom, but the father disapproved of him. The mother waited until the father left his home for a few days, and she then took the child to the Mangalagiri temple, informed the officiating Brahmin that she had her husband's permission, and had the child married to the bridegroom of her selection. But the father refused to acknowledge this marriage. Time passed, and at length the bridegroom filed a suit to declare the marriage valid. The suit was heard before the District Munsif of Bapatla, who decided that, the ceremony having taken place, the status conferred upon the child was indelible. But after pronouncing judgment, the Munsif said to the assembled bar: "Now, that decision will never stand on appeal, because no European understands how we look upon marriage not as a contract, but as a sacrament." The father appealed to the District Court, and the Judge found that the mother of the child had acted in fraud of the father's rights, and that the marriage was invalid. The bridegroom preferred a second appeal to the High Court. It was heard before Muttusami Aiyar and Shephard, J. J., on October 16th; and on November 18th they ruled that the giving of a daughter in marriage is a duty, not a right; that the mother was one of the legal guardians, and therefore that her false statement to the officiating priest did not vitiate the marriage. They therefore restored the judgment of the District Munsif, which had been reversed by the District Judge.

This judgment, which will be found in another column, proceeds upon the principle that the marriage ceremonial in the temple was a sacrament, the efficacy of which does not depend upon the consent of the infant bride. This point of view differs from the idea of a contract between two responsible adults, which is the European view of marriage, and the Mahomedan also. It is possible to understand the Hindu view if one remembers that among Christians baptism is a sacrament which confers an indelible status upon an unconscious infant. If an infant were baptised in secrecy by fraud, all theologians would say that the baptism was valid. Whether a lawyer would say that such a baptism altered the legal rights of the infant or its parents is a more difficult question, but the contention has been gravely put forward. Some of our readers may perchance remember the discussion about the Mortara infant, which created so much stir in Europe about five and thirty years ago. He was the child of Jewish parents residing in the States of the Church in Italy. He was secretly baptised by a Christian nursemaid, and the Papal Government was disposed for that reason to remove the child from the custody of the Jewish parents. In the same way in this Presidency there was a case in which Hindu parents, during the famine of 1877–78, made over their infant to a missionary, but when times improved again, claimed their child. The missionary resisted the claim, and contended before the magistrate that it was too late, as the child had been baptised. These contentions show a similar train of thought, that the sacrament, no matter how administered, alters the status of the infant. Also, there are instances in which the doctrine of factum valet is applied to marriages. Thus, if a young man in England marries a ward in Chancery without the permission of the Court, he may be sent to gaol, but the marriage holds good. A similar law obtains in this Presidency under Section 9 of Act XXI. of 1855, which imposes penalties on all who abet marriage of a ward in Court without the permission of the Board of Revenue, but the marriage nevertheless would hold good. A curious instance arose in Masulipatam twenty years ago. According to custom, a Komati wished to marry his cousin, the daughter of his father's sister, but the girl's parents objected to give her. He thereupon took his bride by force. But he lived some centuries too late, for the Sessions Court took a modern view of his romantic procedure, and sent him to serve a term in gaol. But the marriage held good, being of the Dakshasa form of marriage by capture, which is thus defined by Mr. Mayne: "The seizure of a maiden by force from her house, while she weeps and calls for assistance, after her kinsmen and friends have been slain in battle or wounded, and their houses broken open." These are perhaps the only two persons in the Presidency who were married by that ancient form. Thus it is possible from the dusty recesses of Hindu commentators to find texts that justify many things that seem curious to European eyes; but the whole subject becomes pathetic when one thinks of the infant, aged three, in the temple at Mangalagiri, taking the seven steps before the consecrated fire, and thereby binding herself for life to be the wife or widow of the youth beside her.

ADVICE TO OLD CAMPAIGNERS.

It is really very depressing to see people who obviously lay themselves out to attain a particular object miss that object simply through ignorance; and it is owing to a large-hearted compassion that I, who have nothing to gain or lose by it, set to work to write a few hints to the would-be mothers-in-law in India. I must treat them as a class, for there is a strong resemblance running through them; but of course there are exceptions, and they need not read my hints. Now you, as a rule, start with a grave initial error; you say you must get your daughter out to India because of the depreciation of the rupee. If this is your reason, it is a bad one; for a depreciated daughter is a thousand times worse than a depreciated rupee! And in nine cases out of ten a daughter does get depreciated by coming out to India. As a friend of mine who understood mathematics once explained to me, this is a very large proportion.

To begin with, you not unfrequently stand in your own daughters light, by behaving yourself as if you were sweet seventeen. You may be right in thinking that your daughter would not be so likely to marry in England as in India: but if you do get her out here, do try and give her a fair start. You begin the real business as a rule in the hills; about the worst place in the world for it. You early impress your daughter with the idea that the young men who are intimate with all the fast women in the hills, who wax their moustaches, who gamble, who do nothing which is of the faintest value to anyone, are the cream of the earth. You wish that she should get into the smart set; and you will hold that these useless encumbrances of the earth, and these alone, are people of good form. Do you really think that the young man who comes up on leave to fool around a hill station, to dangle after other men's wives, to gamble at the club, to act as general "bow-wow" to any pretty woman who will tolerate him, is likely to turn into a decent husband? Have you not seen the experiment tried? And what are the results of the experiment as a rule?

But you will say, a great many men who are employed in the hills are just as smart, and fast, and in your eyes as desirable as the leave-men. Are you to reject every man who looks smart and dresses well? Not at all. That is just where you are treated unfairly: if you could draw a hard and fast line, and say that the leave-men are objectionable, the employed are saints; or that the men of this set are to be blessed and the men of that set are to be banned, you would be able to sail along very easily; but that is just what you cannot do, as there are sheep and goats in every set. But in this difficulty you can get help where you probably would least expect it. I refer to your husband. Your husband can find out in half an hour at the club more about a man than you would find out in six months. If a man is well thought of by his fellow-men, you may be pretty sure he is a good sort. When men look askance at him, you may be sure there is something radically wrong, even though he dances divinely and wears varnished boots. Take my advice—drop him; men know more about him than you do, and more than they say. But where you make your grand mistake is in setting your bait. You generally let your daughter overdress (unless you spend too much on your own dress); you let her talk slang; you let her do foolish things at dances; you encourage her to be pert and conceited, and you allow her to do many things which nice girls in England would never dream of wishing to do. The result is obvious. A decent man is introduced to her, she does not know if he is one of what she supposes to be the right set, he possibly talks a little common-sense to her, and she probably turns up her nose at him the next time she sees him. He goes away with the impression, and a very fair one, that she is a very ill-mannered and empty-headed little piece of goods. So your daughter gets irretrievably linked with the fast set: and probably will be hardly fit to speak to after a season or two.

Now just a few words of advice. First save up your rupees and go home, and don't bring your daughter out. Secondly, if you do bring her out, don't force her into the fast set; try and get her friends among the many wise, lady-like women who have to be sought out, and do not obtrude themselves on your notice. Thirdly, if she wishes to behave out here in a way that she would not have liked to do at home, try mild persuasion at first; if that does not do, tell her, once and for all, that she will not be allowed to act so under any circumstances. Fourthly, if you are in doubt as to any point about your daughter's conduct, consult your husband. I have known husbands give quite sensible advice at times. Finally, if you have once brought your daughter out, you must get her married somehow or other, because there is not much of a market in England for a girl returned from the Indian hills.—"E. A. U." in the Civil and Military Gazette.

OUR MILITARY CONTRIBUTION.

(Ceylon Observer.)

"Above all, keep your heads," was the exhortation of a leader to public men placed in a difficult position on a notable occasion. Some such advice is applicable to the public men of this community who may have to determine how the demand for a large Military Contribution is to be met. We trust there are no unofficial members of the Legislature or leaders in the Planters' Association and Chamber of Commerce who are likely to be carried away by wild screaming, after the fashion which did us all such harm, and not an atom of good, twenty-five years ago. We feel sure that the leaders of the present day will not only benefit by the lessons of experience, but allow common sense to govern their action. It is the height of absurdity to say that Ceylon, at this stage of her existence, should have a Legislative Council entirely independent of the Secretary of State, or that more Ceylonese members should be added to make it possible for the unofficials to outvote the responsible Governor of the Colony and his Executive. That is a state of affairs which no loyal British subject who studies the matter dispassionately, and especially who regards our relation to the Indian Empire, can desire. We have to make the best of our system of Government which —with the vast preponderance for many years to come of a varied and ignorant native population—is the one most suited to our circumstances. But that is no reason at all why we should not offer fight to the utmost of our influence against an excessive military demand if such should be made.

But what is an excessive demand? Let this be carefully considered. No doubt by this time the decision of the Imperial Cabinet, including Lord Knutsford himself, has been taken, and before another month goes by, that decision will, in all likelihood, be fully made known to the local Government. Now, in considering at this end, the amount which ought to be deemed (1) "moderate," (2) "fair," (3) "heavy" but perhaps not worth fighting about, and fourthly, what would be "excessive," it is necessary to refer to the past history of this colony, and the Military Contribution that was paid. From 1868 to 1872 inclusive, Ceylon paid an average of Rs. 1,485,458 per annum on military account. During that period we had the Ceylon Rifle Regiment, who to a great extent performed "Police" duty so far as guards and out-station checks were concerned. Then came the disbandment of the Rifles and the reorganization of the Ceylon Police Force, at a total annual cost of about Rs. 500,000, instead of the Rs. 170,000 which the force had previously cost. At the same time our Military Contribution for five years, 1874 to 1878, averaged Rs. 1,238,933. Next came the years 1879 to 1884, during which our average payment was Rs. 1,144,000 per annum. At the instance of Sir Arthur Gordon, since 1885 we have had a handsome abatement, paying only Rs. 600,000 per annum. For this relief we, of course, owe many thanks; but can it be fairly said that, considering the revival of trade and revenue, this Colony is not able now to pay as much as it did, say, between 1880 and 1884? We fully approve of the Legislative Council fixing Rs. 750,000 as the amount which the Colony might offer to pay—it was only prudent to be on the "moderate" side —and considering the amounts contributed to the cost of fortifications, this sum ought to be sufficient for the current year at least; but for five years from 1892 onwards, we do not see how we could refuse to pay the round million of rupees if such should be the amount actually demanded by the Home Government. Of course, the less we have to pay the better, in view of the many other demands on the local public purse; but, in our opinion, a demand henceforward for a million, in place of Rs. 600,000, would not be "unfair," for even if we add in our "Volunteer" and our "Police" votes, we should not be paying more than we did in 1872. But while we should consider Rs. 1,000,000 as "fair," it is, in our opinion, the limit to which that term can be applied. A demand for Rs. 150,000 more we should consider "heavy"; while if, as one report had it, the levy upon us was fixed at Rs. 1,500,000, it would be distinctly "excessive" and deserving of all the opposition which can be constitutionally offered, even, in the ultimate resort, of the abandonment of their seats in the Legislative Council by the unofficial members, by way of protest. Of course, this step should only be taken when it was finally understood that our counter offer of a "fair" sum would not be accepted. Let us hope, however, that the necessity may not arise, but that the home authorities may be content, at most, with Rs. 250,000 above the sum that our Legislature offered them through Sir Arthur Gordon.

THE ORIENTAL NOSE.

(Madras Times.)

THE Oriental Nose is of different quality from the Occidental Nose. The possessor of the former walks through Indian towns as a philosopher, while the unfortunate possessor of the latter at every step suffers martyrdom. The Oriental Nose has drawn a lot of titillating and tweaking comment, and deservedly so, from a writer in a Bombay paper. He not only pulls the Oriental Nose for its being an uninstructed nose, but pitches into the Oriental Eye, and gives a smart box on the Oriental Ear as well.

Sans ear, sans eye, sans taste,
Sans smell, sans everything,

sums up the writer's description of the Oriental. But it is with his Nose that the writer is now specially concerned. Evil smells, says he, are as naught to it. The line which divides mere smells from stinks appears to have no existence for the ordinary native. Just as he will coolly eat hot spices and condiments, which scorch the Occidental throat, so he will enjoy, and almost thrive upon, smells that nauseate the European. The cause is not far to seek. The Oriental Nose, says the writer, has sunk into its present obtuseness simply owing to apathy and want of energy on the part of its owner. It is too much trouble to remove the cause of smells. It is too much trouble to walk to a distance, to dig a trench, to do anything that one is not positively compelled to do by someone else. A set of ascetics (i.e. persons who have nothing to do but eat to sleep and sleep to eat) were once assembled under the roof of a monastery. One of the number contemplating the rafters in the roof, as he lay stretched on his back after a hearty meal, observed to a companion lying near him, that the beams, in his opinion, were placed too far apart. The other replied, "Why trouble yourself about it, and exercise your jaws in speaking?" The third man remained dumb, fearing to use his vocal organs at all, and dissipate his energy. This is the cream of Oriental philosophy—a perfect quiescence; and it is not difficult for us to see that the evolution of the Oriental Nose has proceeded in some such manner as the writer describes. In the far past, the Oriental Nose was possibly sensitive; but centuries of "pigging it," which was probably brought about by a strict adherence to the tenets of the philosophy of quiescence, have landed it in its present condition; and there is probably no hyperbole when the writer says that "the eye of the native lights up, and his face is absolutely joyous, when he comes into the familiar smells of his village." That the headmen of villages are going to make, under proper guidance and control, sanitary improvements, appears to the writer an absurd and impossible proposition. To the native officials the smells are as nothing whatever. These officials simply are incapable of distinguishing them, physically unqualified to know them, as stinks. To educate the native nose, then, would take years, if not centuries; but who is to take upon himself this function? Is it is the City Fathers? Do they not themselves require someone else to lead them—by the nose?

BENGAL.

(Feb 18.)

THE question of establishing a mercantile Exchange in Calcutta is one that recurs, the Englishman states, with increasing frequency. Already it may be said to have passed the initial stage of common agreement on its ultimate necessity, and to have arrived at one where a reasonable prospectus of the undertaking would receive more than casual consideration from the leaders of the commercial classes. The steady increase of the European commercial population of Calcutta, the growth of the trade, with the greater subdivision of its various branches and their separate direction by specially qualified experts, have made the want of a common daily meeting-place more strongly felt. As we pointed out some time ago, this want has been strikingly manifested by the formation of the many small Associations whose periodical meetings are designed to further trade interests, which would be as effectively served by the institution of daily "high 'Change." We have so often dwelt on the many other advantages which would attend the proposed innovation, that it is needless to reiterate them. The difficulties experienced in the transaction of business in the antiquated fashion still in vogue here are, we believe, generally recognised, and the impression as generally prevails that the close commercial relations now established between the East and the West render doubly desirable the adoption in India of the more expeditious methods of trading which experience has commended to commercial men elsewhere. The erection of a central mercantile Exchange would be a distinct, and we have no doubt a successful, step in this direction.

MADRAS.

COLONEL CHRYSTIE calls attention, in the Madras Mail, to the remarkable cure of lepers that is being effected at Mangalore, South Canara. An Asylum for Lepers was opened there about five years ago, and in June last the Rev. Father Muller commenced to treat the inmates with Count Mattei's medicines. A most remarkable success has resulted. Up till then no remedy had any effect, and twelve cases had terminated fatally. On the occasions of a recent visit there were 33 inmates; many of them had suffered from leprosy for ten years and upwards, and had reached an advanced stage, having lost their fingers and toes. Before admission the cases are all certified to be true leprosy by a Commissioned Medical Officer of Government. The medicines appear to avert the disease at once, though cure is slow. There has not been a single death since the use of the Mattei medicines was commenced, though four patients were apparently moribund when they came under the treatment.

IT is stated that Lady Wenlock will go to Ootacamund in advance of Lord Wenlock, who, it is believed, contemplates a short tour prior to his departure to the Hills. Government House is quite ready, the whole building having been cleaned up. New carpets have been put down in several rooms, and the Military Secretary's and A.D.C.'s quarters have also been attended to, while the Private Secretary's is receiving its final touch.

BOMBAY.

(Feb. 21.)

COLONEL E. C. ROSS, C.S.I., Staff Corps, Political Resident in the Persian Gulf, has been granted furlough to Europe for two years.

THE Reverend W. E. Scott, M.A., Chaplain of Byculla, has been appointed to officiate as Archdeacon and Commissary of Bombay during the absence of Venerable Archdeacon A. G. Lewis, B.A., B.D., on furlough, or until further orders.

THE following appointment is gazetted:—The Reverend F. N. Hill, M.A., Garrison Chaplain, to officiate as Senior President Chaplain, vice the Venerable Archdeacon A. G. Lewis, who will do duty at the Presidency before his departure on furlough.

ANOTHER failure amongst European importers. Messrs. Sallugram Khunnah & Co. suspended payment on Tuesday morning. This firm had been established in Calcutta upwards of forty years, but in Bombay only a year or so. The extent of their liabilities is not known yet, but they are believed to be considerable, the Marwarrees here and in Calcutta being especially interested.

BRIGADE-SURGEON R. GRAY, Inspector-General of Prisons, Punjab, retires on the 3rd April, thus severing a connection with that province extending over a period of twenty-eight years. After officiating as Inspector-General of Prisons on several occasions, Dr. Gray obtained the appointment permanently in September 1884; and it seems to be generally agreed that his administration of the important department thus under his care for over six years has been successful. Surgeon-Major T. E. L. Bate, Civil Surgeon of Delhi, will succeed Dr. Gray.

PROPOSED TESTIMONIAL TO SIR GEORGE BIRDWOOD.

(Times of India.)

A few friends and admirers of Sir George Birdwood met on Thursday at the office of Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, Bart., Hornby Row, Fort, Bombay, to inaugurate some movement to commemorate the connection of that distinguished gentleman with Bombay, and in order to show their appreciation of his continued and beneficent interest in this country and its people since his retirement from India, about twenty-five years ago. On the motion of the Hon. Mr. Fazulbhoy Visram, seconded by Mr. Rowjee Venayek Juggonath Sunkerseth, Sir D. M. Petit, Bart., was called to the chair.

The Chairman called upon Mr. R. D. Sethna to explain the object for which the meeting had been convened.

Mr. R. D. Sethna said a circular had been sent out to the several subscribers and friends of Sir George Birdwood, which must have to a certain extent explained the object for which the meeting had been convened. It was not necessary to give at present the details of Sir George's career while in Bombay, which could be more appropriately done at a public meeting which it was proposed to call at no distant date. It would not, however, be inappropriate to recall a few of the extremely valuable services done by Sir George, not only to Bombay, but all India, particularly because the younger generation might not be aware of those services. Sir George was a member of the Medical Service, but he employed his activity in a good many departments beyond the scope of that service. His great interest in education was recognised by his appointment as Registrar of the Bombay University, to which office he was elected for a second period. As a scientific man he had made his mark in Bombay, his great interest in botany and other branches of medical studies being well known to his contemporaries and also to those who had the good fortune of receiving education at his hands. He was virtually the founder of the Victoria Gardens and of the Albert Museum in Bombay, and his writings on Indian arts which had since died out had not only found their place in the South Kensington Museum and other world-renowned repositories of Europe, but they had been in a great measure instrumental in giving an impetus to the revival of those arts. Ever since his leaving this country, about a quarter of a century ago, Sir George had continued to take a deep and abiding interest in India and its inhabitants. He was always ready and willing to render assistance to all public bodies which had the interest of India at heart. He was again ever ready with his advice to those Indians who sought it in England. Mr. Sethna then informed the meeting that about a hundred gentlemen had already subscribed to the testimonial fund, the total sum amounting to about five thousand rupees. This was only a beginning made by some of his personal friends and admirers, and it was hoped that when the object of the fund was better known larger subscriptions would continue to flow. Although Sir George had left India about a quarter of a century ago he was not forgotten by the people of Bombay, nor had he forgotten them. (Loud applause.)

Mr. J. J. Guzdar proposed, "That this meeting views with approval the steps so far taken to give effect to the general desire of the numerous friends and admirers of Sir George Birdwood, K.C.I.E., C.S.I., LL.D., M.D., to commemorate his long connection with Bombay, and to mark their appreciation of his continued and beneficent interest in this country and its people ever since his retirement from India." He said that though it was now more than a quarter of a century ago that Sir George was in Bombay, he was still very affectionately remembered by the inhabitants of this city for the part he took in the establishment of the Victoria Gardens and the Albert Museum; and also for his long and honourable connection with the University and all educational movements. Shortly after Sir George left India, he (Mr. Guzdar) went to England, and during the last ten years he came more intimately in contact with him, and could say that, unlike most of the Englishmen who returned to England, he continued to take a warm and sincere interest in the prosperity of the people of this country. If any Indian, no matter from what part of India he came, sought his advice and his assistance, it was unreservedly placed at his disposal. If an Indian required anything to be done in the way of promoting his advancement in England, either in the way of study or business, Sir George's assistance was ready at hand. (Hear, hear.) Then again the post he held at the India Office was of very great importance indeed to this country. He was practically the principal official at the India Office, to whom all questions were referred in connection with the productions and manufactures of this country, and he always took care to put the querists in possession of the fullest information sought from him. (Applause.)

Mr. T. J. Bennett, in seconding the proposition, observed that Sir George Birdwood was truly a guide, philosopher and friend to those Indians who sought his advice in England. His knowledge of Sir George's services to Indians was not entirely hearsay, because he had himself seen what Sir George had done for Indians while in London. Instances had come under his personal observation, in which Sir George Birdwood had shown to young Indians in London, who needed help and counsel, a truly fatherly kindness; and this in the most unostentatious way, and with a genuine desire to do good. In this manner Sir George had done many other services to the people of Bombay which could not be too highly appreciated. The old saying, "Out of sight, out of mind," did not apply to Sir George Birdwood. Although he left Bombay about a quarter of a century ago, yet the gratitude and affection of the people were as living and cordial as they were on the day on which he left India. (Applause.) He hoped that the movement, which was a spontaneous one, would commend itself to all—(loud applause)—and when it was brought to the notice of members of the various other communities that the movement was set on foot to do honour to Sir George, all classes of the community, from the highest to the lowest, would be glad to co-operate with them in the work they had in hand. He hoped that the community at large would join them and make the testimonial a great success. (Loud applause.)

Dr. Cowasjee Hormusjee, in support of the proposition, remarked that Sir George while in Bombay was Professor of Botany in the Grant Medical College, and it was he who had taught him that subject, both theoretically and practically, by means of a microscope, and the instructions imparted by him were still fresh in the minds of those who had the rare fortune of being his students. The Victoria Gardens and the Albert Museum would not have existed but for his strenuous and persistent efforts, which were ably supported by the late Mr. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy and Mr. Juggonath Sunkersett. Notwithstanding that he had severed his connection with Bombay, the newspapers kept them informed that he had not ceased to take interest in their city. His services to Indian art, and to those who went to England to study, were simply invaluable.

The proposition was then put to the vote and carried unanimously.

Mr. J. Douglas proposed, "That the subscription list be published and thrown open generally, and that further steps be taken to raise a suitable testimonial to Sir George Birdwood, and that with that view the following gentlemen be appointed a provisional committee with power to add to their number:—Sir Jamsetjee Jejebhoy, Bart.; Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, Bart.; Messrs. Framjee Nusserwanjee Patel and J. Cowasjee Jehanghir; the Hon. Kazi Shaboodin; Messrs. T. J. Bennett and Dosabhoy Framjee, C.S.I., the Hon. Fazulbhoy Visram; Messrs. Harkisondas Narottamdas, R. M. Sayani, F. R. Vicajee, J. J. Guzdar; the Hon. Javerilal Umiashanker; Messrs. J. D. Framjee, A. M. Dharamsey, Shantaram Narayen, J. M. Framjee Patel, Noor Mahomed Jairajbhai Peerbhai, S. S. Bengalee, C.I.E., Framjee D. Petit; the Hon. Justice K. T. Telang; Dr. Lisboa; Messrs. Budrudeen Tyabjee, M. C. Murzban, T. N. Tata, P. M. Mehta, M. M. Bhownuggree, C.I.E., R. D. Sethna, Bhaishanker Nanabhai, Sorabjee Jehangier, B. M. Malabari, K. N. Kabrajee, Darasha R. Chichgar; Dr. Cowasjee Hormusjee; Dr. K. N. Bahadurjee; Mr. Manockjee Burjorjee; Dr. Atmaram Pandurang; Dr. T. B. Nariman; Messrs. Vandrawandas Purshotamdas, Nanu N. Kothare, Raoji V. Sunkersett, T. M. Nathoobhoy, B. D. Petit; and that the following gentlemen be requested to act as Honorary Secretaries:—Mr. T. J. Bennett, the Hon. Fazulbhoy Visram, Mr. R. D. Sethna, and Mr. Bhaishanker Nanabhai." Mr. Douglas said that he had known Sir George Birdwood for the last twenty-five years, and the last time the latter appeared in public in Bombay was at the meeting held in the Town Hall in the year 1869 for the purpose of raising a subscription for a testimonial to be presented to the late Dr. Wilson, who was then living. It was indeed quite remarkable that Sir George should be honoured after he had left India about twenty-five years ago by those who were for the most part natives of this country. He did not think that a more deep and sustained interest was taken in the Indians by any Englishman than Sir George Birdwood. (Applause.)

Mr. Tribhowandas Mungaldas Nathoobhoy seconded the proposition.

Mr. Sorabjee Jehangier, in support of the proposition, echoed the sentiments of the previous speakers.

The proposition was then put to the vote, and carried unanimously.

Mr. J. Cowasjee Jehangier proposed that an account of the subscriptions be opened in the Bank of Bombay in the name of the Secretaries. He hoped that all the friends and admirers of Sir George Birdwood—and their names were legion—would come forward and support the movement.

Mr. Vundrawandas Purshotamdas, in seconding the proposition, said that he knew the family of Sir George Birdwood, who were his tenants. They were all very kind to the natives, and took special interest in their welfare. He (Mr. Vundrawandas) did not think that on such an occasion the inhabitants of Bombay, and for the matter of that the whole of India, should forget the several valuable and enduring services of the late Dr. Bhau Daji—(hear, hear)—who was an ardent friend, admirer, and associate of Sir George in all movements affecting the welfare and well-being of the inhabitants of this country. (Loud and prolonged applause.)

The resolution was adopted.

On the motion of Mr. Sorabjee Framjee Patel, seconded by Mr. Nanu N. Kothare, a vote of thanks was accorded the chairman, and the proceedings terminated.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAUB.

(Feb. 19.)

FROM the annual report of the North-West Provinces and Oudh Provincial Committee of the Dufferin Fund, it is clear that, while comparatively little now remains to be done in the way of building, there is in almost every case need for further effort as regards that provision of funded capital. The branches, it is complained, are still too much subject to the chance of subscriptions, and an appeal is made to the benevolence of wealthy native gentlemen to assist in placing the venture beyond the risk of failure from inadequacy of funds.

"ALL that can be said at present is that under sympathetic guidance there is hope of attaining a fair measure of success." Such is the official report on the working of Local Boards in Berar. Only a fair measure of success—a hope of that, and the hope dependent on sympathetic guidance! It seems that the Berar Rural Boards Law came into force on the 1st of January, 1886, but owing to difficulties connected with the rules, the Boards themselves were not established till well on in 1889-90, and, except perhaps in the principal town of Akola, very little work was done. Matters have since been looking up in most of the districts, and taluk meetings have been regularly held, while the members "in some cases have begun to evince an interest in their duties," which affords the gleam of "hope entertained." The introduction of the scheme has, however, imposed considerable extra work upon the Commissioner and the District Officers, and another hope is expressed that the pressure will be diminished when the initial difficulties have been overcome.

THE Indian Daily News asked the pertinent question, When is the Government going to appoint an Inspector-General of Volunteers? There are opportunities in Calcutta alone, asserts our contemporary, for the improvement and strengthening of the local Volunteer force, which would enable a capable man to justify his appointment within six months. Many things want looking into, and many need altering. But at present it is nobody's business. The system is practically allowed to work itself anyhow. And in many respects it works very badly, as, indeed, is only to be expected of any system without a responsible head.

THE Civil and Military Gazette, discussing the question whether the British Agent at Cabul is anything more than an empty figure-head upon a political sham, says:—We are told that the British Agent only knows so much about Cabul affairs as the Cabul authorities choose to let him know; and that he is little else than a forwarding agent of trivial court news and diplomatic messages. Does he really protect the interests of his Government and the subjects of Government in Cabul? If he does, he would seem to be an adept at making bricks without straw; for the accounts which reach us of the way in which Cabulis or natives of India are frightened into keeping away from the British Agent must put it almost entirely out of his power to learn anything of the kind of cases which demand his interference. A number of arrests made of persons who paid calls at the British Agency have, we are told, produced a very natural reluctance on the part of Cabulis and Indians to fall into the same danger; and, if this is true, the British Agency, as it now exists in Cabul, is a very poor monument of the expenditure of money and blood by which it was secured. Quite apart from political considerations, seeing that Cabul is the centre of a large transit trade, British subjects have a right to demand perfect safety of their persons and property there, if the State is under any form of regular government, but doubly so when the State is under British protection.

NATIVE PRESS.

THE NATIVE PRESS ON MR. BRADLAUGH.

The Bombay Samachar says:—If Mr. Bradlaugh had lived but two years longer, he would have by that time made his way up to the highest pinnacle of politics. By his death England has lost one of its most useful and devoted citizens; but the loss to India is simply irreparable. There will probably be many found to fill the void caused by the death of the deceased in a country like England; but it will be very difficult for a very long time to come to find another man to take his place in connection with India.

The Jame-Jamshed remarks:—The dreadful demon of death has at last removed the true and faithful friend of India. It will be long before India forgets the loss caused by Mr. Bradlaugh's death. The greater is the misfortune of India that he should be removed by the hand of death at almost the very time when his presence was necessary in Parliament for the good of this country. India has truly become a widow, having lost its lord and protector.

The Akbari-Soudagar says:—By Mr. Bradlaugh's death India has lost its best friend. There can be no two opinions that if his life had been spared, he would have conferred greater and weightier benefits on India. It is India's misfortune that he should be cut off in the very prime of his life.

The Gujrat Durpan remarks:—The shock which was first experienced by us on hearing the news of the death of Mr. Bradlaugh has by this time given way to profound grief and calm resignation. The past, the present, and the future of Indian hopes and aspirations are for the time being submerged in one overwhelming catastrophe—for Mr. Bradlaugh's death is no less than that. It has disconcerted our plans, overturned our calculations, and paralyzed, for the present at least, all our efforts to emancipate ourselves from the stupefying influence of inaction. We have lost him when we most wanted him. Fawcett and Bright had found a worthy successor in him. The Indian work sat easy on his protean shoulders. It is involved in the dark mists of distant futurity on whom his mantle will descend. The tears of blood which a whole nation has shed, and is shedding over his grave, will not give us back one like him.

The Satyavakta remarks:—Oh, unfortunate Ind, thy best friend, thy protector, that brave, that honest, that truth-loving and truth-speaking Englishman, has breathed his last. He has not died the death of a common citizen. He has left a fragrance behind him, which will penetrate through every household, and keep fresh and green till such time as his deeds will be found recorded in the history of India, and of the country in which he took his birth and which he had served as few serve their country.

The Hitechhu says:—Our blood runs cold; our fingers become benumbed; and our pen refuses to act while recording the death of India's best friend. Ill-starred and unfortunate India has had many misfortunes, but none like the loss the whole country bemoans. The wounds caused by battles, by dire famines, by oppressions generally, might and could be healed; but certainly not the wounds caused by the death of one who was the protector of the people from famines, who was against the fighting of battles, and who controlled by the strength of his mind and indomitable will those who ground down and oppressed the dumb millions of this country.

The Deshi Mitra says:—It is our ill-luck, our great misfortune, that India should lose its best friend. Although the deceased was an agnostic, we sincerely wish that in return for his great and meritorious services rendered to this poor country the Almighty will be pleased to send him to heaven. India's loss is simply irreparable.

HINDUS AND MAHOMEDANS.

(Muhammudan.)

Now that political differences, the responsibility for which is none of ours, exhibit an evil tendency to grow in intensity, the results of which cannot but be detrimental to all interests involved, it is very desirable that, for one thing, certain matters creating chronic ill-feeling between ourselves and the Hindus should be attended to and removed. Sectarian animosity in its worst phases is happily unknown, it is true, but there are observances, such as kine-slaughter, obtaining among us at our great annual festival, and the processional music played by Hindus before our mosques, which very often and very needlessly lead to serious infractions of the public peace, which, by a better respecting of the "give-and-take" principle, might easily be obviated. So far as our co-religionists are concerned, we should earnestly advise an abandonment of any and all practices which, while in themselves too unimportant to call for perpetuation, go against the grain of Hindu religious susceptibilities. The only one thing that lies at the root of periodically recurring street brawls between Musulmans and Hindus is cow-sacrifice, which, as has been more than once urged, does not form an essential part of our Id observances. It is lamentable that an issue of no moment should be allowed to disturb the accord and amity that should characterise the relations of two large and important sections of Her Majesty's subjects.

One of the lesser proofs establishing the divine wisdom of the book of our rule is the wide discretion it allows in connection with this very sacrific al rite, which is adapted not ony to the means of worshipers, but established on a basis so ample as to admit of its being modified to meet all mutations of time and place. Here in India this discretion should be availed of to the utmost. Placed as we are in the midst of a mixed population, the preponderating constituent of which is Hindu, and which invests the cow with an ascription of divinity that renders it "sacred," we should see to it that we do not, by bisson and impolitic persistence in perpetuating a usage which might well be allowed to fall into desuetude, allow a sore to run that had better be cicatrised.

Advice such as this needs no extraordinary emphasis when addressed to our educated minority, every man of which sees and laments the preventable disorders that cover the community with deserved discredit. The difficulty lies with our lower orders, who have come to regard cow-killing as an integral part of the faith they hold, and a ceremonial detail to be rigidly observed where pecuniary means are not prohibitive. To add to the account, it is deemed an inalienable class privilege, the exercise of which is associated in the mob mind, always dense, with sundry other crystallised symbolisms of racial ascendency. This combined view constitutes a tenet of the 'submerged ten,' and is hard to demolish, as is every prejudice into which enters a large admixture of those two most powerful motors operating upon human thought and action—pride of race and respect for creed ordinances that are believed to have divine sanction behind them. But insuperable as the barrier may appear, it must crumble away before the force of example supplemented by precept, both of which should be supplied by our educated minority, the leaven that operates on that doughy mass called the people who need, so far as is attainable, to be drawn abreast of the times by the influence of education, that conservative-crusher, which has pulverised many a grey and seemingly adamantine conceit, long clung to tenaciously by the unreflecting crowd.

THE EURASIAN PROBLEM.

THE Calcutta press has again been discussing the question which has for years been pressing itself upon every serious student of Indian social problems—of what is to be done to ameliorate the condition of the Eurasian population in the capital. It has been a subject of discussion at a Diocesan Conference at the Presidency city, but little was done beyond establishing, from statistics, the fact that there is a vast and increasing community in a state of helpless, hopeless pauperism, which is bringing difficulties and disgrace to our British rule, but which the authorities in India seem powerless to grapple with. The leading journal of the Presidency says that the question is one of the very highest importance, and, at the same time, it presents a problem of such magnitude that the danger is lest the difficulties deter those in authority from confronting it till it has attained almost appalling dimensions. Paradoxical as this looks, it is fairly true that for many years successive Viceroys and their Councillors have looked at the difficulty only to leave it alone, with perhaps the makeshift excuse that the threatened danger would not come to a climax in their day. The way in which the difficulty has hitherto been met has been by the doling out of official or private funds by way of charity, but this has not stayed the plague of pauperism, but rather helped to spread it. "One of the saddest features," says the Englishman, "of the present state of things is that all the remedies used to abate the evil are intended rather for the present than for the future, and that the consequences cannot but be most serious, for an evil of this kind is sure to gather strength if not effectually checked. It is only too true that all the splendid charities and endowments of Calcutta, for it is exceptionally rich in these respects, are only able to alleviate present distress; they can do next to nothing to remove its causes or to prevent it in the future; meanwhile it grows year by year, and each generation leaves to its successor a heavier legacy of misery, vice, and confirmed habitual pauperism." This is terribly true, but the writer has no practical remedy to suggest. He wanders away to the origin of the evil—the Eurasians being the indisputable product of our presence in India as its rulers: "They are part of the Nemesis which overtakes us for the splendid Empire which the world envies. Such a population was an inevitable necessity of that rule, and it is partly made up of direct descendants of the members of the Civil and Military Services, the sons being in the Uncovenanted Service, the grandsons clerks, the great-grandsons still lower in the social scale." The position of the present generation of Eurasians has been getting worse every year. The appointments referred to, and which, in the earlier days of our rule in India, were so open to them, are now being daily closed by the competition of the Natives to whom we have given an English education, and who are ready to serve in every office at rates which would not keep a Eurasian and his family beyond starvation point. The Archdeacon of Calcutta at the Diocesan Conference referred to, observed that among the difficulties to be contended against in dealing with the question was this one, that the Eurasians, instead of looking upon manual labour as a dignity, considered it a degradation. The Calcutta Statesman makes the same complaint. "Instead of being taught that hard work is honourable, and dependence on charity dishonourable, the class look down upon manual labour, and regard the assistance received from the State or from private friends as a matter of right." This is a very old charge against this unfortunate class, to which, however, one of them replied: "Eurasians are not ashamed of manual labour; it is only menial labour which they eschew, for the simple reason that the remuneration offered is inadequate." It requires but little experience of India to recognize the truth of this. Even in the most menial post the Native would beat the Eurasian as the cheaper competitor; and in all other posts the English-speaking Babú is pushing the Eurasian to the wall. The Englishman points out clearly enough how this is being done:

"With their great talent for assimilating English law, the Bengalis have driven the Eurasians almost entirely out of the Subordinate Judicial Service, and much limited their sphere of work as pleaders and law agents. They have also almost monopolized the Subordinate Executive Service, and they are day by day gaining on the Eurasian community in the various Secretariats and Public Offices in Calcutta. Most appointments in the Police and Opium Services are still, it is true, reserved for persons of European habits, but they are mostly recruited from England. Persons of European habits are still preferred for the Customs and Preventive Services, and, in more than their due proportion, in the Postal and Telegraph Services, while in the offices located at Simla, the domiciled whites and Eurasians have still an advantage owing to the climate. But even in these the tendency is everywhere for the Native to gain, and well-educated whites and Eurasians find it more difficult in each generation for the sons to attain to the father's income and position. The result is a general move downwards: the first class is compelled to take some of the work from the second class, who drive out a certain number of the third, and so on, till a point is reached at which there is no lower level that yields a livelihood, and those ousted are added to the ever increasing army of professional and habitual paupers."

But in offering these facts, the writer offers no suggestion as to how they can be met. He thinks that some check ought to be put on the class in the matter of marriages, which tend to increase the numbers of these paupers, and the Statesman would have the Government bring in some "stringent measures." This is all the assistance which the English local press seems able to offer towards the solution of one of the gravest problems under our rule in India. If the difficulty cannot be met in India, is there no possibility of attention being called to it in England? Here is a fine opportunity for any would-be Indian Reformer M.P. to do a really good work by showing how this growing trouble can be dealt with and overcome.

BOTH in the Miranzai country and the Black Mountain some more lasting memorial of our visits will be left this time than a few charred villages. In Miranzai, roads will be made along the Samana Range, and at two points, selected by the military authorities, posts will be constructed and garrisoned by about 400 men. Roads and posts will be similarly made in the Black Mountain, which will take its place among the protected points of the frontier. These works will in both cases, we believe, be under Mr. Fenner, whose coolie corps did such excellent service in the previous Black Mountain Expedition. The works will be neither easy nor safe; and however disproportionate the rewards respectively bestowed upon R.E.s and C.E.s may be said to be, no one can say that the Government gives too small a share of work and danger to the latter.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

SIR G. GREAVES, Commander-in-Chief, Bombay Army, after an outpost and inspection parade of the two Sind Horse Regiments (5th and 6th Bombay Cavalry) at Jacobabad, on Feb. 9th said he was thoroughly satisfied with all he had seen. The men were of fine physique, and the horses of a very good stamp; and the two regiments, he considered, looked fit for any service they might be called on to perform. This praise from so keen a critic as Sir G. Greaves was much appreciated by the British and native officers present.

THE Commander-in-Chief and staff left Quetta on the morning of Feb. 17th, but were detained at the first tunnel below Mangi, owing to a fall of rocks, which broke two rails on the line, and delayed the train four hours. On the 18th his Excellency inspected the site for a rest camp at Reti, and is understood to have approved of the arrangements proposed for trooping at that place.

"Now that the leave season is coming on again, it may not be out of place," thinks an up-country paper, "to revive the question of ninety days' privilege to England being allowed to count from and to the port of embarkation. The concession is not a very great one; it would cost nothing to Government, would be a boon to many officers, and could be easily safeguarded from abuse. It was under the consideration of the military authorities last year, and it was then understood that in all probability it would be granted; but up to the present time no orders have been issued on the subject. With troops serving as far away as Bhamo in one direction, and beyond the Suleiman in another, not to mention remote stations in Assam, it is obvious that many officers cannot reap the full advantage of ninety days' leave when it is dated from the day on which they leave the station wherein they are serving. Even in the case of Calcutta an officer loses a week at least of his three months in journeying to and from Bombay, whereas his lucky brother stationed at almost any cantonment in the Western Presidency gets practically his full ninety days. There should be no handicapping of this kind. Let the leave count from and to the port of embarkation, converting it into furlough in cases where it can be shown that the new privilege has been abused."

THE question has lately been raised whether the garrison of Fort Kangra—now consisting of some thirty Goorkhas—should be withdrawn, and the fort handed over, like the old Mooltan Fort, to the civil authorities. As, however, the civil authorities have no use for the fort, and as it is convenient for the detention of political personages—such as the Khan of Agror, now located there—it has been decided that it should remain in military possession.

THE 1st Burmah Regiment, under command of Colonel MacGregor, will shortly proceed to Maymyo. Owing to no other regiment being sent to Mandalay in its place, however, a wing will probably be left behind at the shore barracks. General Wolseley, accompanied by Major Curtis, will also go to Maymyo almost directly on inspection duty.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL G. J. SMART, R.A., commanding the Madras District, will soon have to vacate his command, having been promoted to the rank of Major-General. Madras, being only a second-class district, is reserved for a Colonel, who, on appointment, attains the local rank of Brigadier-General. General Smart was born on the 8th December 1833, and became Colonel in the Army in July 1881; and in the Royal Artillery in October 1882. He was placed on the unemployed full-pay list on the 1st October 1887. He was appointed to command the Madras District in December 1887. He was present during the Indian Mutiny of 1857-58, and at the actions of Chanda and Sultanpore; siege and capture of Lucknow; actions of the Barree, Sinee, and Nawabgunge. He was twice mentioned in despatches, and received the medal with clasp. His name ought to appear among the earliest of the new appointments to the Order of the Bath.

LAW REPORT.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

SRIMANTU MALLIKARJUNA v. SRIMANTU DURGA AND ANOTHER.

This was an important petition to review and rehear an appeal after a final judgment of the Judicial Committee had been pronounced and confirmed by Her Majesty.

Mr. Rigby, Q.C., and Mr. J. H. A. Branson appeared for the petitioners; Mr. J. D. Mayne in opposition to the petition.

The litigation in the matter commenced in 1880, when the respondents filed a plaint in the Subordinate Court at Krishna, in the Madras Presidency, for the partition of a large and important estate in the possession of the appellant, who claimed that it was impartible. The Subordinate Judge decided that it was impartible, and dismissed the suit, but he declared the right of the respondents to a third share, amounting to Rs. 1,806, of certain moneys involved The High Court of Madras reversed that decision, and held that the zemindary was partible according to the ordinary law. As to the moneys in question, the parties, by consent, accepted a decree for Rs. 2,210 instead of Rs. 1,806 awarded by the Court below. On an appeal to the Judicial Committee last year their Lordships overruled the judgment of the High Court and declared the estate impartible. Her Majesty's confirmatory order in the usual course followed that decision.

Mr. Rigby, Q.C., now asked for a rehearing of the appeal notwithstanding that judgment and order on the ground that since the decision of their Lordships had been pronounced certain documents, having, as was alleged, an important bearing on the case, had been discovered in the custody of the board of Revenue at Madras, and also that the effect of their decree was to override the judgment by consent of the parties for the 2,210 rupees instead of the 1,806 previously awarded.

Lord Watson said an order of that Board reported to and confirmed by Her Majesty could not be opened up simply because new evidence was forthcoming. A rehearing of an appeal once decided by the Judicial Committee and confirmed by Her Majesty could only be ordered in the event of some misprision resulting—as, for instance, the terms of the decree adjudicating something which was not in the view of the Board, or which they had not had the means of deciding, or where the decree did not carry out the terms of the judgment. In this instance the litigation had been proceeding for ten years, and it seemed incredible that documents of any moment —especially those in the custody of a public office—could only have been discovered after three judgments had been pronounced.

Lord Macnaghten reminded counsel that the case was argued at great length, and every point of importance was discussed by counsel on both sides with great minuteness and ability.

Mr. Rigby said he was not engaged in the case when it was before their Lordships, but his clients had made an affidavit that they did not know of the existence of these documents until September last, he believed, and he, having perused them, certainly considered that they opened up new matter. He cited the case of "Agnew v. Dunlop," in which, after a decision of the House of Lords in 1823, the case was remitted to the Court of Session in Scotland for certain inquiries to be made.

Lord Watson said the second point in the petition as to a variation between the award by consent and the decision of their Lordships restoring the decree of the Subordinate Judge only involved a difference of something like £30, and it might be, if they re-opened the matter on that ground, the amount would be more than swallowed up in the costs of the proceedings.

Mr. Mayne, on the other side, was not called upon.

Lord Watson, in giving judgment, said:—Their Lordships have come to the conclusion, so far as the petition refers to the production of new evidence and a rehearing of the case on its merits, that the application is altogether incompetent. So far as regards the other point, they are conscious that there is a question, but, looking to the small amount involved, they do not think they would be warranted in recommending Her Majesty to remit this case for a rehearing. In the circumstances they would make no order as to costs

NEWAZ KHAN AND ANOTHER v. ALAM KHAN.

This was an appeal from a decree of the Chief Court of the Punjab of the 12th of December 1887, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge of Bannu.

Mr. C. W. Arathoon appeared for the appellants.

The case was recently argued before a Board consisting of Lord Watson, Lord Hobhouse, Lord Morris, and Sir Richard Couch, when judgment was reserved.

Lord Morris, in now delivering their Lordships' judgment, said the appellants were two of the sons of Maddat Khan, who died in 1883, leaving four sons and the children of a fifth son him surviving. The respondent was one of the sons. The appellants claimed two-fifths of their father's property, movable and immovable. The movable inheritance was not in dispute, the appellants being clearly entitled to two-fifths therefore. They would be also, primâ facie, entitled to the same proportion of the immovable property. After their father's death the appellants, for themselves and purporting to be guardians of the sons of their deceased brother, entered into an agreement with the respondent to appoint a private arbitrator for a decision of the dispute relating to their father's lands and the office of lambardar, and Mian Sultan Ali, who was intimately acquainted with the circumstances of the family, was accordingly appointed as the private arbitrator, the parties agreeing to accept whatever he might decide in respect of the dispute between them. Soon afterwards the arbitrator made his award, whereby he found, in effect, that the appellants were not to get any land of the deceased except the portion given to them by him in his lifetime, and that the respondent should remain the owner of the whole of the remaining landed property and fill the office of lambardar. The respondent applied to have the award filed, and against an order of the Commissioner to that effect the appellants in the present suit appealed. The question was what was the legal effect as against the appellants of the arbitrator's award. The Subordinate Judge decided that the award was invalid, as the arbitrator had misconducted himself in making the award contrary to the custom of the parties and the Mahomedan law. and because he was an intimate friend of the respondent. The Chief Court of the Punjab reversed that decision, and held that the award was valid as against the appellants and dismissed their claim in respect of their father's landed property. Their Lordships concurred in the judgment of the Chief Court. Having overruled the argument that the dismissal of the claim of the respondent to file the award had the effect of a res judicata, their Lordships said the appellants next relied on misconduct of the arbitrator as invalidating his award. There was no independent case or testimony to sustain or, indeed, to give colour to such a charge. They merely relied on the award itself as showing such partiality and making such statements as to amount to misconduct. That contention seemed to be mainly founded on an entire misconception of the agreement to arbitrate. It was not an agreement that the arbitrator was to be controlled in his decision by any custom or Mahomedan law or otherwise. It was an agreement to refer the matter in dispute generally to his decision. He appeared to have decided according to what he conceived was the wish and intention of the deceased Maddat Khan. He was within his right in so doing. Some criticisms had been offered on some of the reasons assigned by the arbitrator for arriving at his decision. Those criticisms, even if justified, could not amount to any misconduct. The arbitrator appeared to have acted on the broad view of giving effect to the deceased's intentions. He was selected by reason of his knowledge of the circumstances of the family. Their Lordships saw no ground for imputing misconduct to him, and they would humbly advise Her Majesty to affirm the judgment of the Chief Court of the Punjab.

(Present—LORD WATSON, LORD HOBHOUSE, LORD MORRIS, and SIR RICHARD COUCH.)

SURENDRA KESHAV ROY v. DOORGA SUNDARI DASSEE AND ANOTHER.

This was an appeal from a decree of the Appellate Court of the High Court of Bengal (consisting of the Chief Justice and Justices Wilson and Prinsep) of April 27, 1887, reversing a judgment of Mr. Justice Morris, of that Court.

Mr. Rigby, Q.C., and Mr. C. W. Arathoon were counsel for the appellant; Sir Horace Davey, Q.C., Mr. Cowie, Q.C., and Mr. Doyne for the respondents.

The suit related to the property of the late Rajah of Andool, who died childless in 1879, leaving two wives, one of whom (the senior) had since died, and the other was the respondent, Doorga Sundari Dassee. The rajah was possessed of a considerable estate, lying partly within and partly without Calcutta, which brought in an annual income of over a lakh of rupees. On the day before his death he executed a will by which he dedicated all his estate to his family idol, and directed his wives each to adopt one son, to be shebaits or custodians of the idol, and on their coming of age to make over the dedicated property to them, from which they were each to receive 1,000 rupees per month. Each of the widows accordingly adopted a son, and the appellant was the person adopted by the senior widow. The junior widow and her adopted son were the respondents. The questions at issue in the suit were the validity of the double or simultaneous adoption, according to Hindoo law, and, if invalid, the respective rights of the parties, in the circumstances of the case, in the property left by the rajah.

INDIAN ART.

Says a writer in the Nineteenth Century:—"India, and especially Southern India, is now going through an Anglo phase. It affects plainness of design, in great part because with less effort the same price can be obtained. Plainness is all very well for use, but the æsthetic and artistic side cannot be developed by perpetually looking on plain, uniform things. Plain paper is useful to write upon, but it is the writing on it that makes the impression; and so it is that the lota (vase or cup) with the parrot on it, or the lota with the hamsa (or swan) on it, first attracts the child's attention, then charms it, and finally excites its wish to imitate it. We Europeans set an example of simplicity of attire, of plainness in objects of use—glass, crockery, plate, &c.—but we are the first to patronize art, and to inculcate it in our children, and to beautify our houses. Even in India some of the houses are museums of lovely things; but as far as finding original art in India, there are only the temples left where we can re-dip in the beauties of extinct Indian art. Here each door is coated over with beautifully carved brass; lamps supported on the heads of damsels and held up by the mouths of gryphons meet the eye; brass images staring life-like at the worshippers, holding swinging lamps between their well-formed fingers, a thousand beautiful temple utensils all exquisitely carved, testify to the religious fervour and the practised talent of the worshipper. It is the same spirit that inspired the Christian painters of ancient Italy, and as that fervour dies, so art dies."

THE "TIMES" ON INDIAN AFFAIRS.

The offer of the Maharajah of Cashmere and his brother to volunteer for the Black Mountain Expedition, and to place the troops of the State at the disposal of the British Government for that service, is highly significant. The unsatisfactory condition of Cashmere lately formed a source of anxiety and of self-reproach to the Government of India, and led to its intervention as the suzerain Power responsible for the welfare of the people. The present loyal offer of its Prince may be regarded not only as a token of acquiescence in the measures taken by the British Government in the recent past and as a pledge of a better state of things in the future, but also as an indication of the form of amende honorable which the Indian feudatories now regard as the most acceptable to the ruling Power. It is a matter for some regret that, as telegraphed by the Times' Correspondent in Calcutta, the Government, while cordially acknowledging the godwill of the Maharajah, felt constrained to decline his offer. The reasons given for the refusal—namely, that the expedition was but a small affair, and that the constitution of the force had already been decided upon—are in themselves unexceptionable. But not the less must the policy of refusing repeated offers of patriotic aid from the native chiefs act as a discouragement to the desire which they now show in every region of India to take a more active part in the defence of the Empire.

That policy of refusal, however, is unavoidable at present. Lord Dufferin, with Sir Frederick Roberts as his Commander-in-Chief, probably went as far as is prudent for some time to come by their organization of Imperial contingents from the native States. The great problem as to how far it may be safe to trust to the newly awakened sense of solidarity alike among the Princes and peoples of India, is a problem which can only be solved by time. In this, as in other matters, Lord Dufferin and Lord Lansdowne have taken an important step forward, and one which profoundly affects the future of British rule in the East. That the advance is neither so rapid nor goes so far as the feudatory Princes desire is the result of statesmanlike caution, not of defective sympathy. Meanwhile, the position of the native chiefs is disclosing difficulties unknown in the days of the East India Company. They have ceased to be semi-foreign allies or alien subordinates, and have taken their place as an incorporated feudatory nobility under the Queen. As such they naturally desire to find outlets for the new energies and aspirations which English education is developing among them. At present such outlets can scarcely be said to exist. The statutory Civil Service in India is only open to British subjects; the native chiefs and their sons and nobles cannot obtain commissions in the British Army; and they are caring less and less for employment in the inactive armies of their own States.

This great question of finding a career for cadets of the Indian ruling houses and young nobles who have grown to manhood in the schools for chiefs initiated by Lord Mayo or under the manly training of British officers appointed as their tutors or guardians received the earnest attention of the Duke of Connaught while Commander-in-Chief in Bombay. His Royal Highness went so far as to favour the formation of an Indian Sandhurst, or native military college, and it is understood that his views were personally shared by Lord Reay, as Governor of Bombay, and by Sir George Chesney, the military member of the Viceroy's Council. But the difficulties of such a plan seemed to the highest military authorities in India insuperable at present. The existing system of promoting native officers from the ranks has long been regarded as essential to the morale and efficiency of the Indian army of the Queen. To bring in young chiefs or nobles over the heads of these tried and deserving soldiers appeared to strike at the root of that system. Moreover, the difficulty of highly-trained British officers serving under the orders of the Indian nobles who might thus be appointed at once presented itself. Nor could the fact that such nobles would enjoy large private incomes, and might become examples of extravagance to the younger British subalterns, be disregarded. On the other hand, it was apparent that the existence of such a feudatory element in our native army might be useful in checking that too close camaraderie between the native officers and their men, which has always been recognised as a source of danger, and which has on more than one occasion proved a peril to the British authority. The alternative proposal of a system of effective Imperial contingents commanded by the chiefs and nobles of the native States seemed, on the whole, a preferable plan for giving an outlet to the new spirit of energy and loyalty which has been awakened in feudatory India. Meanwhile, it is the young chiefs and nobles who have profited most by English education, and who are the highest products of the new order of things, who most keenly feel the absence of a career. It is the very men of whom we feel most proud whose aspirations we are least able to satisfy.

The serious and complicated difficulties that now attend every effort to deal with Indian questions are being forcibly illustrated by the agitation which has arisen out of Lord Lansdowne's Bill to deal with the age of consent. There can be no question whatever as to the genuine character of the disquiet, amounting in some sections of the native community to alarm, caused by this measure. On the other hand, there can be equally little doubt as to the firm support which it is receiving from a very large proportion of the Indian races. The really important feature of the case is that Indian public opinion is no longer governed by the old sharply-defined distinctions of caste. The Brahmans have ceased to act as a compact and strongly-united body. Indeed, the differences which exist among the Brahmans in regard to child-marriage and the age of consent have been brought out more clearly during the discussions than the differences of the technically lower castes; for on this occasion, as on all similar ones, the Brahmans still come to the front as the true intellectual leaders of the Indian races, and their differences stand out in a stronger light than those of their more quiescent following. No higher authorities against the proposed measure could be cited than the great Brahman landholder, the Rajah Prasi Mohan Mukharji, and Sir Romesh Chandra Mukharji, formerly a Judge of the High Court of Judicature in Bengal. But, on the other hand, no higher authorities could be cited in its favour than Mr. Justice Telang and Dr. Bhandarkar, Professor of Sanskrit in the Poonah College. Mr. Justice Telang has long been known (quite apart from his pre-eminent legal reputation) as a Brahman of Vedic learning, who has never departed in the smallest particular from that life of pious observances which still secures the highest veneration from his countrymen. Dr. Bhandarkar's authority as an interpreter of the sacred texts would not be called in question, even by those who differed most widely from him. The same divergence of opinion among the Brahmans has made itself apparent in the most orthodox native States, and in the most powerful centres of Brahmanical influence in the British provinces—from Indore to Benares.

The truth is that the old division of native opinion, on the basis of caste, has given place to a new division of native opinion, on the basis of party. This new growth of Indian parties, with its tendency to break down and supersede the old demarcating lines of caste, forms the supremely important disclosure made by the discussions at present going on in India. Under the Company, the far-reaching and inscrutable Vehmgericht of caste seemed to be the greatest of the many dangers which necessarily surrounded our foreign rule. The story of the greased cartridges proved in a memorable way how real that danger might become. It would be foolish to suppose that dangers will ever cease to surround our position in the East. The growth of parties in India will bring its own difficulties and perils. Difficulty and danger are the fundamental conditions of Anglo-Indian rule. But, compared with the old dangers of caste, dangers always present though seldom seen, dangers which the keenest Western intellects felt themselves powerless to fathom, and entirely failed to grapple with, the new dangers of party are, on the whole, less to be feared, because they are more easy to be understood.

There is now, alike in social and political questions in India, a party of reform, standing visibly face to face with a party, not indeed of inaction, but of resolute conservatism. The more these conflicting parties make themselves heard, the more trouble they will give to British administrators, but the safer it will be for British rule. The silence of a people, however convenient for officials, is a perennial source of danger to government. Knowledge has its perils, but they are preferable to the panics of ignorance. Only a couple of months ago the chief engineer of the Krishna river bridge in Madras had to deal with one of those sudden panics, now so rare, but which were familiar to Indian officers as recently as the census of 1872. A serious riot broke out without a moment's warning last Christmas Day between the Punjabi workmen employed on the Krishna bridge and the local inhabitants. Its origin proved to be a terror, which had suddenly taken possession of the country people, that the Government, when commencing a public work of that class, gives orders to secretly collect children's heads, as a propitiatory sacrifice to the river deities.

A popular panic of this sort has become in the India of our days a mere curiosity of local superstition. Before the spread of English education such panics were moving forces among the dense, incomprehensible masses of the people. Sometimes they took the form of an apparently aimless peasant rising, at others of a tribal outbreak or a city riot, until they finally culminated in the "chuppatties" and greased cartridges of 1857. The annual Political Congress and the native Press, with their widespread local organization for giving utterance to dissatisfaction or complaint, may sometimes ruffle the equanimity of our Indian officials; but the full light of even an unfriendly public opinion is safer than the secret working and unaccountable impulses of ignorance and superstition. It might seem to Goethe that, in time of peace, the true patriot was the man who swept clean the pavement in front of his own door and minded his own business. But such patriotism, however suitable to the quiet Weimar of a century ago, is impossible amid the stirrings of a nascent sense of nationality, whether in the new empire of Germany or of India.

During the past fortnight a curious historical contrast has been presented to the Asiatic races. At St. Petersburg the spiritual head of the Orenburg Mahomedans was petitioning the Czar to graciously permit the Koran to circulate in Russia without being mutilated by the expurgating scissors of the Censor of the Press. In London there was published the new and magnificent edition of the Rig-Veda, with all the accessories of Clarendon Press typography and Professor Max Müller's scholarship and patient research. Professor Max Müller's first edition, with its Sanskrit commentary, was a twenty-four years' labour, rendered possible by the enlightened liberality of the East India Company. His present edition is a memorial alike to his own indefatigable labour, and to the munificence of the Maharajah of Vizianagram. That nobleman has, at his own expense, undertaken to do over again from more complete materials the great task which the East India Company initiated; and Professor Max Müller's new edition of the Rig-Veda now renders available to the Hindoos their most sacred text in its perfected form. The two large quartos already issued form the most important contribution to Oriental scholarship which has been made during the past year.

It is to be regretted that the editor should have found it necessary, and should have deemed it his duty, to record in his preface the widely different spirit in which his labours were regarded by the directors of the East India Company and by the present India Council, to the disadvantage of the latter. The time is assuredly coming when even the most elaborate works of Indian scholarship and history will be produced without State aid. But that time has not yet arrived. The action of certain of the colonial Governments and of the Royal Colonial Institute in such matters was based upon the honourable example of the East India Company, and that example might sometimes still be followed with advantage at the India Office. There can be no doubt that such a work as Mr. Greswell's recent History of the Dominion of Canada, produced under the auspices of the Royal Colonial Institute, is an additional bond of union between the mother country and her dependencies across the sea. There can be equally little doubt that it is a matter for public regret that a veteran scholar like Max Müller should find it needful, in the preface to his monumental work, to disclose a sense of soreness at the treatment which he has received at the hands of the India Office.

The difficulties which for a time seemed to threaten the next Oriental Congress appear to be now overcome. Those difficulties arose out of some laxity in the original constitution of that body, complicated, perhaps, by some hastiness in the closing proceedings of the last congress at Stockholm. The executive committee are now able to intimate that the ninth Congress of Orientalists will be held in London in September 1892. Lord Northbrook, the president of the Royal Asiatic Society, has consented to become one of the vice-presidents, and the printed list of his colleagues and the executive staff includes the most distinguished Orientalists and Indian authorities in Great Britain. The habitual caution characteristic of Lord Northbrook forms a guarantee that the dangers which for a time threatened the continuance of the International Congress of Orientalists must have been tided over before he took decisive action in the matter. The Royal Asiatic Society studiously preserved a neutral attitude during the crisis, but the circular of the executive committee now issues from the official residence of that society.

The promises of adherence and support already received from foreign scholars give reason to believe that the ninth congress in London next year, under the presidentship of Professor Max Müller, will probably be the most influential assemblage of Oriental scholars from all parts of the world that has ever met.

MR. HUME AND THE CONGRESS.

The following letter has been forwarded to us, says the Pioneer, as a further illustration of those Congress tactics with which the Indian public have now become familiar. It was apparently issued with Mr. Hume's covering letter to the reply furnished by the Viceroy's Private Secretary in the matter of the attendance of officials at the Congress. It runs as follows:—

URGENT.

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL

And for your own information only:

Not under any circumstances for publication.

To

THE SECRETARY OF THE CONGRESS COMMITTEE.

DEAR SIR,

I enclose herewith . . . copies of papers, which I have sent for publication to all newspapers.

They are of vital importance, and embody a charter of liberty of opinion and action in Political matters for which we have long been calling.

I trust that your committee will use their best efforts to spread a knowledge of Lord Lansdowne's letter in every village. Nay more, Native Chiefs, many of whom are favourable to our cause, but have hitherto abstained from pecuniary assistance, or have contributed only under promise of secrecy, owing to the pressure put on them by the officials, should all be furnished with copies; and every committee should send such to every Chief and Noble, with whom in consequence of friendship with any of his officials or any other cause, they are in any degree in touch.

It cannot now be too widely made known, or too emphatically pressed home, that the Viceroy has formally declared that the Congress is a perfectly legitimate movement: that every one not a Government official, is perfectly free to join it; and that all officials are explicitly enjoined not to impede the movement in any way, and not to put any pressure on anyone to induce them to abstain from aiding or joining it.

Of course, it will now be one of your most prominent duties to watch closely to see that His Excellency's orders are loyally carried out, and to bring at once publicly to the notice of the local administration any infraction of the just and statesmanlike rules laid down by the Viceroy.

It seems almost needless to point out that His Excellency has taken a great, decided, and unusual step to secure justice for us; that he has done so in the teeth of strong bureaucratic opposition; and that it is our duty, while absolutely abstaining from any note of triumph over the officials —from any word that may embitter further a feud that we can now afford to ignore and suffer to fade into oblivion—to show in the most unmistakeable manner how highly we appreciate Lord Lansdowne's courageous vindication of popular liberty of speech and action in political matters; and how grateful we feel to him for this renewed charter of civil liberty.

I think public meetings should be called and thanks publicly voted to him; but at these the utmost care should be taken that nothing is said to wound the feelings of our late opponents (and persecutors in many cases)—the local officials. Really Lord Lansdowne, if the whole facts could be stated, has behaved most nobly. Let us show that we can behave with equal nobility.—Yours obediently,

ALLAN O. HUME,

General Secretary, Indian National Congress.

POPULAR BANKS.

A series of valuable articles has been published in the Madras Mail on the subject of "Popular Banks for India." In the Madras Presidency, as in other parts of the country, the hopeless indebtedness of a large portion of the population to money-lenders is a source of much distress, and a bar to industrial and social progress. The writer of the Mail's articles has been devoting attention to considering possible means of remedying this state of things, and affording the people opportunity and encouragement to escape from the thraldom of the Bunnia and the Marwari. Village Banks of the character suggested, if they could be brought into anything like general existence, and with the simple inexpensive organization described in these articles, would undoubtedly represent a great boon and assistance to the mass of the Indian industrial population. The chief difficulty appears to us to lie in the initiative. How are the intelligent men of village communities to be brought to appreciate the advantages of the scheme, and to exert themselves as a labour of love for the benefit of their ignorant countrymen? Here is a matter in which an organization like the National Congress might be capable of effecting more solid good in promoting progress and prosperity than is ever likely to result from the political agitation to which it devotes so much earnest attention and very considerable sums of money.—Indian Daily News.

W. H. ALLEN & CO., LIM., LONDON AND CALCUTTA.
PUBLISHERS TO THE INDIA OFFICE.

The Calcutta Review.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storms of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S 'FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know what it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

HEADACHE AND DISORDERED STOMACH.—"After suffering nearly two and a half years from severe Headache and Disordered Stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your 'FRUIT SALT,' and before I had finished one bottle I found it doing me a great deal of good, and now I am restored to my usual health; and others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, ROBERT HUMPHREYS, Post Office, Barrasford."

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHER SALINES.—"Dear Sir,—Having been in the habit of taking your 'FRUIT SALT' for many years, I think it only right to tell you I consider it a most invaluable medicine, and far superior to all other saline mixtures I have ever tried. I am never without it, as I find it possesses three most desirable qualities—pleasant to the taste, promptly efficacious, and leaves no unpleasant after-effects. I do not wish my name to appear, but you are welcome to make use of this testimonial if it is of service.—A DEVONSHIRE LADY. Jan. 25, 1889.

The Secret of Success.—Sterling Honesty of Purpose. Without it Life is a Sham!—A new invention is brought before the public, and commands success. A score of abominable imitations are immediately introduced by the unscrupulous, who, in copying the original closely enough to deceive the public, and yet not so exactly as to infringe upon legal rights, exercise an ingenuity that, employed in an original channel, could not fail to secure reputation and profit."—ADAMS.

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

Caution.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked Eno's "Fruit Salt." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of Weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storms of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, MARCH 17, 1891.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 28th February; from N.W.P. and Madras to the 26th February; and from Bengal to the 25th February.

IT is rumoured that the Viceroy visits Burmah next cold weather.

THE ordinary business of the Legislative Session will be concluded by March 20th, thus clearing the way for the presentation of the Budget Statement.

THE Census was taken on Thursday night in the city of Bombay. An army of 2,500 enumerators was engaged in the task, which was carried out successfully.

MEETINGS in connection with the Age of Consent Bill are still being held in various parts of the country. At Poona a serious disturbance occurred, several promoters of a meeting held in favour of the measure being assaulted by the oppositionists.

MR. J. N. TATA, a well-known citizen of Bombay, has started an elaborate scheme for sending young Parsees of ability to Europe to complete their studies.

IT is stated that the 24th and 25th Bombay Regiments have been selected for conversion.

THE annual contribution of three lakhs of rupees which the Government of India have expressed their willingness to give towards sanitary improvements in cantonments will be devoted to waterworks, several schemes being now in hand.

THE capture of Malik Makhmudin having been effected, the Miranzai Field Force is to be broken up. The 29th Punjab Infantry is to remain behind, pending the building of posts on the crest of the Samana Range and the completion of roads.

SEVERAL members of the Viceroy's Staff have been the recipients of handsome presents from the Cesarewitch as mementoes of his Imperial Highnesses's visit to Calcutta.

SERIOUS disturbances are reported from the Wuntho territory. The Bahmouk police post, fifty miles west of Katha, was fired into on the 13th. A mounted escort was also fired upon the following morning. The post of Kyautspintha on the southern border of the Wuntho State was attacked on the 15th, and Kawlin, another post in the same district, was attacked and partly burnt on the 16th. Four police were killed, and eight wounded. A large body of troops has been sent to co-operate in the district, and will be commanded by General Wolseley.

THE Tibetans seem to be coming to their senses at last. Trade by the Sikkim route has steadily revived, and in the spring it is expected that it will show still further progress.

BABU JOTENDRONATH PALIT, Barrister-at-Law, has been suspended for six months by the full bench of the Calcutta High Court for quarreling with a Pleader in the Magistrate's Court at Monghyr, and the Pleader was suspended for one month. The Chief Justice termed the occurrence indecent and disgraceful. The Barrister had previously been fined Rs. 500 by the Monghyr Magistrate for contempt of court, and the Pleader Rs. 25.

A NOTE issued by the Government of India, in the Finance Department, states that it appears from communications received by the Government of India from some of the Trades Associations, that it is not generally known that the English duties on gold and silver plate, whether imported or of English manufacture, no longer exist, and that no assay is required of certain descriptions of Oriental plate by the law as it now stands. No Indian plate is subject to duty on import into the United Kingdom, and only certain kinds of such plate are subjected to assay.

SIRDAR ALA-ULLAH KHAN, British Agent in Afghanistan, will vacate his post shortly, after six years' good service in Kabul. Sirdar Mahomed Afzul Khan, a statutory Civilian in the Punjab and Chief of the Gundapur tribe, will probably succeed him.

AT the meeting of the Viceregal Legislative Council, Feb. 27, the Merchandise Marks and Port Acts Amendment Bills were passed, and reports presented on the Merchant Shipping and Easement Bills.

SIR ROBERT SANDEMAN arrived in the steamer Patrick Stewart at Kurrachee on Feb. 24, having concluded his tour in the Mekran country.

H. E. SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS, the Commander-in-Chief in India, arrived in Calcutta on Feb. 22, and will leave Calcutta for his spring tour on the 19th or 20th March.

THE Viceroy has been pleased to appoint Deputy Surgeon-General A. F. Bradshaw, Medical Staff, to be an Honorary Surgeon on his Personal Staff.

THE Boungshe Expedition, under the command of Colonel Mainwaring, 30th Garhwalis Regiment, reached Haka on Feb. 22. There was not a single casualty among either the combatants or non-combatants.

THE Amir is now so completely recovered that he has resumed the personal direction of affairs at Kabul.

THE special grant for mobilization purposes this year will be devoted mainly to completing the reserve of clothing for the troops and followers.

THE Commander-in-Chief was to inspect the Presidency Volunteers on March 7. The annual presentation of prizes by the Viceroy will probably be on March 21.

MR. J. WOODBURN, Chief Secretary to the N.W.P. Government, has been appointed an additional member of the Legislative Council in the place of Mr. Quinton. Mr. W. C. Benett will officiate as Chief Secretary during Mr. Woodburn's absence in Calcutta. Mr. Quinton has left Calcutta for Assam.

THE Raja of Bhinga will succeed the Hon. Mahomed Ali Khan as native member for the North-West Provinces in the Imperial Legislative Council.

MR. ARTHUR STRACHEY, Official Reporter to the Allahabad High Court, takes seven months' leave from April 1. Mr. Wilfred Porter will officiate in his place.

MR. STEPHENSON FINNEY, Deputy Manager of the Eastern Bengal Railway, will suceeed Lieutenant-Colonel G. F. Boughey, R.E., when the latter proceeds on furlough. The appointment, the Pioneer says, is an excellent one, as Mr. Finney was engaged in the construction of the line, and possesses an unrivalled knowledge of its needs and resources.

CAPTAIN CHENEVIX TRENCH, at present Assistant to Colonel Ross, Political Resident, Persian Gulf, will be posted to Bussorah, Lieutenant Beville, who has been temporarily officiating in the Zhob Valley, going to Bushire.

LIEUTENANT ARCHER, First Assistant in Beluchistan, will join the Foreign Office as Assistant Secretary, vice Captain Cornish, on furlough, his post at Quetta being filled by Captain Stratton, now at Bussorah.

M. SIBOUR, late Director of the Interior, Guiana, formerly Secretary-General of Pondicherry, has been appointed Director of the Interior of the French Colonies in India. He arrives in April.

M. NOUIT, late Governor of Pondicherry, has been transferred from Martinique as Governor to Guadeloupe.

THE price of opium still rules very low in China, and the consequence is that the export trade from India continues sluggish. The opium revenue on the whole is likely to be about 40 lakhs below the moderate figure of the Budget estimate. On the other hand, there will be a saving of some 10 lakhs or so on the expenditure side; so that the net loss will be under 30 lakhs at the close of the current financial year.

THE new copper wire has just been completed between Calcutta and Bombay along the line of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway. Messages at once poured in as fast as the operators could receive and signal them, showing how the line is likely to be appreciated by the public. The total length of the circuit is nearly 1,300 miles, and the Indian Department can now boast that it works the longest aerial circuit in the world.

NOTES.

ALTHOUGH the agitation on the Age of Consent Bill still goes on in India, and opinions in England and India differ regarding the Factory Law Amendment Bill, the Viceroy, according to the latest telegrams from Calcutta, has expressed the hope that at the sitting of his Council on Saturday next "all the business" will be disposed of. It is satisfactory to learn that no new taxation or fresh financial legislation will form part of the Budget which is to be brought forward next week.

"IRON in abundance, and gold," found by General Wolseley in his ride through the Wuntho territory! This is satisfactory news, too; but it is not satisfactory to hear that the native troops in Burma, who have to undertake difficult and hard work, are being starved and made sick through Commissariat neglect. The Times Rangoon correspondent wires that the medical officers have complained; but it is well to wait for confirmation of sensational reports sent by that gentleman.

THE "National Christian Anti-Opium Convention" had a three days "innings" last week to denounce the wicked Indian Government on account of its connection with this terrible drug. The speakers were all eloquent in the old way against the old sin of the opium traffic with China—"a criminality from a Christian standpoint," one of them said, "before God and man." All who spoke seemed to be ignorant of the fact, or to ignore it, that China was making a good deal of opium on its own account in its own territory, and all the blame was laid against the Indian Government for forcing the "pernicious poison" on a "bland and child-like" people.

DR. JAMES L. MAXWELL, M.A., M.D., remarked that "a mountain of vested interests, a long-standing evil custom, a mountain of gold connected with the iniquitous opium traffic, appeared in the human eye to be seemingly insurmountable difficulties in the way of removing this gigantic sin. The encouragement of those fighting against this evil was in the words of the Lord, 'Have faith in God.'"

SIR JOSEPH PEASE, M.P., was, as to be expected, prominently pushing in the same direction. He also looked upwards for the ultimate salvation of the Government of India from their opium vice. He quoted the words of the poet: "Though the mills of God grind slowly, they grind exceeding small," and he "believed that India would be financially richer if the opium traffic were swept into the sea. What they gained by cash in the trade they were losing—aye, and losing two-fold—as a result of the demoralization of the people. If the Indian Government decided to rid India of this traffic, it would not be many years before the whole position of the country would be far better than it was now."

This is no doubt Sir Joseph Pease's honest opinion, but it would be much more to the help of the cause he advocates if he would show the Secretary of State and the Government of India how the financial difficulty is to be met. That is the practical and only way of looking at the matter.

The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian hears of a project which is even now a marvel, and only a few years ago would have been an impossibility—the formation of a "Hindoo tourists' party." It is being organized concurrently at Allahabad and Calcutta, for visiting "Europe, America, China, Japan, and the Straits." The "Hindoo noblemen and gentlemen" who are invited to join the party—which appears to be entirely under native management—are assured that they will be able to travel "in the Hindoo style," an expression which is evidently intended to allay fears that caste rules will be in danger of violation, and that a corresponding degree of penance will be enacted previous to the recovery of caste privileges on the return of the travellers to Hindostan.

The "enlightenment" which the above would appear to indicate, does not however seem to have reached to the Hindú community of Agra, where it is reported that the high-caste gentlemen will not use the water of the new waterworks for drinking purposes, on the ground that persons of all castes will be entitled to draw from the same source, and as the hands of a man of low caste may touch the stop-cock, the water in it will become defiled and unfit for high-caste use. Prejudice dies hard; but as the Hindús of Agra exerted themselves strongly to secure the new waterworks supply, it is somewhat inconsistent to refuse now to use it. But this is exactly what the Calcutta Babús did in their city, but they got over their qualms of conscience at last, and so will their Agra friends.

COLONEL CHRYSTIE calls attention, in the Madras Mail, to the remarkable cure of lepers that is being effected at Mangalore, South Canara. An Asylum for Lepers was opened there about five years ago, and in June last the Rev. Father Muller commenced to treat the inmates with Count Mattei's medicines. A most remarkable success has resulted. Up till then no remedy had any effect, and twelve cases had terminated fatally. On the occasions of a recent visit there were 38 inmates; many of them had suffered from leprosy for ten years and upwards, and had reached an advanced stage, having lost their fingers and toes. Before admission the cases are all certified to be true leprosy by a Commissioned Medical Officer of Government. The medicines appear to avert the disease at once, though cure is slow. There has not been a single death since the use of the Mattei medicines was commenced, though four patients were apparently moribund when they came under the treatment.

THE Civil and Military Gazette, discussing the question whether the British Agent at Cabul is anything more than an empty figure-head upon a political sham, says:—We are told that the British Agent only knows so much about Cabul affairs as the Cabul authorities choose to let him know, and that he is little else than a forwarding agent of trivial court news and diplomatic messages. Does he really protect the interests of his Government and the subjects of Government in Cabul? If he does, he would seem to be an adept at making bricks without straw, for the accounts which reach us of the way in which Cabulis or natives of India are frightened into keeping away from the British Agent must put it almost entirely out of his power to learn anything of the kind of cases which demand his interference. A number of arrests made of persons who paid calls at the British Agency have, we are told, produced a very natural reluctance on the part of Cabulis and Indians to fall into the same danger; and if this is true, the British Agency, as it now exists in Cabul, is a very poor monument of the expenditure of money and blood by which it was secured. Quite apart from political considerations, seeing that Cabul is the centre of a large transit trade, British subjects have a right to demand perfect safety of their persons and property there, if the State is under any form of regular government, but doubly so when the State is under British protection.

THE Panjab is advancing rapidly in a variety of ways, and year by year fresh evidences of intellectual activity are showing themselves. The present mail brings a translation of the Post Office Manual into Urdû, done by a young Panjâbî named Bâbû Hîra Lâl. He is an energetic officer of the Government, who has already attracted attention by his translantions into English from Gurmukhî; but on the present occasion he has reversed the process and converted the whole of an English Departmental Manual into Urdû for the benefit of those who are unfamiliar with the English language. He has done his task very carefully, and there can be no doubt that his book will be practically useful.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 13.

The Black Mountain force commenced a general advance from Derband yesterday morning in two columns.

The river column was fired upon from the opposite bank of the Indus.

The first official report of this year's wheat crop in Bengal states that the total area sown, though less than an average of the preceding five years, yet exceeds the area under wheat in the past year. The prospects of the out-turn per acre are somewhat better than last year, and an average, or little less than an average, crop is expected.

The export of wheat from Calcutta during the coming year, so far as depends on imports from Behar and Bengal, will probably somewhat exceed those of the present year.

MARCH 15.

At a meeting of the Legislative Council, on Friday, the Viceroy stated that the next meeting would be on Thursday, when the Age of Consent and Factories Bills would be passed. The final meeting will be held on Saturday for the purpose of winding up the work of the Session. The Budget will be published this week, but, as no new taxation is contemplated, there will be no opportunity, as the law now stands, for discussing it in Council. The Viceroy expressed a hope that an Indian Councils Bill would be passed during the current Parliamentary Session, and that after this year it would be possible to lay a financial statement before the Council, even when no project of legislation was involved.

Since the beginning of March there has been very unusual weather throughout Bengal and the North-West. It has been extraordinarily cold and stormy with heavy rain, and in some places there has been hail. This is causing some anxiety, not only as regards the immediate effect on the crops, but also because in former years similar conditions at this season have been followed by retardation of the south-west monsoon and a failure of the harvest.

The Black Mountain force has now crossed the frontier, and the next few days should show whether it is likely to meet with serious opposition. It is reported that the Mada Kheyl and Bonerwal tribes are preparing to resist.

BURMA.

RANGOON, MARCH 13.

General Wolseley held a review and durbar at Mansi, which was well attended. He thence marched to Banmauk, where he arrived yesterday, accompanied by Colonel Clarke, with 200 of the Oxfordshire regiment and military police.

The Tsawbwa is reported to be hiding on the Taungtalon mountain. Captain O'Donnell, with a strong column, is marching southward from Mogoung to co-operate with Colonel Macgregor, commanding General Wolseley's northern column, in attacking the Tsawbwa.

General Wolseley has despatched another column to attack the force which burned Homalin.

MARCH 15.

Homalin has been re-occupied by the column sent there by General Wolseley. On its approach the rebels fled. The mounted military police, commanded by Lieutenant Loch, went in pursuit. Both the Tsawbwas are reported to be at Taungtalon Mountain. Three columns are operating against them. General Wolseley has returned to Wuntho town, having ridden 250 miles in 16 days through the Wuntho territory. The country he has traversed is reported to be promising, with iron in abundance, and some gold is also found.

So far, the troops under General Wolseley continue free from sickness. The rations supplied to the native troops forming the numerous small columns operating against the Kachyens and other tribes are very insufficient. Nothing has been provided for the men, who on these expeditions are exposed to much fatigue and hardship, except the ordinary rations, principally consisting of flour or rice. Other supplies can neither be purchased nor procured by the soldiers. Frequent representations have been made on the subject by the medical officers. The mortality and sickness amongst the native troops in Burma are largely due to insufficient nourishment.

PERSIA.

TEHERAN, MARCH 14.

The official gazette, Iran, published here, announces that Mirza Malcolm Khan, late Ambassador in London, is deprived of his titles, honours, and rank.

ALLEGED OVERWORK IN INDIAN MILLS.

(Madras Times.)

What overwork is there in Indian mills, taking these on the whole? Long hours? Yes, long hours of easy labour demanding no effort, putting no strain upon the endurance of the work-people, no strain, that is, to compare with that which they have to undergo, and have had to undergo, when doing their customary work, be this agricultural or industrial. Manual industry has been driven out by power. The hand-loom is idle; the spinner who formerly did his work by hand in his own hut, has now to work in the huge mill, where he has but to feed and to help machines. But this does not make his actual work heavier. As one of a family of hand-spinners or weavers he was accustomed to long hours of weary work, borne with patience and cheerfulness. Does he work harder now than he did then? Does he earn less? Honestly answered, these questions are the key to much of the nonsensical twaddle that is talked about work in Indian mills; and if a further key be wanted, philanthropists may study the records showing how long mill-hands in India remain at work, not only as numbered by hours per day, but as counted by years in a lifetime. And they may also study the history of those hands after they quit mill-work—how they live on the fruits of their past industry, fruits which would not have been so great had the men worked shorter hours per day with no increase of application. How early the mill-hand retires from hard work, first to rely upon his children, and subsequently to settle down "in his own country," is well known to all who have studied the subject of Indian factory labour.

The strain upon a mill-operative's powers cannot be reckoned solely by its duration. More depends upon its intensity; yet no man acquainted with the style of work done in Indian mills will fail to acknowledge that the word "intensity" can hardly be applied to the efforts made by any Indian mill-hand. It is true that the operatives have long hours, as shown by paper registers; but there is many an idle moment, many an idle series of minutes indeed, and throughout there is no such display of concentrated attention, of a genuine attempt to do much work in a short time, as is visible amongst first-class English mill-hands. Let the work of the two be compared, as well as their hours. Estimate the exact average out-turn per hour of attendance as per register in England and India, and compare the result. Then it will be seen that the comparison of hours alone is unjust and misleading. Take off spare moments and calculate actual working hours. Then offer Indian operatives piecework wages based upon this calculation, and the foundation will be formed of a series of figures very different from those that have been put before the British public by puppets whose strings have been pulled from Lancashire. Any comparison that seeks to be fair must be thorough, and we can hardly imagine any better scheme for instituting such a comparison and for getting this question of overwork in Indian mills finally settled, than a really close inquiry by a Commission of practical men. We have had one such Commission by men whom we are compelled to consider unpractical in regard to this particular subject, and its report is apparently mistrusted in England. What we would suggest is that a fresh Commission should be formed, to include a British medical man from the manufacturing districts, an Indian medical man, and two or three practical spinners, masters and men, from Lancashire, and the same number from India. This would probably result in a searching inquiry, and the resultant report would be above suspicion of partiality or prejudice.

We would urge that the suggestion that such a Commission should be appointed should come from India. In the sight of the whole world she has been charged with "sweating." It is small satisfaction to her to turn upon her accuser and tell him that he should look first at home. Far better were it if she boldly attempted to establish her case instead of waiting for her jealous rival to take fresh steps. Lawyers may say that it is difficult to prove a negative, but if this can be done by the simpler process of establishing a positive, the difficulty is removed. Indian mill-owners have but to show exactly the intensity, as we find that we must call it, as well as the duration, of work, in order to convince Lancashire men that their charges are unfounded. And the proof of the intensity can, we think, be sufficiently given by means of a statement of the average out-turn for work per man, per woman, and per child in an hour. Lancashire spinners may be left to make for themselves whatever allowances may be necessary for the difference of physique between the Hindu and the Englishman; in doing this, however, they will have to bear in mind that whereas the mill-operative in India is a fair average specimen of his race, his counterpart in England is nothing of the kind. However he may be treated now, his parents and grand-parents were not coddled and cosseted in the olden days. They were "sweated," half stifled, and confined, and their children have now to pay Nature's heavy bill in the shape of enfeebled constitutions and stunted growth. This is a matter which may also give a useful hint to Indian masters, for they should be anxious to show that they have no desire that future generations should bring against them similar charges to those that have been frequently brought against bygone generations of employers in Lancashire. It is unnecessary to make a great display of humanitarianism, though the milk of human kindness among Anglo-Indian and Indian mill-owners compares better with that of English mill-owners than does Indian cow's milk with English. All that is needed is that Indian factory-owners should show that they want nothing from their operatives beyond a fair day's work for a fair day's wages; that they are not lending themselves to "sweating," and are not taking an unfair advantage of any plethora of supply. Lancashire has felt the mischievous results of workmen's unions, yet she is going the right way to work to introduce the same evil into India. In this, at least, she is neither philanthropic nor charitable.

EXPORT OF CEYLON TEA.

(Advocate of India.)

The Export Returns for 1891 are now all but complete, and will, we believe, says the Times of Ceylon, be issued by the Chamber of Commerce shortly. Meanwhile our own figures—checked with those of the Chamber—for tea may be given. The total export of our staple product, when all shipments are included, comes up to as much as 46,901,554 lb., that is all but 47 million lb., or nearly 5 million lb. in excess of Mr. H. K. Rutherford's estimate. Indeed, the amount of our out-put for 1890 is so large that we are inclined to think that both Mr. Rutherford and Mr. Scovell have understated the probable export for the current year. However, we will deal with this matter separately in a day or so. In the meantime, it is interesting to note how rapidly our trade has been expanding with such countries as Australia, America, Africa, and Germany; and for the sake of comparison we append the figures for each during the past two years, as follows:—

Australia	1,120,094	2,559,901
America	42,252	204,223
Africa	14,047	42,382
Germany	39,969	68,604

Though our direct trade in tea with these places is still small, it shows great possibilities in the future. Already the amount taken by the Australian Colonies is respectable, and, given only larger sales in Colombo, the export thither during the current year should rise to really large proportions, whilst we can rely upon an increasing shipment to America now, so much advantage being derived from direct shipment thither owing to the new Tariff Bill. The imports of Ceylon tea to Marseilles, however, show no increase, nor, so far as we are aware, has there been any growth in the figures showing the import from Great Britain. In fact, the French do not seem to take to tea-drinking at all, in spite of the advertisement secured by the Ceylon kiosk at the Paris Exhibition. However, all our efforts cannot be successful; and we much fear that the money expended in advertising Ceylon tea in France has been thrown away. Germany seems a much more promising field, to say nothing of Russia, where a large and increasing demand is sure to spring up for our best classes of tea.

THE U. C. S. PENSION FUND.

(Englishman.)

At first sight the accounts of the Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund, for the Year 1889–90, which were laid before the meeting held on Saturday, compare unfavourably with those of the preceding year. There is a decrease in the Widows' Branch of Rs. 1,22,061, and in the Children's Branch of Rs. 73,139. The difference is explained in two ways: first, by the small advance in the liabilities on account of pensions during the first two years of the triennium, and the large increase in the last year; and secondly, by the fact that the number of subscribers has not materially increased, while their average age and the liability for contingent pensions has been greater. The reaction, the Actuary states, is not more than might be expected in the insurance of contingent risks. The total surplus under both branches now stands at Rs. 17,36,806. The Actuary has expressed the opinion that the divisible proportion of the surplus might be raised from 20 to 25 per cent. without endangering the safety of the Fund; but as this might result in largely decreasing the surplus in future years, the Directors have decided to adhere to the 20 per cent. limit. The sums divided in the current year, namely, Rs. 2,43,722 in the Widows' Fund, and Rs. 1,42,679 in the Children's Fund, yielded an abatement at the rate of 3 per cent. on the former, and 3·7 per cent. on the latter. During the year there were 66 new admissions, and 85 applications for increased provision, against 53 and 94 respectively in the previous year. On the other hand, there were 41 deaths of subscribers against 28, and the withdrawals altogether numbered 73, reducing the total to 1,775, which was five below the number of members on the rolls in 1889. Mr. E. H. Lloyd, who has long been a subscriber to the Fund, made an excellent suggestion at the annual meeting, to the effect that a memorial should be raised to the late Mr. D. W. Madge, who had done a great deal for the Fund during a period of forty years. The proposal was to found two scholarships, in the Calcutta Free School, to be called the David Walter Madge Scholarships. This would enable the Directors of the Fund to help the son or daughter of one of its members, where a compassionate allowance was insufficient to provide for a sound education.

THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

It is true that the new Royal Warrant amalgamating the three Staff Corps will help to pave the way for the introduction of the four army corps scheme; but we think that this was not the real object in view of the proposers of the amalgamation. We believe the idea originated with the Government of India, and was prompted by the fact that the local commanders-in-chief have, during the last three or four years, refused the services of officers for duty with corps under the direct control of the Supreme Government. Of course, we mean by refused that, when an officer had been asked for, the reply was that his services could not be spared. The corps under the Government of India, however, have to be officered, and as these corps are open to officers of all three Staff Corps, the field of selection is wide enough to permit of the best men being appointed. The majority of these corps, too, are frontier corps, which makes it all the more necessary that they should always have their full complement of officers. Again, these corps are nearly all known as what are called "crack corps"; and the competition for appointment thereto is, therefore, keen. We have not yet seen the terms of the new Royal Warrant, but we presume that the supreme military authority in India will have the power to post an officer to any corps, irrespective of presidency. If this be so, and the amalgamation of the three Staff Corps is something more than a nominal arrangement for the time being, we anticipate that the officers of the present Bombay and Madras Staff Corps will be much more contented than now with the distribution of the best regimental appointments. At any rate, the prospects of a promising officer will not be retarded by the fact that he belongs to a certain presidency, and is, therefore, ineligible for a particular appointment.

INDIAN CEMETERIES.

The article in the Indian Church Quarterly on cremation suggests some thoughts about our cemeteries in India. There is a practice, almost universal, of burying in masonry or "pucca" graves. All except the very poorest people do this. It is a custom which is everywhere, on sanitary grounds, objectionable as delaying the natural processes by which the body returns to dust, but in India this is especially the case. We hope that, and a careful reading of Dr. Plummer's article, may induce those whose example would be most influential, to think of others even in their own grief, and to discourage in every way using coffins but the simplest, and any graves but what are known as "kucha" graves. Not only would a very dangerous and insanitary state of things be lessened, but much needless expense would be saved to those who can ill afford it, but who are unwilling even to seem to be lacking in respect to their beloved dead. It may be well to remind people that it is not at all necessary to have a "pucca" grave in order to erect a monument, as the Government regulations as to foundations are quite effectual to secure stability and permanence.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE POLICE.

(Pioneer.)

As the work of the Magisterial and Judicial Courts depends upon the police (for the police supply the grist for their mills) the danger of having an overworked and worn-out officer at the head of the district is evident. Single-handed, or with the doubtful help of an inexperienced assistant, he has to superintend the work of from five to twelve hundred regular police, and from three to four thousand rural police. Nothing is done in India without the assistance of the police—death-rates, crop-returns, famines, irrigation, census work, even agricultural experiments are included in their extraneous duties; nothing is too big or too small to be handed over to the police, and the District superintendent is responsible for everything, although the magistrate is virtually his superior officer. If he makes a mistake he must expect no mercy; every portion of his work must be able to bear the most searching inspection. Any petty case that occurs in his district may prove to be the seed from which a vast undergrowth of false accusation and trouble may spring up. He needs to walk warily, and be ready with an answer concerning the most trivial occurrence. He is not only responsible for his own work, but for that of all his subordinates, many of whom are inefficient and require very close supervision. The matter of Leave and Pension Rules has been thoroughly threshed out by the Parliamentary Committee of Inquiry, with the result that two years' furlough in twenty-five years' service is now allowed to count as service. But this concession, to be of any value to the services to whom it is granted, must be accompanied by monetary concessions, such as will enable the officers to avail themselves of it. It is not much use giving a man leave for the express purpose of recruiting his health, if he is too poor to take it; and many officers who suffer seriously from overwork are afraid to say so, for fear of being made to take leave. Sick leave—or what may be termed compulsory leave—generally involves the impecunious police officer in debt and difficulty. A police force that is under-officered and underpaid cannot meet the requirements of the time, and to raise the standard it will be necessary to raise the expenditure. A scheme was proposed a short time ago for drafting young civilians into the police force. Such a scheme could only be successful if the pay and prospects of the civilian members were made equal to what they would be if they remained in their own service. The efficiency of the police would be seriously affected by constant importations of new men, who would serve in it only as long as it suited them. They could not be expected to remain in it unless sufficient inducement was held out to them.

THE Australian Irrigation Colonies (Chaffey Brothers) offer a pleasant occupation, a healthy life, a cheerful home, a soil of unequalled fertility—producing by irrigation results unparalleled in the annals of Horticulture—comfort, civilization, and material prosperity combined. They consist of half-a-million acres, in the sunny and salubrious climate of Victoria, and South Australia, on the great River Murray, which affords an abundant supply of fertilizing water for the Irrigation of Vineyards and Fruit Farms, and for the production, in assured quantity and excellence, of Grapes, Oranges, Lemons, Olives, Apricots, Figs, and other Fruits (already so successfully grown in Australia), by Cultivators with large and small Capital, holding from Ten to Eighty Acres and upwards. The Wines and Fruits of Australia are now in extensive demand in British and Colonial Markets, and there is a practically unlimited field for such production under most profitable conditions to the Settlers. Matthew Vincent, 35, Queen Victoria Street, E.C., from whom all information, &c., may be obtained, also an illustrated folio descriptive work, price 4s., post free.—Advt.

LEPROSY IN THE PUNJAB.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The Leprosy Commission, which will visit the Punjab towards the end of this month, will find several leprosy centres or asylums in the province to afford them material for the study of the disease. The largest is at Tarn Taran, fourteen miles from Amritsar, near the famous Sikh tank, a bath in which is credited with the power to cure the disease, but in reality is probably one of the means by which the disease is propagated. The virtues of the tank acted as the original attraction, and the municipality of Amritsar now maintains about 200 pauper lepers in an asylum there. There is also a leper village close by, and a large number are scattered over the town. There is another holy tank in the Amritsar district at the temple of Baba Bir Singh where leprosy is cured! and the estimable old Baba (and veritable bishop) has always a large family of these unfortunate creatures. There are leper asylums in the Jullundur, Sialkote, Umballa and Rawalpindi districts, and a large number of lepers are scattered over the country in the vicinity of the low hills. Lepers, although outcasts from general society, freely intermarry among themselves, and beget large numbers of children, very few of whom escape the disease. Do they acquire it by heredity or by one of the many means by which contagion can be communicated to them during long intercourse with their diseased parents? It is probably not generally known that lepers are in their natures great misers, and out of a stipend of Rs. 3 a month given them in an asylum wherewith to procure for themselves the necessaries of life, they often hoard up a large part and starve themselves. Among these, of course, the ravages of the disease make rapid strides as compared with others who are well fed and well cared for. Lepers are also much given to trade, and even in leper asylums they rear large numbers of goats, fowls, &c., so that it is to be feared that the products or the flesh of these are very often consumed by healthy persons at the risk of contracting the disease.

VOLUNTEER OFFICERS IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

In England it is not an uncommon complaint on the part of Volunteer officers that the demands upon their purses are out of all proportion to the recognition received at the hands of the Government and the public for the work they do. The result is that a sufficient number of officers cannot be obtained for the various corps, and that the military authorities consequently have harsh things to say about the incomplete training of the men. In India the latter charge cannot be made, for the percentage of non-efficients in the ranks is very small indeed, and the corps as a rule drill well and have a very high figure of merit on the range. But Indian volunteers feel that they are not encouraged to the extent which would make their position assured as auxiliary troops, and they have some grounds for this belief. They and their officers alone know how difficult it is to keep a corps "going," to get a good muster on parade, and to force the drones in the ranks to finish their musketry course in time to earn the annual capitation grant. The Volunteer officer in England may grumble at the expense his position causes him, but he little knows the sacrifices which his brother officer in India has to make. When a commandant out here in less than seven years spends Rs. 18,000 on his battalion, and one of his company commanders follows his example by devoting Rs. 1,000 annually to the benefit of his men, it cannot be said that Indian volunteering has no pecuniary responsibilities. There can be no selfishness in sacrifices of this kind, and the Government would do well to be generous to those who discharge their voluntary duties without regard to their private interests. Sir Auckland Colvin hinted the other day that compulsory military service might have to be imposed on the Anglo-Indian and Eurasian population if they held aloof from the volunteer movement. The idea has been put forward before and has generally been approved by military officers, who consider the European garrison in India too weak to meet the emergencies of a great war; but is it not possible that a sufficient number of Volunteers can be obtained if the whole question of their status as the component parts of an auxiliary force is taken up in earnest by the Government? To repeat an old joke, it might be said that enthusiastic Volunteers ask for bread and get only "butter." They would be well content if the organization of their corps were improved, more encouragement given to men to serve in the ranks, and a responsible officer appointed to see that the training of all the various corps was of the practical kind which obtains in the regular army. There are now some 20,000 volunteers in India, and they are surely worth more attention than is at present bestowed upon them.

MORTALITY FROM SNAKE-BITE.

(Englishman.)

In its resolution dealing with the question of rewards for the destruction of venomous snakes, the Government of India has put forth certain proposals that are not unlikely to raise some apprehension in the minds of the natives as touching them in a matter on which they are specially susceptible. In the first place it condemns the present system of paying rewards for the destruction of snakes. In the second place it proposes to destroy the bushes and other coverts that surround many native villages, so that the venomous snakes may have no shelter or place of concealment. Now, although the present system of paying rewards for killing snakes may have been very unsuccessful, it does not follow that it might not be materially improved instead of being totally abolished, and though the idea of cutting away the coverts in which the snakes harbour looks very simple and very promising, there is much to be said regarding the modus operandi that is recommended by Government. Although the Government made rather light of the mortality for tigers and other wild animals, by showing that the average annual number of victims is small—that it affects only a very small fraction of the population—and that only one person out of every 72,882 of the population is killed by wild animals, it has taken up a different line of argument in dealing with deaths from snake-bite.

It has compared the mortality from fever with the mortality from snake-bite, and shows that the latter is absurdly small, i.e. in comparison. For instance, in Bengal in 1889 the deaths per thousand from fever were 16·72; the deaths from snake-bite were ·16. In the North-West Provinces and Oudh fever carried off 23·10 per thousand, while the snakes took only ·14. The Government argues that "the money spent on rewards for killing snakes can be used in the reduction of other forms of disease with much more tangible results." But is this really so? And will the other forms of disease be really reduced if the snake-money is diverted to the suppression or cure of them? The average annual mortality from the ravages of wild animals in eleven years is 2,720. The mortality from snake-bite was 22,480 in 1889, for the average of eleven years is not given. The Government may have regarded 2,720 deaths in a year as a small thing, but when the deaths from snake-bite exceed 20,000 in a year, surely it is not right to give up the hope of diminishing this mortality even though the money hitherto spent in rewards for killing snakes is diverted and applied to fever hospitals and charitable dispensaries. The office note of the Home Secretary informs the world that continued attention has for many years past been directed by Government to devising measures for reducing mortality from snake-bite, and various plans have been tried, but without any substantial success. In 1887 the Government held that it was useless to pay rewards to professional snake-catchers, who make a trade of catching snakes in the jungles.

It ruled that rewards should be given only to towns and large villages. In 1881 the Chief Commissioner of Burma proposed a plan for organizing village-snake hunts in the rice-fields, but it met with little success. In 1882 the Government of the North-West Provinces and Oudh enlisted a number of snake-hunters among the low-caste classes who trap reptiles and small animals for food, and gave them a monthly retaining fee, plus a reward for each snake killed. These snake-hunters did very little, and were suspected of breeding their own snakes. In Bengal the Government authorised certain indigo-planters, to pay the rewards for the poisonous snakes brought to their factories, but this plan could only affect the small area in which indigo is cultivated. The note concludes thus:—"During a period of eleven years the sum of Rs. 2,37,000 has been expended in the different provinces on the destruction of snakes with what must be regarded as no practical results; and the evidence shows that in some parts of the country, at any rate, the grant of rewards for dead snakes has resulted in people taking to the practice of breeding them!" Although the Government resolution does not especially advert to it, the figures published in the Madras Presidency, where very few snakes are killed, and hardly any rewards are paid, the mortality from snake-bite is less in proportion to the population of the Province than it is in the Bombay Presidency, where snakes are killed by thousands and considerable rewards are paid. The actual figures for the year 1889 stand thus:—Madras: Population, 30,000,000; persons killed by snakes, 1,587; snakes killed, 340; rewards paid for snakes, Rs. 49. Bombay: Population, 16,500,000; persons killed by snakes, 1,080; snakes killed, 433,795; rewards paid for snakes, Rs. 7,847. Of course, the question remains how many more people might have been killed in Bombay if those 433,795 snakes had not been killed. Perhaps some Madras naturalist will explain why the snakes of that Presidency are more merciful than the Bombay snakes. The resolution of the Government of India sums up the case thus: The inquiries recently made have satisfied the Government of India that no system of granting rewards for the destruction of snakes is likely to have any appreciable effect on the mortality from snake-bite. Snakes exist in such numbers that it is hopeless to expect to exterminate them; and there can be no reasonable doubt that large numbers of those, for which rewards have actually been paid, have been really harmless snakes. No satisfactory means exist in most parts of the country for ascertaining whether a snake for which a reward is demanded is really venomous or harmless, for the native officials rarely know the difference themselves. The matter, however, is one which may be more fully considered at another time, with the object of seeing whether the danger admits of a practical remedy.

METHOD OF RECRUITING FOR THE ANGLO-INDIAN ARMY.

The following is a resumé of two papers by Surg.-Gen. Sir W. Moore, K.C.I.E.

I.

After entering into some statistical details of sickness, mortality, and invaliding, Dr. Moore believes the sickness and mortality might still be much reduced, and alludes to the short-service system as costly, and the replacement of men passed into the Reserve by undeveloped and weedy lads, who break down under tropical service before physical development (which is not completed till 25 years of age) is perfected; as also to the want of success of short service in maintaining the strength of the Army in India. At present it is believed that nearly 10,000 soldiers are serving in India between 19 and 23, and hundreds of lads under 19 years of age. Surg.-Gen. Moore states that while administrative medical officer in Bombay, he was compelled to weed out a large number of young soldiers from regiments sent for immediate service in Afghanistan, who were utterly unfitted for the hardships of active service, and alludes to his experience on this subject being corroborated by other administrative medical officers. He further mentions the circumstance that very few short-service soldiers take advantage of the inducement to extend service in India, preferring change to England and then extending their service. The doctrine of "acclimatisation" Dr. Moore considers erroneous only to "a certain extent." He says that the excessive sickness and mortality from enteric fever in India which has recently raised such a hue and cry is nothing new, and points out that statistics were not so elaborate in years gone by as of late, nevertheless, the old East India Company's European force showed a death-rate of 56 per mille under 25 years of age; 48 during the next decimal period, rising afterwards to 61. Systematic sanitary reports on the Anglo-Indian army only date to 1865, and in these allusion is made to the higher mortality during the first years of service than subsequently, also that "from two to five years' service is the time at which the largest number of men break down"; further, that "the mortality of newly-arrived regiments has been double that of the old corps in the same station." In 1870 a sanitary report remarks that "one-third of all the invalids of the last six years were men of less than three years' Indian service. Dr. Moore opines that the sickness and mortality of young soldiers has attracted increased attention during recent years because of the number of young men in the ranks. He considers it a mistake to suppose that the mortality of young soldiers goes on increasing during middle life, although it is augmented after this period, and, further, that it is an error to attribute this mortality "solely, or even mainly," to enteric. The term enteric assumes prominence only since 1870. Surg.-Gen. Moore expresses his view that the fevers which now prevail in India are the same fevers which always prevailed; that the frequency of these fevers in India depend in a great measure on the impression which has been made on medical officers that it is frequent; and, lastly, that fevers with bowel lesions may be present and yet not be enteric. He fancies the excess of enteric is presumed, and appears to be due rather to "a change of fashion in diagnosis" than to actual increase of disease. In proof of this latter statement he refers to an arbitrary order issued to the Medical Department, just before the first Suakin Expedition, that "all diseases with elevated temperature should be regarded provisionally as enteric fever." This is not unlike the notorious position taken up by Surg.-Gen. C. A. Gordon, while P.M.O. in Madras, on the subject of enteric prevalence.

II.

Considering the connection between age and service in India, with the prevalence of enteric fever, the late Dr. Hewlett, Sanitary Commissioner of Bombay, went so far as to strongly recommend, in a special report on this disease, that soldiers should even reach the age of 25 before being sent to India. This, of course, with the short-service system is impracticable. Surg.-Gen. Moore considers that idiosyncrasies exercise a certain influence on subjectivity to disease in India, as different temperaments and constitutions suffer in very varying degrees, some enjoying life and flourishing in the tropics, while others suffer and sicken. Dr. Moore urges that the vis vitæ is the requirement for soldiers in India, but says that this is the class which is so frequently sent home as time-served, for the inducements held out to them to continue in India are insufficient. Allusion is made to the arguments in favour of a separate European army for India, and many reasons against it, but these are not fully entered into. Dr. Moore, however, thinks that the argument pro "in the essentials of economy" counterbalance the contra, and suggests as an initiatory measure (liable to extension) the formation of one European regiment in each of the three Presidencies for prolonged service in India. Into such regiments only the men with the vis vitæ should be admitted, and the period of their service to extend to at least 45 years of age, but as to this age-limit no hard and fast rule. He considers that increased pay and retiring allowance, with concessions as to furlough to Europe or elsewhere, should be granted. Dr. Moore says that the difference between the present system and that which his suggestion involves, is special rules and privileges for the latter, and a more stringent medical examination than is now considered necessary for prolongation of Indian service. When dwelling on the probability that, under his proposed system, many men would (like the old East India Company soldiers) marry native or Eurasian women, Dr. Moore expresses his dissent from the custom of looking down on the half-castes and Eurasians, believing that if these were well cared for and fostered by the State (which has never yet been done), if they were legitimate, instead of (as has often occurred) illegitimate, they would become a power in the Eastern Empire, and perhaps our principal safeguard in the hour of need. Further, he thinks that they would be better suited than Europeans for the Indian climate, and, in some respects better fitted than pure natives.

THE "JOURNAL OF INDIAN ART."

Sir George Birdwood writes as follows to the Athenæum:—

"MARCH 11, 1891.

"I shall be grateful for your indulgence in allowing me to correct a slight error, merely affecting myself, in the Athenæum of the 28th ult., in which a reviewer writes of 'Sir George Birdwood's Journal of Indian Art.'

"I sometimes write in Mr. William Griggs's admirable Journal, and during the Colonial and Indian Exhibition of 1886 my name appeared on the cover as its editor; but I have never had any other association with the Journal of Indian Art than this, and I am in no way responsible for any of its contents but what I contribute in my own name. I feel it very necessary, after what appeared in the Athenæum, to state this publicly.

"The fact is the Journal of Indian Art edits itself, and must do so for some time to come. Its greatest patrons hitherto have been the various official 'art'-mongering institutions in India, which have been prompt to use it as a first-class advertisement for their wares. I will say nothing, in the present connection, on the impolicy of these State Departments being stimulated to compete, on their necessarily highly privileged conditions, with the already heavily handicapped free craftsmen of India. All I wish to observe just now is, that while some of the Indian institutions I have referred to always send well-matured and often truly splendid illustrations for reproduction in Mr. Griggs's Journal, from others he receives only crude and tawdry trash, repellent to everyone endowed in the slightest degree with a natural instinct for art. Yet, under the circumstances of the Journal of Indian Art, all that bears the official stamp has to go into it; and thus its editing has gone on, so to say, automatically ever since it was started, and must thus be continued until it becomes better known and better supported in this country.

"To be quite fair to everyone concerned, it must be confessed that the illustrations of bad Indian art weigh as nothing against the good. But were I the proprietor of the Journal of Indian Art, or in any way responsible for it, I would allow of none but the very finest examples of Indian art being illustrated in it, the principle determining the selection of them being that they should not only be local, but also classical in character; that is, of such universally recognizable merit as to be everywhere placed in the first class of the specific department of art to which they belong. Whatever cannot be so classed, however profitable it may be commercially, is not art at all, but so much rubbish. There is no second place in the arts, for only in their highest perfection do they refine and elevate the souls of men—'nam omnium artium altitudo nos delectat'; while the history of Indian art teaches us that this 'altitude of virtue' can be reached in objects of the humblest use in the economy of human life and of the lowest intrinsic value.

READING AND WRITING-ROOMS FOR SOLDIERS' WIVES.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Sir Frederick Roberts's attention has been lately drawn to the possibility of establishing "Women's Reading and Writing-Rooms" in British corps serving in India. The experiment has already been tried by one commanding officer, and found to work admirably under the auspices of the ladies of the regiment. Accommodation can generally be found in a vacant married quarter, which could be inexpensively furnished. The preliminary expenses incurred could be met by subscriptions or by a donation from regimental funds; the trifling expense of subsequent maintenance being debited to the refreshment branch of the regimental institute, which derives part of its profits from the married people. Of course, to make the scheme a success, it is necessary that the ladies of the regiment should interest themselves in the rooms by occasional visits and helpful supervision. The desirability of adding to the comfort and well-being of soldiers' families has long been felt by all officers who have ever interested themselves in the soldier's welfare; and, now that Sir F. Roberts has managed, by constant attention to the subject, to secure the means of providing rational amusement and wholesome refreshments, in well-constructed and attractive recreation-rooms, for the soldier, he opportunely remembers that something may well be done to render cantonment life in India less monotonous and irksome to soldiers' wives and children. Sir Frederick Roberts may well feel confident that he has only to bring the subject to the notice of the regimental authorities to enlist the sympathy and cordial co-operation of the officers and ladies of British corps, upon whom the success of any movement of the kind must, in a great measure, depend.

BENGAL.

A THUNDERSTORM broke over Calcutta on Sunday, it being the first rain there since October.

A MONSTER meeting of natives was held on the race-course on the maiden this afternoon to oppose the Age of Consent Bill. The gathering was certainly the largest ever seen in Calcutta, and is estimated as a mere guess at fifty thousand. Seven platforms were erected at intervals of about a hundred yards, and from these a succession of orators poured forth denunciations against the Bill in Bengalee and Hindi, accompanied often by violent gesticulations. Round each platform for some distance the people squatted on the ground, but the crowd was constantly shifting, and everyone seemed to be in excellent humour. The proceedings lasted nearly two hours. No resolutions were put, except the general resolution of objection to the Bill, which seemed to be carried with roars of applause. The meeting was got up by all the principal orthodox Bengalee families in Calcutta, and was supported by several Rajahs from Eastern Bengal.

THE Indian Bankruptcy Bill cannot be taken up during the current session at Calcutta, as the Age of Consent and Factory Act Amendment Bills will engage the attention of the Legislative Council next month. The measure has been carefully recast, but will require much consideration in the Select Committee. In some quarters there is a feeling that the proposed bankruptcy machinery is too ambitious for this country, except perhaps in the case of very large estates.

THE Committee of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce has decided that its sub-committee on finance shall proceed immediately to the consideration of the Silver Question as affecting Indian trade, and that the Government of India will be formally approached on the subject as suggested in the President's recent address.

IT is stated that the Howrah Bridge is shortly to be lighted by electricity. At present the bridge is very badly lighted, there being no lights at all upon the moveable section, which is 200 feet long. The remainder of the bridge and the boat-opening below are also very indifferently lighted. It is now proposed to place thirteen arc lights on the roadway of the bridge, each of 2,000 candle-power; and four similar arc lights for the boat-opening, with eighteen strong incandescent lights for the signal-stations, watch-house, and engine-house. The aggregate power will be 34,384 candles, and to prevent the possibility of failure, the plant will include a spare engine, boiler, and dynamo. The contractors are Messrs. Laing, Wharton, and Down, who have been selected to supply the electric-lighting plant for the Kidderpore Docks, and who number among their more recent works the installations at St. Pancras station and the Chelsea Military Exhibition. The cost of the Howrah Bridge plant is to be Rs. 42,050, and this sum will be provided out of surplus revenue.

ACCORDING to the new time-table just issued, the journey from Calcutta to the foot of the Simla Hills will be accomplished in four minutes under forty-one hours, and the mails should reach Simla itself exactly in forty-eight hours.

MADRAS.

IT is expected that there will be a grand harvest for Nilgiri tea-planters this year. A correspondent writes:—"That very good tea (equal to the produce of Ceylon and Assam) can be produced on these hills has lately been proven by several of our planters. Nilgiri planters require to carefully prune their bushes; to pluck quickly, and to provide ample withering accommodation. 5,000 lbs. per acre is possible on these hills to the careful agriculturists."

OUR recent remarks about the paucity of field officers in the Madras Staff Corps, writes an up-country paper, may be emphasised by reference to the officers now with the four regiments of Native Cavalry in the Southern Presidency. There is not a single major borne on these lists. The 1st Lancers are commanded by Colonel Warner, the 2nd Lancers by Colonel Gallaway, the 3rd Cavalry by Lieutenant-Colonel MacLeod, and the 4th Cavalry by Captain (Brevet-Major) Fenton. The squadron commanders are captains, with a few lieutenants officiating in that rank. Colonel Gallaway vacates his command in April 1892, and Colonel Warner in August 1894, by which time three of the squadron officers will have been promoted to major. The Madras cavalry regiments may be few in number, but the young officers serving in them are now in a better position regimentally than their brethren in Bengal.

IT is likely that an entirely new administration will be organized for the government of French Indo-China, says the Madras Mail. Monsieur Ettienne, the Sub-Secretary of State and the actual Minister for the Colonies, proposes to do away with the Council Colonial, and in its place to constitute an administrative body, which, excepting the Conseil Prive, will consist of two French and six Asiatic members. The projected organization for Indo-China provides that the Governor-General shall hold his official residence at Hanoi, that his authority shall be exercised generally for the direction of affairs throughout the protectorate, that the superior residents of Hanoi and Hue shall henceforth be directors of civil affairs only, and that with regard to Cochin China and Cambodge, the Governor-General shall grant a suitable delegation to act with the Lieutenant-Governor of Saigon and the superior Resident of Cambodge. Notwithstanding the strenuous opposition of certain members of the Superior Council, it is expected that the projects of the Sub-Secretary of State will be accepted by a large majority of the members.

BOMBAY.

(Feb. 28.)

THE May vacation of the High Court in its Original Jurisdiction will commence on Monday, the 11th May, and end on Saturday, the 13th June 1891, both days inclusive.

LIEUT. T. MOSS, Commissariat Department, Poona, and Mr. Mirza Hairal have been appointed members of the Civil and Military Examination Committee.

SURGEON-MAJOR J. F. KEITH, M.D., has been appointed substantive Civil Surgeon, and Superintendent of Lunatic Asylum and Superintendent of the Medical School at Hyderabad.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY has been pleased to nominate the Hon. F. L. Latham, M.A., Barrister-at-Law, to be an Additional Member of the Council of the Governor of Bombay for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations only.

MRS. BROWN POTTER and Mr. Kyrle Bellew commence their Bombay season on the 16th March, opening with Sardou's great play, "La Tosca." Their engagement in Calcutta has thus far been a splendid success.

ON Wednesday afternoon, at a meeting of Mahomedans of all classes and sects, held in the chief mosque in Bombay, it was resolved to send a memorial to the Viceroy in Council against the provisions of the Age Bill, which were declared to be opposed to the tenets and traditions of the Mahomedan religion.

THE death, under peculiarly melancholy circumstances, is announced of Mr. Montague Charles Leckie, a much respected officer of the Salt Department. Mr. Leckie, who first entered Government employment in the marine postal service, entered the Salt Department in 1874, serving during various periods at Kharagodha and in the Ratnagiri, Kanara, and Uran Ranges. He became a first class Assistant Collector in April of last year, when on furlough, and on his return to duty in May took over from Mr. Norman Oliver the acting appointment of Assistant Collector of Salt Revenue, Goa Range, Assistant to the British Delegate for the Portuguese Treaty, and Her Majesty's Consul at Goa. Though of good constitution, the unhealty conditions under which much of his service was passed undermined his health, and it was while on his way to Bombay on board one of Shepherd's steamers, to seek relief from fever, that Mr. Leckie died early on Saturday morning. A large number of his friends attended his funeral at Sewree the same afternoon, amongst them being the Hon. Mr. Pritchard, a former head of his Department; Mr. Vidal and Mr. Lee Warner, Chief Secretaries to Government, and Messrs. Hill, McCann, and W. E. Young, of the Salt Department.

THE Sind Gazette announces that an understanding has been arrived at between the various authorities of the Government of Sind, of Bombay, and of India in regard to the construction of the line of railway from Hyderabad in Sind to Oomerkot; that the line is to be proceeded with at once, that it is to be constructed on the standard gauge, and that it will be completed within a few months. We congratulate the province, says our contemporary, on the prospects which the adoption of this measure, tardy as it has been, confers. It means that the period of apathy, obstruction, and inaptitude which has so long weighed on the fortunes of Sind, an incubus upon all enterprise and energy, is drawing to its termination. With the new departure will be inaugurated a new era of life and progress for this port and province. For let the first link of the lateral communication thus effected to the eastward be wrought, it will be impossible to arrest the completion of the whole chain which shall bind the rail systems of the North-Western line and the Rajputana lines together. We shall gain the through connection with Agra and the North-West Provinces, Karachi will be the great wheat port of India and the gate for the main traffic, commercial and military, between Great Britain and her Eastern Empire.

THE Khalsa College committee met on Monday and decided on the steps to be taken to decide where the college shall be located. The Sikhs in many places are agitating in favour of the location of the college at Amritsar. The meeting of the committee was business-like, and it was decided to ask the advice of all the contributors of a thousand rupees each as to the location.

THE proposed changes in the Punjab Police are now believed to be under consideration. It is probable that the Deputy Inspector-Generalships will be abolished, and that the saving thereby effected will be devoted to improving the position of the District Superintendents.

THE Government Gazette of last Saturday, the 21st, writes an up-country paper, shows in a striking light the bad luck of some of the civilian Judges in these Provinces as compared with their executive juniors. It notifies the reversion, with effect from various dates in December last year, of three Judges, one of 1867 and two of 1868, at a time when two executive officers of 1870, and three of 1871, are in safe and substantive possession of First Grade Collectorships. Beati possidentes.

AT one of the military cantonments served by the North-Western Railway, the other day, says a local paper, a gallant colonel entered a compartment and took his seat, with him his dog. The ticket examiner nipped his ticket in due style, and asked for the dog's ticket. The owner had none, and refused to take a ticket. The station-master came to the carriage, and the owner of Bow-wow still refused to pay for his ticket, amongst other arguments bringing forward the small size of his pet. Whereupon the station-master told him: "You see, Sir, the revenues of the railway have fallen off so much this year that we are fourteen lakhs of rupees behind, and we cannot, therefore, carry anything free." This explanation so touched the gallant colonel that he immediately produced eight annas and took a dog's ticket.

THE acceleration of the mails on the East Indian line has produced its natural effect in forcing the Oudh and Rohilkund to follow suit, and before the Simla exodus sets in the latter railway will have a fast train running from Mogul Serai to Saharunpore and meeting the North-Western mail there. The passenger from Calcutta this season will therefore have three routes, equally eligible in point of time, open to him for the journey to Kalka: the East Indian viâ Delhi and Umballa; or, changing at Ghaziabad, the East Indian and North-Western; or, changing at Mogul Serai, the Oudh and Rohilkund and North-Western. Leaving Calcutta on Monday evening, say, he will reach Kalka by any of these at 1·43 P.M. on Wednesday. This equal competition can only be maintained, however, temporarily; in another year, when the new line between Delhi and Kalka has settled sufficiently to allow the East Indian to maintain full speed throughout, their more direct route will enable them to land passengers at the foot of the hills by the early morning, and thereby practically to gain a whole day on the journey to Simla.

AFFAIRS IN LUSHAI LAND.

THE Englishman's correspondent telegraphs from Fort Tregear:—Later accounts show that the handful of men of Mr. Pughe's Frontier Police Battalion left at Jacopa's village made a most gallant fight. These men, about twenty in number, under Jemadar Sungram Singh Gurung, who were in the guest-house, were suddenly surrounded by hundreds of Lushais armed with guns, spears, and dhaos, who tried to persuade them to come outside. The Jemadar, however, was on the alert, and ordered his men to load, when suddenly the sentry was attacked by a man with a spear, and some shots were fired, which shattered the Jemadar's arm, and killed a Naik standing just outside. The fight then began, the sepoys from the guest-house firing volleys into the Lushais, several of whom dropped; and the Lushais, after firing their guns and hurling innumerable spears, were driven off after a sharp fight, but crept up and fired at the guest-house, obliging the sepoys to come out. They, however, still kept their assailants at bay, and retired firing in good order through the village, taking their wounded, the officers, servants, and the ammunition of the Naik who was killed with them, and then halted for the night at a knoll above the village, coming in four days later with their wounded to the Kolodyne stockade. Great credit is due to the Jemadar for superintending the fight after being wounded, and bringing his party intact for four days through the jungle. The loss was one Naik, two sepoys, and one servant killed; and one Jemadar and two sepoys severely wounded. The sentry, who had four spear-wounds, shot down two Lushais. The Lushais lost heavily, and retired demoralised.

OBITUARY.

GEN. AUCHMUTY TUCKER, C.B., late of Bengal Cavalry, died on the 6th inst. at his residence, Shilston House, Kenilworth Road, Dublin, in his 88th year. He entered the service in September 1826, became lieutenant in January 1829, captain in December 1839, major in July 1843, lieutenant-colonel in June 1854, colonel in April 1856, major-general in April 1865, lieutenant-general in December 1873, and general in October 1877. Gen. Tucker served with the 9th Bengal Light Cavalry throughout the campaign of 1843 in Sind, and was severely wounded in five places at the battle of Meeanee, receiving the medal, the C.B., and the brevet of major.

COLONEL R. H. BINGHAM.—The death occurred at Dorchester on the 11th inst. of Col. Richard Hippisley Bingham, a representative of an old Dorsetshire county family. The deceased served in the Indian Army from 1821–44, and took part in the Burmese War of 1824–26. He retired with the rank of major in Madras Army, and for many years commanded the Dorsetshire Regiment of Militia. Col. Bingham was a Justice of the Peace, and a Deputy-Lieutenant for Dorsetshire.

MAJOR THOMAS KIERNAN, 10th Madras N.I., nephew of the late Francis Kiernan, Surgeon, H.E.I.C.S., and brother of the late Rev. Francis Kiernan, died on the 6th inst. at Bournemouth, aged 76.

LIEUT.-COLONEL WILLIAM HENRY FREDERICK SORELL, commanding Royal Artillery at Sheerness, died suddenly a few days back. Deceased, who belonged to Guernsey, was born on July 16, 1843, and entered the Royal Artillery twenty years later. He served with the expedition from Aden against the Foodlee Arab tribe in 1866, including the destruction of Shugra; also throughout the Abyssinian campaign from October 4, 1867; commanded a mountain battery during Captain Marett's absence on other duty, and was also employed in the Land Transport Train (medal). He next served in the Afghan War in 1880 (medal), and with the Burmese Expedition in 1886–87 (mentioned in despatches, brevet of lieutenant-colonel, and medal with clasp).

LIEUT.-GENERAL RICHARD BARTER, C.B., Bengal Staff Corps, late commanding 15th Loodiana Sikhs, died at Sutton Surrey, on the 27th ult., aged sixty-three. The gallant officer served with great distinction in the earlier and most stirring episodes of the Indian Mutiny, on the outbreak of which, in May 1857, his regiment, the 75th, was stationed at Kussowlie. He was severely wounded at the battle of Budlee-ke-Serai, one of the first encounters with the mutinous Sepoys, and was engaged throughout the siege, storm, and capture of Delhi, including six days' fighting in the streets, where he led the remnant of his regiment for nearly twenty-four hours, all the officers senior to him having been either killed or disabled. He likewise served with Sir Edward Greathed's pursuing column at the battle of Agra, with Sir Hope Grant's column in the advance into Oude, under Sir James Outram at Alumbagh, and in the final capture of Lucknow by Lord Clyde. He next commanded a brigade under Sir Donald Stewart in the Afghan war in 1878–80, until August of the latter year, when he was compelled by sickness to resign his command.

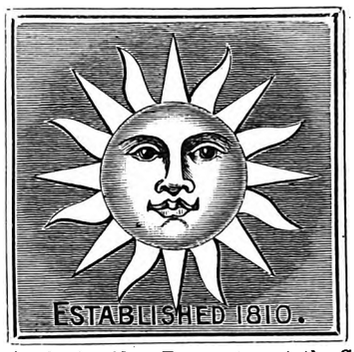
India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 10.

FEVER IN INDIA.

In reply to MR. CONYBEARE,



SIR J. FERGUSSON said,—The statistics of deaths in India, which will be found in the statistical abstract, do not show a progressive increase in each year in the total number of deaths, nor in the number of deaths from fever; and the latter depend in great measure upon the season. It should be remembered that the system of registration of vital statistics is being steadily improved, and that, as it improves, an increase of the registered deaths may be expected. Sanitary reforms are attempted in India so far as the means and sentiments of the native people permit. In rural tracts progress is necessarily slower than in towns. The subject is engaging the constant attention of the Secretary of State and Government of India.

LEPROSY AND THE PRICE OF SALT IN INDIA.

In answer to MR. CONYBEARE,

SIR J. FERGUSSON said,—In the Presidency of Madras the price of salt has risen from 9 annas and 8 annas per maund in 1800 to 2r. 11a. in 1890. The Secretary of State cannot give information for the earlier years of the century, but, if the Hon. member wishes it, he can place at his disposal statistics going back to 1841. The average consumption of salt in India per head varies from 8 lb. to 11 lb. in the various provinces. For all India it is 11 lb. There is no certain information as to the increase of leprosy. Lepers were counted at the census of 1881, but the results of the census taken last month are not known. The Commission now sitting will doubtless consider the question of the connection which has been stated to exist between insufficient salt and the prevalence of leprosy.

MILITARY MURMURINGS IN INDIA.

THE amalgamation of the Indian Staff Corps, and the reductions made in the Madras regiments, have not, of course, found favour in either the Madras or Bombay Presidency, because the feeling in those Presidencies is that all military changes in India emanate from Simla for the purpose of promoting or finding appointments for Bengal officers. "There is one result of the amalgamation of the Staff Corps," says the Times of India, "which will hardly be welcomed by Bombay and Madras officers, viz. the appointment of Bengal officers to command their regiments, especially in Madras, where the number of eligible field officers from which to choose is very small at present. It will be very unpleasant for Madras officers, who have stood the burden and heat of the day when regimental promotion was so slow as to be almost stagnant, to find their good turn taken advantage of by the officers of a Presidency that is always considered to have the best of it." This jealousy of Bengal is one of very ancient standing, but it appears to be kept up in the Southern and Western Presidencies as warmly as ever. It is, perhaps, stronger in Madras, for it has been the Madras Army which the recent proposals and changes have chiefly affected. The telegram from London announcing that Mr. Buchanan's motion for the abolition of the Presidency commands had not been accepted by the House of Commons was received with extraordinary manifestations of joy by the Madras press. The local Mail boasts of having "denounced with appropriate severity the selfishness and ignorance of the people at Simla, who have been Chesneyised (sic) to that extent that they have wholly forgotten the warnings of recent history." This laying the blame of a proposal, which met years ago with the approval of more than one Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief, upon General Chesney is surely forgetting history too. The scheme was formulated long before General Chesney went to India, or had any voice in the direction of military affairs there. But the Madras Mail says: "We hope that with the departure of General Chesney the Government will shake itself clear from those theories of his which, in our opinion, imperilled the very existence of British India." But how was this existence imperilled? We know that it is held by many able officers and writers that India would have been lost to England in 1857 if the Presidential system had not been in vogue when the Bengal Army mutinied; but in the proposal to do away with the Commanders-in-Chiefships, and the complicated machinery attaching to their commands, and to place the Armies of the three Presidencies under one responsible head, the Commander-in-Chief of India, we do not gather that it was intended to do away with the Sepoy soldiers of Madras and Bombay altogether, and to recruit only in the Bengal Presidency. We quite agree with all that the Madras Mail has so long and ably urged on behalf of the Madras Army, that it has deserved well of the British Government in the past, and should be treated still with reasonable consideration in the way of confidence, employment, and pay; but we have always failed to understand why the cumbrous system of three Commanders-in-Chief in India cannot be abolished without in any way destroying the efficiency and loyalty of the Madras and Bombay Armies. The Bombay press does not, however, go to this extreme. The Times of India certainly argues that it is training and leading which does more to make efficient soldiers than any selection of class or caste, and that, fighting against numerical odds, Madras Sepoys defeated Arabs at Sitabaldi, and Bombay Sepoys beat Beluchis at Meanee; but it adds: "Still there is no doubt but that a Punjabi is a better soldier than a Madrassi; he is stronger, bigger, and braver, if he is not hardier, and we admit the force of the argument of the Pioneer and of the authors and advocates of these reforms, that if we are obliged to keep up a small Native Army, it is well to have that Army to consist of the best fighting material we can possibly get." There can hardly be two different opinions as to this, although it is possible that the Madras press will not accept with complaisance its Bombay contemporary's further remark, that, "In Madras the family system which has done much to impair the efficiency of the Army, may be urged in favour of the gradual disbandment of so many Madras regiments; but this hindrance to efficiency does not exist in the Bombay Army." The state of the Madras Army under this "family" system has long been a trouble to the military authorities in India, and the only argument which has been put forward in its favour, is that it is a sort of guarantee of loyalty on the part of the Sepoys, who are not likely to mutiny with so many of their hostages to fortune in British power, as it were. But, on the other hand, military economists have argued that even Madras loyalty may be bought too dear.

The Bombay paper, however, urges that the recent reductions have been unwise, and for the following reasons:—

"We know that the only enemy we have to fear is Russia, and that the military strength of Russia is continually increasing, while the facilities for bringing it to bear on the frontiers of Afghanistan are also rapidly developing. The numerical strength of the Russian Army has trebled itself since the Crimean War. In case of trouble arising between England and Russia in Afghanistan, and a war ensuing, which is a not impossible contingency, the present strength of our Army in India, British and native, would be inadequate to the occasion, and we should at once require a large addition to our forces. Where should we get recruits then? We know very well that there would be no question of confining our recruiting operations to Sikhs, or Punjabis, or Goorkhas, but that we should be very glad to recruit Hindustanis, and Mahrattas, and Madrasis into the bargain. Indeed, we should regard these present reductions with equanimity, did we not foresee that within a few years our Indian Government will be offering bounties to the very class of men whom it is now pensioning off to attract them again into its military service."

This certainly would be not false economy but wild extravagance, were it the case that the Native Army of India is at present too small and that we must sooner or later go to war with Russia. That bugbear of a Russian invasion of India, we know, still lingers in the minds of many Englishmen in India; but we live in the hope that time, circumstance, and common sense are doing something towards laying that "ghost."

AMONG the interesting events of the past week has been the reception graciously accorded by Her Majesty the Queen to the party of Malay Pilgrims who have been sojourning for a short time in London, on their way from Cape Town to Mecca. A picturesque group, comprising all the members of the party, has been made the subject of a photograph, for which a sitting has been specially given for exclusive reproduction in last week's number of The Gentlewoman. With the exception of the photograph taken at Buckingham Palace, by express command of the Queen, this portrait group is, perhaps, the only record of an event calculated to excite interest and gratification among Her Majesty's Mahommedan subjects, both at home and abroad.

THE NINTH INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS OF ORIENTALISTS.

(Translated from National Zeitung, 7th March 1891.)

The Eighth International Congress of Orientalists, which was held in September 1889 in Stockholm and Christiania, under the patronage of H.M. King Oscar II., was incontestably the most brilliant of all the congresses as yet held. But where is much light there also is much shade; and while the brilliancy of those days only remains in the memory, the shadow also continues, nay, becomes constantly more and more intense.

In direct proportion as honours, hospitalities, and marks of royal favour were more freely bestowed on the members of the Congress. and more especially on a select section, so was there an increase in the anger and envy of another section, which certainly shared in the liberal hospitalities, but did not belong to the small circle of those who were selected for distinction. In particular, there hung a strange fatality over the list of honours which were conferred on the Congress.

Added to this, Count Landberg, who was the guiding spirit of the festivities, as well as of the outward arrangements, showed certain proclivities and designs which excited just offence. There were, in consequence of his management, a considerable number of true Orientalists, especially from the land of Islam, members of the Congress, and a prominent position was given to them. He then advocated the plan of allowing the next Congress to be fixed for some Eastern city, such as Cairo or Constantinople, as well as of imparting to the Congress a kind of official position, in place of that of a private association of Oriental scholars which it had hitherto claimed.

It is true he was disappointed, as he failed to get either of these schemes adopted by the members of the Association. On the contrary, there was open opposition to them, first in Stockholm and again at the final meeting in Christiania, where a committee was elected which dismissed the plans, and considered them altogether impracticable.

But here those who, either in reality or in imagination, had received slights which they traced back to Count Landberg interfered, and thought they would be revenged on him; and prominent among these men were two Germans residing abroad—Messrs. J. Oppert and G. W. Leitner. The former, a distinguished scholar and authority on cuneiform inscriptions, has attained a high reputation in Paris by his scientific labours. The latter has, by presumably great exertions in the Indian Educational Service, especially with reference to imparting to the Hindus European culture and training, reached a certain recognised status in London.

But, as things often fall out, the movement called forth chiefly by these two men, although originally directed against Count Landberg only, has spontaneously taken, under the hands of its leader, another direction (since this would have been too trivial an occasion on which to have built a general manifestation), and has taken for its aim an object altogether innocent of those spiteful aspersions, namely, the Eighth International Congress itself.

Whereas in the first place the action started was only in the form of a protest against the holding of the next Congress in Cairo or Constantinople, to which numerous signatures were quickly obtained, the influence of these subscribers was further extended to a second object for which they were not intended, and by combining these two objects the result was an issue which is in itself unjustifiable.

In consequence of the reports which were circulated in Paris, principally by Oppert, concerning the proceedings and decisions of the eighth Congress, there arose among the surviving members of the Founders Committee of these international Oriental Congresses in 1873 the idea that in Stockholm and Christiania an intentional ignoring of the Statutes originally laid down and ratified by the London Congress of 1874 had taken place. By Sec. 3 of these Statutes each Congress shall fix the place where the next is to be held. This had not been done on the present occasion because no invitation had been received. They had, therefore, as in 1878 in Florence, where a similar case occurred, elected a Special Committee to deal with this question (just as in 1878 in Florence the Committee of the German Oriental Society had been authorised to do). No other plan for arranging the matter was possible, because the Statutes of 1873 had made no provision for this eventuality.

None the less was now in Paris this non-fixing of the next place for the Congress put down as a violation of the Statutes, and the surprising conclusion arrived at that the decision of the unanimously elected Committee was illegal and illegitimate. This was probably the heaviest imaginable offence and slight which was cast, surely not on Court Landberg, for whom it was in the first place intended by its originators in revenge for the slight received, but rather on the whole eighth Congress, which was distinguished above all its predecessors by the large number of real Oriental scholars who personally participated in it.

For now, not content with a position of inactivity, they also took active steps and arrogated to the surviving members of the Founders Committee of 1873 the right to take in and arrange the matter after the eighth Congress had shown its incompetency. They agreed to reconstitute themselves ad hoc and chose England and London for the next Congress to be held in 1891, and handed over to G. W. Leitner the functions of Organizing Secretary.

If the annulling of the resolutions taken in Christiania was pure rebellion, then this new step was pure usurpation. No syllable authorising such a proceding can be found in the Statutes of 1873.

Now, no one can be prevented from claiming a right to which he has no title. It only depends on whether he has the power to obtain acknowledgment of his title.

And now this scheme succeeded in England admirably. The dissension from the Landberg scheme permitted the subscribers to the protest brevi manu also to favour the new scheme. No one took the pains to protest against this application. The Committee elected in Christiania, which was much weakened by the death of one of its members in December 1889, and by the wide separation of the residences of the three remaining members (Leiden, Berlin, and Cairo, where Count Landberg passed the winter of 1889–90), was much hindered in its powers of action, allowed nothing to be heard of it, and showed no signs of protest. In short, the result of Leitner's exertions was to get together a truly respectable Committee for the Congress to be held in London in September 1891, with Sir H. Rawlinson as Honorary President and Sir M. Grant Duff as President.

Meanwhile, among the German and Dutch scholars who had personally taken part in the eighth Congress some indignation began to be felt that, without any objection, the elected Committee was so brevi manu deposed, and in the middle of April 1890 there appeared a public declaration signed by thirty-one members of the Congress giving expression to this feeling.

On the 5th of June the Committee elected in Christiania, which had probably underrated the gravity of the position at first, but had now in the face of the accomplished facts to take up a position against them, addressed Sir H. Rawlinson—the honorary president who had been chosen by the opposition committee—with a declaration which partly drew attention to the absolute legality of the decision arrived at in Christiania, and partly in a most conciliatory manner proffered the hand of peace by hinting that Oxford had already made overtures concerning the holding of the next Congress there. At the same time I, on my side (National Zeitung of 4th June), in an open letter to J. Oppert, clearly explained the real facts, and sent a copy of the article to the parties concerned.

The answer which the Christiania Committee received from England on June 17th, signed not only by Sir H. Rawlinson, but also by the joint president, Sir M. Grant Duff, gave expression to the most friendly sentiments. And also J. Oppert, in his answer to my appeal to him (National Zeitung of 31st July), expressed himself in a thoroughly friendly manner. While he persevered, on principle, in his view, he declared himself decidedly against the "vivacity" of Leitner (whom he at the same time sought to screen), and gave all due honour to the object of the letter addressed to Sir H. Rawlinson as having produced an acceptable arrangement.

Oppert, in spite of all, belongs to the guild of scholars and has some sense of feeling for what is due to one's colleagues. But such considerations were not to the taste of the "organizing secretary," who stands remote from Oriental scholarship and is only on a practical footing in relation to it.

He proceeded further (July 21st) to draw up a definite answer, which he required Sir H. Rawlinson and Sir M. Grant Duff to give at his dictation. But here he showed that he had in his ardour forgotten two important factors, the English gentlemen and the English national feeling. The "discourtesy" which he expected the former to show to the Continental scholars who had in so thoroughly graceful a manner showed their wish for peace was too great. Sir H. Rawlinson and Sir M. Grant Duff resigned. And the feeling against the "vivacity" of the "foreign agitator" was so strong that in October 1890 a rupture took place in the Organizing Committee, the result of which was that it was resolved (1) to remove Leitner's name from the committee; (2) to put off the next Congress till 1892, and to elect Max Müller as president; and (3) to enter into correspondence with the committee elected in Christiania. The explanation issued by Sir G. Birdwood, Professor R. K. Douglas, the Rev. W. E. Bullinger, and J. H. Hewitt, stated very clearly that the whole "organizing committee" remained unchanged with the sole exception that the name of "Leitner no more appears in our lists."

Thereupon the Christiania committee, rejoiced at the fortunate and peaceful conclusion of the incident, decided in their own name and with the consent of all the newly-added members, to transfer their full powers to the English committee. And they thought that at last this grievous history was laid at rest and the threatened schism in the ranks of the Orientalists averted.

But in this they reckoned without their host. From an invitation just received to take part in the Ninth International Congress of Orientalists, to be held in London in September of this year, it appears that Leitner has succeeded in obtaining the adherence to his standard of a section of the English Committee got together by him. Whereas in October last he was removed from the Committee, he on his side expels his former antagonists from it, and holds that he alone, by virtue of full powers bestowed on him from Paris and freshly confirmed in November 1890, is entitled to represent his own and the true English Committee. He again refers to the 350 protests which were sent in from 25 countries against the Christiania Committee (in reality they were only sent in against the holding of the next congress in Cairo or Constantinople), and gives an imposing list of "Members of the Organizing Committee" collectively as "elected by the votes of signatories of the Paris circular, dated October 10, 1889." Of the English names included there is not one which has any special, or certainly any European, reputation in the domain of Oriental philology and its subsidiary branches. Of the foreign names there are a few such. It still remains questionable with what right they are included. It is hardly probable that they were all asked if they wished to give the support of their names to the present project.

The above observation concerning the significance of the names enumerated on behalf of Oriental scholarship, applies also to those men who stood at the head of the Paris agitation of October 1889.

The true representatives of Oriental philology in Paris have held themselves far aloof from it, as they did also from the 1873 meeting, and have also refrained from attending personally any of the congresses subsequently held, with the exception of a few excellent men such as Cordier, C. L. Schefer, and L. Feer. Renan, at least, attended the Florence Congress probably to please Amari.

We have now, therefore, two opposing committees in England. What will be the result? I consider there is no doubt that Leitner will hold his congress in London in September this year. And as he will be first in the field, he and his cannot be prevented from calling themselves the Ninth International Oriental Congress. But the Congress to be held in the following year under Max Muller in London and Oxford, would hardly surrender the right to call itself the true Ninth Congress. And we think the "gentlemen" among the English and other Orientalists, and friends of the East, will give to this Congress their sympathies. Of Leitner's Ninth Congress I can cast the horoscope that it will only be attended by very few real Orientalists of note and position, though by a large number of dilettante travellers, &c., and in particular by many special friends of Leitner's, who will gladly take part in the glorification of his work. But the stigma will attach to the Leitner Congress of having been called into existence by agitating against the express desire of the real Oriental scholars in order to minister to the gratification of personal motives.

The humbug which was evolved out of the Paris Statutes of 1873 merits a very special castigation. As though they were a sacred Gospel with which no one must meddle! I have in my letter to J. Oppert already advanced all that is necessary in relation to the manner in which most of the provisions of these statutes were dealt with at the different Congresses. No one should be deceived on this point. The gentlemen of the Founders' Committee may acquire immortality if they please; no one can hinder them. But they must be sure of this, that the time has not yet come when people will allow themselves to be bound by their proceedings. The Congresses hitherto held have independently dealt with such parts of the 1873 statutes as contained unsuitable decisions, and with such matters as they contained no provision concerning. It will be well not to meddle with this independence. At the next revision of the statutes, the revisors should confine themselves to what is most absolutely necessary. It does not always happen, as on this occasion, that two angry men are found who, so to say, will throw their heart and soul into the matter in order to gratify their personal feelings, and at the same time give an opportunity to the 1873 Founders' Committee of coming forward as a saving deus ex machinâ.

BROAD ARROW.

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other Service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week, written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, MARCH 24, 1891.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 7th March; from N.W.P. and Madras to the 5th March; and from Bengal to the 4th March.

H.E. THE VICEROY leaves Calcutta for Simla on the 24th instant, breaking his journey for two days to open the extension of the Philibit Railway, and to take a run up to Naini-Tal.

ACCORDING to present arrangement, H.E. will reach Allahabad from Calcutta on the evening of March 25.

HE remains the following day to open the new water-works, and on the 27th he will leave, accompanied by the Lieutenant-Governor, to open the last link of the Lucknow-Philibit Railway on the 28th instant.

THE new section of the Bengal-Nagpur line at Chakradharpur was opened by His Excellency on March 3rd, in the presence of a large gathering of guests, invited by the Company.

THE Viceroy spoke of the great benefits derived from railway extension in India, and observed if British rule in India had no other monument to leave but the part it had played in this direction, it would in itself be conclusive evidence of the beneficence and usefulness of the British administration.

LADY LANSDOWNE, accompanied by Mrs. Hope, Lord Frederick Hamilton, and Captain Brazier Creagh, was to leave Calcutta on the evening of March 12th for Simla, stopping two days at Lucknow en route, and joining the Viceroy at Naini-Tal for a trip through Kumaon.

LORD WENLOCK has made reassuring remarks regarding the possible famine in the Madras Presidency.

GENERAL DA CUNHA, the newly-appointed Governor-General of Portuguese-India, arrived in Bombay from Lisbon.

THE population of Bombay is given as 804,464, being 506,124 males and 298,336 females.

THE population of Madras is four and a half lakhs, an increase of over 10 per cent.

A ROUGH calculation of the census returned for Calcutta and the suburbs gives a population of seven and a half lakhs.

A ROUGH estimate shows the population of Rangoon to be 180,000.

ORDERS have been given for the breaking up of the Miranzai Field Force.

THE North-West planters anticipate a bumper coffee crop.

THE various Eurasian and Anglo-Indian Associations are having statements drawn up giving the strength of the able-bodied Eurasians willing to enlist as soldiers in Eurasian regiments.

THE severe lesson inflicted on the Wuntho rebels is said to have produced excellent results.

A TELEGRAM from Wuntho says that General Wolseley held a successful darbar, nearly all the head men of the circles attending. A review of the troops followed, and the British flag was hoisted to a salute of eight guns.

THE landslips on the Sind-Peshin Railway last month were more serious than was at first believed; about 500 feet of the hill-side came down. Some thousand feet of railway were obliterated and 300 feet pushed out of position.

THE opening of the Delhi-Umballa-Kalka Railway is to be celebrated on the 6th proximo.

THE Gilgit Road from Bandipura has been closed to all persons not travelling on duty, and visitors to Kashmir are warned that they will be turned back should they attempt to pass Bandipura.

MAJOR-GENERAL SMART, lately commanding the Madras District, has left for England.

LORD HARRIS opened the new Merewether Graving Dock on Tuesday afternoon, March 3, in the presence of a large and representative gathering of ladies and gentlemen.

H.E. LORD Harris arrived at Nassik on Thursday, and after luncheon declared the Nassik Tramway open.

HIS EXCELLENCY afterwards travelled over the line and through the city, and was presented with addresses by the Municipality and the Mahomedan community.

HIS EXCELLENCY subsequently laid the foundation-stone of the new civil hospital named in his honour.

ON Monday and Tuesday, March 2 and 3, the second attack on Bombay from the sea was made under the direction of the officer commanding H.M.S. Conquest.

THE defence on land was carried out under the direction of Brigadier-General Budgen, the officer commanding the Bombay District.

ON Tuesday afternoon part of the military scheme drawn up to protect Bombay in the event of a rising in the native town was carried out by the Bombay Volunteer Rifles under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. L. H. Bayley, and the 11th Southern Battery Royal Artillery.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the publication of a revised code of regulations for the dress of the Army in India.

THE Bombay Light Horse have gone into camp at Santa Cruz for their annual drill.

THE rules prohibiting soldiers from shooting in the vicinity of native villages now lay down that shooting is prohibited within 500 yards of any village, and that shooting at night between "tattoo" and "reveillé" is strictly prohibited.

GOOD-CONDUCT pay similar to that given to the Bengal Cavalry is to be sanctioned for the Madras and Bombay Cavalry, and the regiments under the Government of India, such as the Hyderabad Contingent and Central India Horse.

No sanction has yet been accorded by the Government of India to the scheme for expanding the water-supply of Simla, the matter being still under consideration. The heavy snow of the past winter will at any rate assure an ample supply for this season.

THE splendid physique and health of the 4th Madras Pioneers attracted considerable attention at Burmah, the men doing excellent work in a very unhealthy climate.

THERE were great doings in the Roman Catholic Cathedral at Agra, on the 26th ult., in honour of the Jubilee of Archbishop Dr. Jacopi's missionary life in India.

THE youngest Miss Fitzpatrick, who has been suffering from typhoid fever, died at Hyderabad on March 3rd.

NOTES.

THE chief news from India received during the past week comes by telegraph. The Select Committee of the Legislative Council at Calcutta having presented their report on the Age of Consent Bill, that measure, with certain modifications, has been passed and become law. Native agitation will possibly now grow weaker, and the Hindú community, who have been the chief opponents, will, in the Oriental way, accept the inevitable as kismet.

THE English press in India, and here, are almost unanimous, of course, in favour of the Bill. But the St. James's Gazette "agrees to differ" rather, giving, however, in the following, a curious reason for the necessity of passing the Act:—"In defiance of the warnings given by those British and native authorities best qualified to form an opinion on the social condition of the Indian races, the Age of Consent Bill has been passed by the Legislative Council. The only strong argument in its favour was the vehement agitation against it. It would have been a disastrous precedent for the Government of Asiatic races, who respect authority much and argument hardly at all, to confess a mistake and to retreat before opposition. Having begun, the Government was bound to go on. Already the Bill has been modified and has become law in a less mischievous and litigation-breeding shape than had been originally contemplated. It remains with the Executive to see that the Act is enforced with the tenderest discretion. Nothing must be done to give a handle to disloyal Young India; nothing that will give a pretext to the cry that a foreign Power is tampering with the sacred institutions and immemorial customs of a civilization older than our own—stereotyped, and therefore incapable of the reforms which, in a progressive society like our own, are at once the causes and the symptoms of healthy development."

THE experienced and brilliant writer who so ably summarises "Indian Affairs" weekly in the Times, looks more hopefully to the way in which the measure will be accepted by those most interested in the question. He believes that prosecutions under the Act will be infrequent, because, he explains:—"It is the upper and well-to-do classes of the Hindoo community, who, for social and religious considerations, are most addicted to the customs of child-marriage. These classes are, broadly speaking, divided into two sections; the strictly orthodox Hindoos and those educated on the modern or Western system. In regard to the orthodox Hindoos, it will not be denied that their private life is guided to a remarkable degree by a sense of religious obligation and moral duty. They are not only a class unlikely to offend, but they are also the class which would shrink most from the committal of an offence that might bring their domestic affairs before the public gaze. As regards the other well-to-section of the Hindoo community—namely, those educated upon modern or Western ideas—the evidence tends to show that the very early consummation of child-marriages is becoming less and less frequent among them."

THE Indian Factories Bill has also passed into law, but wisely modified to suit the conditions of native labour and native life in India, and not to suit the selfishness of the "Manchester men." The sensitiveness of these worthy persons regarding the health and comfort of the women and children working in Indian mills was highly to be commended as a philanthropic feeling, but fortunately it did not blind the Government of India to the fact that legislation that works well for Manchester might not be legislation which would work well for India. Indeed, as the writer in the Times tersely but truly puts it, any attempt to force the existing system of Indian labour into English or foreign methods would have led to a greater agitation in India than all the opposition which has been made against the Age of Consent Bill.

THE Indian Budget Statement, also received by telegraph, is one which may be described paradoxically as being satisfactory and unsatisfactory at the same time. It is satisfactory to learn that the accounts for 1899–90 show a clear surplus of Rx. 2,612,033, being Rx. 802,300 better than anticipated in the "revised" estimates of last year's Budget, and that the expected surplus for the current year is Rx. 2,787,100; but it is not satisfactory to find so many "warnings" concerning the future in Sir David Barbour's "statement." The opium revenue has declined, and is likely to decline still further; there has been a heavy loss on "famine protective" railways—a loss not likely to be made good in any possible way in the future; and then, besides the renewal of the exchange difficulties, Sir David warns about the necessity of increased military expenditure "for the defence of the country at all points." This is the ugliest "warning," for military expenditure on "defence" has already weighed down the finances of India heavily enough.

THE new rules regulating admission to the Indian Staff Corps have found favour with the Service papers here. The Broad Arrow says:—"The new system will recommend itself to most people. The officering of the Indian Staff Corps has hitherto been carried on in a somewhat haphazard manner, and this had much to do with the waning popularity of the Corps. Henceforward the Indian Staff Corps will take rank as a recognized arm of the Service, and will have to be deliberately accepted or put aside by all candidates for commissions. It may bear hardly on Artillery officers, who, under the new system, will be entirely shut out, but no doubt some compensating advantages will be provided for them by employment in the Indian Ordnance Department, and in other ways. The new system has the recommendation that parents must consider the advantages of the Indian Staff Corps when they decide that their sons are to compete for the Army, and the conditions of the Service will therefore be duly and fairly weighed. Hitherto this has not been the case. A young officer, as a rule, takes the Staff Corps because he finds service in a British regiment beyond his means. He joins it rather as a pis aller, and therefore not with the best of grace. Staff Corps officers, as a whole, compare well with any body of officers in the Queen's Service, but it must be allowed that there is a strong need for esprit de corps, which the New Regulations are calculated to create and strengthen."

REGARDING, however, the amalgamation of the three Indian Staff Corps, the Army and Navy Gazette says:—"Having regard to the many difficult problems which have to be solved just now at Simla, none can doubt the wisdom of the appointment recently made, by which Sir George Chesney is relieved as Military Member of Council by the present Director-General of Military Intelligence at the Horse Guards. Until General Brackenbury has reached India, taken up the reins from General Chesney, and consulted with the Viceroy and Commander-in-chief, it is best for the home public to consider certain matters of administrative detail in abeyance. The amalgamation of the Staff Corps shows that the home authorities are not averse to progress if it can be proved to be expedient. But they do object most strongly—and very properly so—to commit themselves to hasty legislation which, whilst removing some difficulties, might, at the same time, create others which would render the changes recommended of doubtful benefit."

NATIVE opinion on native industrial enterprise ought to carry some weight, and the following opinion on the subject is candid enough:—"We are all sure," says Reis and Rayyet, "that we are a wonderful people, the true Aryanocracy and so forth, and our youngsters are up to anything, from the formation of a Cabinet to the command of the Channel fleet. Strangely, however, we do not show aptitude for commercial organization. With the honourable exception of Bombay, the country has scarcely taken any advantage of the legal facilities for combination in mercantile and trading operations. For us the Limited Liability Act is practically a dead letter. A few abortive firms comprise our whole efforts in this direction. A dozen years back a Banking Corporation was started in Bengal, under the most promising auspices, and with a flourish of trumpets. But it was soon brought to an inglorious and disgraceful end. Madras does not seem to be a more congenial soil for such undertakings. Her Hindoo Union Bank, Limited, we see, has been drawn into liquidation."

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 16.

Yesterday the opponents of the Age of Consent Bill held a religious service in the Kalighat Temple, near Calcutta. A great crowd attended, and a number of pundits and fakeers addressed the assembly. Prayers and sacrifices were offered to procure the withdrawal of the Bill.

Lord Wenlock proceeds to-day to visit the distressed portions of North Arcot.

The Black Mountain enemy appear to be alert and hostile. They fired on our troops several times on Saturday and yesterday, but no casualties are reported. The weather is wet and cold.

MARCH 18.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council to-morrow, the following among other amendments will be moved to the Factories Bill:—No child shall be employed over seven hours daily, and every child who is employed six hours shall be allowed an interval, or intervals, of rest aggregating at least half an hour.

MARCH 20.

The financial statement was published to-day. The accounts for the year 1889–90 closed with a surplus of Rx. 2,612,033, being an increase over the revised estimates of Rx. 802,300. The revised estimates for the current year place the revenue at Rx. 85,313,500, and the expenditure at Rx. 82,526,400, making a surplus of Rx. 2,787,100, of which the larger part is due to the rise in exchange.

Sir D. Barbour remarks that there has been a moderate but not unsatisfactory growth of revenue under the ordinary civil heads during the year, but that the large surplus now estimated does not arise from causes which can be contemplated with complete satisfaction. The Budget estimates for the coming year give the revenue as Rx. 86,025,300, and the expenditure as Rx. 85,909,700, leaving a surplus of Rx. 115,600, which practically means that the revenue just balances the expenditure. The famine grant is restored to its original amount, Rx. 1,500,000, and opium is taken at a lower figure than in the current year. The rate of exchange is estimated at 1s. 5¼d. He states, with the usual reserve, that the Secretary of State proposes to sell Council Bills amounting to 16 millions sterling, and raise a loan of £2,600,000 for the discharge of debentures and advances to railway companies.

Sir D. Barbour next proceeds to discuss the prospects for the immediate future, and states that difficulties may arise due to special causes, namely, war, famine, a further fall in opium, decreased railway traffic, growing military expenses, and a fall in the rate of exchange. Opium has already fallen largely and there are no strong indications of its recovery, but the fall up to date has already been discounted. It is impossible to speak confidently regarding the military expenditure. The closing year has witnessed extraordinary fluctuations in the exchange, and while the Government profited largely by the temporary rise, that result was not attained without injury to the commerce of the country. Trade between England and India was for a time reduced to mere gambling.

Sir D. Barbour expresses regret that these violent fluctuations have not resulted in the final settlement of the question, and says that the perpetually recurring evils from the difference in the monetary standards of India and other countries cannot be endured for ever, and the final solution of the problem must be found, he believes, in a double legal standard. He maintains that the theory that a low rate of exchange is beneficial to Indian trade is one of the greatest delusions that ever gained possession of the human mind. A sudden rise of exchange would doubtless temporarily check trade, but trade would in time adapt itself to the new conditions. What India requires is not a high rather than a low rate, but some system under which fluctuations would be neither great nor frequent, but would oscillate round a fixed point.

He considers that the adoption of the free coinage of silver by the United States would lead to a greater stability in the relative values of gold and silver, and in that case it would be probably best for India to maintain the free coinage of silver for an indefinite period, in the hope that a final solution would one day be obtained. But if the United States should abandon silver as a monetary standard, then probably the easiest and safest course would be for India to adopt the gold standard at or about the exchange of the day, rather than attempt to establish a higher rate. The adoption of the gold standard in India would probably be attended by very serious consequences to the Western nations, but if they looked only to what they considered their own interests, they could not object to India doing the same.

On the whole, Sir D. Barbour believes that the future prospects, apart from questions of exchange and military expenditure, are decidely encouraging.

The latest news from the Black Mountain Expedition is that in the attack yesterday on the pickets at Ghazikol, delivered by Hindoo fanatics, Lieut. Maconochy, of the 4th Sikhs, was slightly wounded.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 22.

Although, unfortunately, the absence of Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter made the debate on the Age of Consent Bill in the Council last Thursday entirely one-sided, still it was by no means devoid of interest. The speakers had carefully prepared answers to the objections urged by the opposition during the discussions of the past ten weeks, and they succeeded in answering them in a very effective manner. The Viceroy, Sir A. Scoble, and Mr. Evans, completely demolished the argument that the Bill was a breach of the Queen's proclamation, the last-named gentleman making an especially telling point by quoting the late Sir Barnes Peacock's speech on the Hindoo Widows' Re-marriage Bill in 1856.

Rajah Bhinga and Mr. Nulkar, representing respectively the high-caste Khettries of Upper India and the Mahratta Brahmins, disclaimed all sympathy with the opposition and strongly condemned early cohabitation. Mr. Nulkar dealt at great length with the religious side of the controversy. The Lieutenant-Governor said he would issue orders to the district officers to ensure the careful working of the Act.

Although it was well known that the Government meant to push on the Bill, and that Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter was the only member of the Council likely to give an adverse vote, still the opposition seem to have clung till the last moment to the hope that it might be withdrawn or defeated, and considerable disappointment was expressed when the Bill became law. Probably little more will be heard on this subject, save when occasional prosecutions under the new Act may call passing attention to it, but it is not unlikely that the feeling of uneasiness roused by the recent agitation, may smoulder in the minds of the people for some time, till they become satisfied that the measure can be worked without police oppression, and that it is not a prelude to what they dread even to a greater extent—namely, legislation interfering with their domestic institutions and with the privacy of the zenana.

The debate on the Factories Bill in the same sitting of the Council had especial interest and importance, from the fact that nearly all the speakers, official and non-official, referred more or less plainly to the belief, which is general in India, that the measure was introduced, not so much on account of any special necessity, as in deference to the wishes of the Lancashire manufacturers. Sir A. Scoble, in moving that the report of the Select Committee be taken into consideration, admitted that factory labour in India was not subject to the same disadvantages which too frequently beset it in Europe.

Mr. Mackay, President of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, said that although he did not deem it necessary to dissent from the report of the committee, or to recommend delay, he still considered the restrictions which the Bill placed on employers and employed were the utmost to which they should submit, and he hoped that no attempt would be made to increase them for many years. He added that there had been for the last year a sense of insecurity, due to the feeling that there was some risk of the interests of India being sacrificed at the altar of English party politics, and he brought to their recollection the fact that only a few years ago the import duties were abolished to benefit English manufacturers, and were replaced by a direct tax, which was wholly unsuited to the country. He thanked the Indian Government for having fought India's battle with valour and discretion, and expressed the hope that the present measure would give satisfaction to India and effectually silence Lancashire for ever.

Mr. Nugent, Bombay official member, made a long speech, in which he said that as a member of the Select Committee he considered the measure had been so altered from the form in which it was introduced 14 months ago, that further steps should be delayed till it had again been circulated for the opinions of the local governments and the commercial community. He greatly feared that it would have the effect of excluding all women and nearly all children from employment in factories. He wished to speak with all respect of the Berlin Conference, but he could not refrain from pointing out that no representative from India had attended the Conference, nor had any one who was practically acquainted with that country. There was no more erroneous an idea than that which seemed to prevail in England that the Indian mill-hands were cruelly overworked and miserably underpaid. On the contrary they were well paid, well treated, moderately worked, and infinitely better off than the agricultural labourers. He thought the Government should give the Indian operative all reasonable protection, but should not protect out of existence his time and industry, which were his livelihood, or convert the protection of Indian mill-hands into a device for protecting the British manufacturer against his Indian rival. Those who had conversed freely with the natives, and had read the native papers attentively, could not fail to observe the widespread belief that when the interests of England clashed with those of India the latter had to give way.

Mr. Evans, non-official member, said that the Bill had created a very uneasy feeling. Mr. Bliss, the Madras official member, spoke to a similar effect. Mr. Nulkar, a native non-official member, said that a strong belief was entertained in India that the selfishness of the cotton-spinning electoral bodies in England had a more potent voice in imposing the measure than any proved necessity. It would, therefore, be satisfactory if the Government would publish unreservedly the entire official correspondence between England and India on the subject of the Bill, including the telegrams, and let the public solve the doubts on a matter which had caused not a little irritation. He added that the only consideration which prevented his objecting to the immediate passing of the Bill was the apprehension that the first general election might lead to a worse measure of interference with infantile Indian industry; therefore it would be wiser to pass the Bill as it stood and thereby save India the risk of a worse calamity.

The Viceroy, a summary of whose remarks I telegraphed on Thursday, was the only other speaker. It will have been seen that he, too, hinted that this was the general feeling on the subject, and said he hoped that the Bill would be a final settlement of the question—a hope in which every true friend of India must share.

The Budget has been much discussed during the last two days, and not altogether favourably. Perhaps the point which attracts most criticism is the policy of restoring the famine grant to its original amount—namely, Rx. 1,500,000—the greater part of which is to be applied to the construction of protective railways, and the remainder to wiping off the loss on the Indian Midland and Bengal-Nagpore lines. Would it not be wiser, many ask, to treat this as really a portion of the surplus, and to devote it to reducing one or more of the three most oppressive imposts—namely, the salt-tax, the income-tax, and the rice export duty. Sir D. Barbour's somewhat pessimist but guarded remarks on the subject of expenditure in military defence also seem likely to provoke a good deal of controversy; for a large and probably growing party in this country hold that the limit of safety in this direction is already reached, and that an increased outlay is likely to lead to more serious dangers than anything India has to fear from foreign aggression. The remarks on the currency question, which close the first part of the Finance Minister's minute, will doubtless give rise to much discussion. No one will deny the disastrous effects of the rapid fluctuations of exchange, but the theory that a low exchange is beneficial to India has many supporters here, and they are not likely to pass by unchallenged Sir D. Barbour's description of that theory as one of the greatest delusions that ever gained possession of the human mind.

BURMA.

RANGOON, MARCH 16.

Captain Drury has been released from arrest by orders from the Commander-in-Chief, and he will proceed to Fort White to take command there.

Captain Drury has been two and a half months under arrest without any charge being preferred against him, and he has now been released without any explanation being offered.

MARCH 17.

It is reported from Wuntho that Monyhim, north of Manteik, was attacked by Hpothein, a dacoit leader. The attack was repulsed with great loss to the rebels in wounded and prisoners captured. It is stated that the Kachyens assisted in the attack, which was probably meant as a cover to the Tsawbwa's retreat.

RANGOON, MARCH 22.

It is understood that Sir A. Mackenzie has decided to annex the State of Momeik, adjoining the Ruby Mines. This step will largely assist the work of pacification in Upper Burmah, and has been too long delayed. Since the annexation of Upper Burmah this petty State has been a source of constant trouble, disorder has always prevailed there, and it is now in a most unsatisfactory condition. Although Momeik is usually classed as a Shan State, only a small portion of the population are Shans, the great bulk consisting of Kachyens and Burmans. Sir C. Crosthwaite placed this district in charge of a Shan Tsawbwa, who was unconnected with Momeik, but was a pretender to another Shan principality. He was appointed for five years only. This arrangement has had disastrous results. The Tsawbwa grossly oppressed the people, and recent official investigation shows that the insurgents who took part in the late disturbances in Momeik were more sinned against than sinning. Annexation will be well received in Momeik, as it has been in Wuntho.

The Chief Commissioner and the Major-General commanding in Burmah have given a decided opinion that the strength of the garrison in Burmah cannot be reduced at present. It will have to be kept at a much higher figure for the next two years than the Government of India had been led to believe. It has been decided to occupy the Chin Hills in force, and render future raiding impossible. For this duty probably four regiments of native troops will be required. Owing to the sickness in the Chin country two additional regiments will have to be kept in reserve.

The Shan State of Theinni is again disturbed by Sawyawnaing and a large band of dacoits. A column has been sent against him. He will probably escape, as before, over the Chinese frontier. Home pressure ought to be used in Pekin to stop these constant raids from Chinese territory.

When the cold weather sets in, a new frontier policy will be introduced in the Bhamo and Mogoung districts and on the Chinese frontier generally. It will then be definitely decided up to what limit effective jurisdiction will be exercised, and within that line all Kachyens and other tribes will be reduced to the position of orderly subjects and compelled to pay a stated tribute. Intertribal raids will be stopped. The jade, amber, and indiarubber districts will be settled. To effect this strong posts will be established in various districts. The policy pursued for the last three years of pottering about with little columns for a few weeks during the cold weather, burning a few villages here and there, and imposing fines which were not paid, without establishing any real authority, has been costly and undignified, and really effected nothing towards the permanent settlement of the country.

Full details of the census of Burmah have now been received. The population of Lower Burmah numbers 4,452,000, being an increase of 790,000. Upper Burmah has a population of 2,981,000. The Shans, Kachyens, and Chins, who are not included in these figures, comprise about 650,000 souls.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

The following has been received at the India Office from the Viceroy, dated March 20:

The Financial Statement of 1891–92 has been published here in a "Gazette Extraordinary" to-day:—Accounts for 1889–90 closed with a surplus of Rx. 2,612,000. Revised Estimates of current year show surplus of Rx. 2,787,100. Estimate of revenue Rx. 85,313,500, of expenditure Rx. 62,526,400. The greater portion of the surplus is due to rise in exchange. Nett revenue from opium is estimated at Rx. 218,200 less than Budget estimate. Nett revenue from railways, excluding exchange on sterling payments, only slightly better than Budget Estimate. There is an improvement in most other revenue heads. Budget estimates for coming year show a surplus of Rx. 115,600. Estimate of the revenue Rx.86,025,300, of expenditure Rx.85,909,700. Famine insurance grant is restored to the original amount of Rx. 1,500,000 of which Rx. 1,043,000 is under Famine relief and Insurance, and Rx. 457,000 represents the nett loss on the Indian Midland and Bengal-Nagpore Railways, which have been constructed as famine protective works. Nett revenue from opium is estimated at Rx. 5,318,700, being Rx. 361,500 less than regular estimate of current year. Exchange is taken at 1s. 5¼d. There is an improvement in Upper Burma; nett expenditure Rx. 164,300 over Budget estimate for 1890–91. It is stated, with the usual reserve, that the Secretary of State for India proposes to sell in 1891-92 Council Bills £16,000,000, and to raise a loan of £2,600,000 in payment of 3½ per cent. Debentures and advances to railway companies. The Budget Estimate of next year provides Rx. 3,500,000 expenditure not chargeable to revenue, also Rx. 1,068,300 loan for local purposes; but it is not expected that it will be necessary to raise a loan in India during the next financial year. This result is satisfactory, mainly on account of the large surpluses in 1889-90 and 1890-91, and the provision made in those years for reduction of debt from famine insurance grant. Rx. 104,000 has been allotted for construction of famine protective works. Future prospects, apart from questions connected with exchange and military expenditure, are considered by the Finance Member of the Viceregal Council to be decidedly encouraging.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

BENGAL.

March 4.

AN increase in output of over 33 per cent. in the course of two years augurs well for the future of the Bengal coal industry. There is still a large import trade in Bombay and Sind, the cost of overland transport being so great that Bengal coal is unable as yet to compete in these markets. It is, however, being sent to Burma in fairly large quantities; and since Indian coal costs, on the average, about a third of the price of the sea-borne article, the time cannot be far distant when it will take entire possession of the Indian market.

IN Bengal it is said to be a common sight to see aged Kulin Brahmins begging from door to door for any little help they can get. One of them lately went to Burrisal, where he gave a heart-rending account of his affairs. The man was aged and decrepit, and was burdened with several daughters, who, although married according to the Kulin custom, were doomed to be the everlasting hangers-on of the father. The old man used to get a monthly pension of Rs. 3 only, and had to pay money to his sons-in-law whenever they used to visit his house. No doubt the visits were few and far between, but the entire family were on the point of starvation. Such is Kulinism!

SINCE the abolition of the minimum price list, about three months ago, the Bengal jute trade has entered upon a period of most unusual briskness. The demand from the old "closed ports" and local markets, whose assumed inelasticity was the sole defence of monopoly rates, has shown a capacity for considerable expansion under the influence of free trade. There has been a revival of speculative enterprise, which had languished since it was seen that the Mills Association was tempted in emergencies to modify the policy, on whose continuance operators necessarily based their calculations. Even the return to full time working has not caused distrust among buyers, and business in "futures" is being transacted on a large scale. The prospects of the industry, indeed, were never more promising.

THE special sessions that are being held for the benefit of the Lalitpur dacoits, Mr. Bird presiding, have been going on for over a month and are still in full swing. Some idea of the work may be gathered from the fact that, notwithstanding a large number of acquittals, no less than forty-four dacoits have been sentenced, many of them to transportation for life. However, the troubles of the district seem to be at an end now, no fresh dacoities or robberies having been reported since the middle of December. The last leader of any note, one Kalyan Singh, a man who with his gang gave open battle to the police on three separate occasions, has lately been arrested under circumstances which show that the bandits' day is gone by. Friendless and unattended, he was betrayed to the police while lying asleep one night in a field by some of his fellow-castemen.

THERE are workings of Kulinism which, if revealed, would probably inspire men like Mr. Malabari to agitate for legislation to suppress them. An instance happened recently in eastern Bengal, in which two girls, sisters, aged seventeen and twelve respectively, were married to two septuagenarians. When the "auspicious" day for marriage came, the girls refused to go to the mandap to be given away, and began to weep and scream. Immediately, however, their female relatives began to drag them to the place of sacrifice, while the victims resisted by catching hold of a pillar, being determined to withstand all force. At last, when the auspicious minutes for the celebration of the marriage were about to slip away, the guardians ordered half a dozen of the male relatives to catch hold of the brides and carry them to the mandap, which was done amid the cries of the unfortunate young women.

THE Amir's examination into the alleged embezzlements in his various accounts offices has led to a wholesale dismissal of the accountants and the appointment of new men in their places.

MADRAS.

ANOTHER monster memorial has been presented by a thousand Nanjenaud ryots to the Maharajah of Travancore. The petitioners, it is stated, have deputed a Select Committee to agitate further, if necessary.

MONSIGNOR LAOUENNAN, Archbishop of Pondicherry, is seriously indisposed, and his medical advisers recommend his early departure to France. The Reverend Father Berger is likewise in very bad health, and will probably leave India for France by the next mail steamer.

THE new Governor of Pondicherry has commenced a vigorous onslaught on refractory bazaarmen, and is making himself personally acquainted with their little ways and doings by paying unexpected visits to godowns and stalls where goods are exposed for sale.

LADY WENLOCK goes to Ootacamund on the 2nd proximo. Lord Wenlock rejoins her there after a short tour to North Arcot, Salem, Coimbatore, and Malabar, some of the districts affected by the failure of rains. His lordship leaves Madras on the 16th proximo on a tour lasting about a fortnight.

THAT the male population of Bangalore exceeded the female by 312 is accounted for by the fact that there are so many unmarried fighting men. The total of the census of this year exceeds that taken in 1881 by about six thousand souls. The station was, at the time of census-taking, short of its full garrison by one-and-a-half battalions of Native Infantry.

Two months ago a daughter of Mr. John Magee, an employé of the Bank of Madras, was bitten on the face by a dog. The wound was at once cauterised, and seemed to be healed. But on Friday last symptoms of hydrophobia set in and the little girl began barking like a dog and exhibiting other signs of madness. All available efforts to save life were tried, but to no purpose; and the child died early yesterday morning and was buried the same evening in St. Roque's cemetery.

IN our last, writes a local paper, we gave the population of Madras according to the rough totals that have been prepared, but there are still a few more returns to be sent in, we are informed, and the final total will be something over 450,000. The population at the census, of 1881 was 405,848, so that the increase is 44,098, or 10·9 per cent. The number of occupied houses was 59,806, which gives an average per house of 7·5, against an average of 8·3 in 1881. The decrease is no doubt largely due to a difference in the definition of a house, or at least in the application of the definition. The proportion of the sexes is 498 males to 502 females in each 1,000 of the population, the proportions in 1881 being 493 males to 507 females.

THE deputation of the E. and A. I. Association that waited on Lord Wenlock with an Address of Welcome on Tuesday afternoon, doubtless came away fully satisfied with the measure of sympathy and interest displayed in his Excellency's reply. The decrease in the number of Eurasians employed in public offices, to which the address alluded, was shown to be hardly entitled to the epithets "marvellous and rapid," which might better have been applied to the skill displayed by his Excellency in parrying what he thought was a blow at the Government. It is to be hoped that Mr. Grantz's frank avowal of the deficient qualities of his fellow Eurasians will stimulate them to make further efforts towards improvement, especially in the matter of learning the vernaculars.

Secretary to H.E. the Governor. He is the guest of Lord Harris, and will leave for Madras to-night to assume command of the Madras Army.

ALL visitors to Bombay, writes the Englishman, have admired the beautiful terminus of the G. I. P. Railway, beyond comparison the finest station in India, and, so far as elaboration of design is concerned, scarcely to be equalled by any in Europe. Mr. F. W. Stevens, the talented architect of this building, is now in Calcutta, engaged in drawing up plans for the new offices of the Standard Life Insurance Company, for which a site has been acquired almost immediately opposite the Dalhousie Institute. Mr. Stevens leaves for Benares, where he has been entrusted with the designs of the new waterworks. He has already prepared a sketch of the proposed buildings for Benares, which is an Hindu-Saracenic style. The work will be begun immediately.

MISS VAN TASSELL, the balloonist, performed from the Chadarghat public gardens two successful descents with the parachute, and the last time she went up an altitude of upwards of five thousand feet. Thousands of spectators witnessed the performance, but most of the people prefetred seeing them from the hills and housetops surrounding the public gardens, which naturally militated against the financial success of the enterprise.

DEATH OF MR. JEHANGIR M. CHENOI.—It is with regret we have to announce the death, on Saturday night, at 9 p.m., at his son's residence, of a Parsee gentleman, Jehangir Manockjee Chenoi, at the advanced age of 102. By the death of this aged and respected Parsee, all who take an interest in the early incidents of Indian history are carried back to a period when the Bombay Presidency may be considered to have been formed, when the great Mahratta War broke out, when the Peishwa ruled in Poona, and this ancient capital of the Deccan, with the adjacent town of Kirkee, was taken by the British after a contest with the Peishwa's troops. At this time he was a merchant, having a shop at Sirur, which was eventually transferred to Main Street on the formation of the military cantonment of Poona and Kirkee. There were then only five shops of the Parsees, namely, one of the deceased and of Pestonjee Sorabjee, father of Sirdar Khan Bahadoor Pudumjee Pestonjee, Mottabhoy, Jeevajee Ankleseria, and Sorabjee Raja. He was the only survivor of this early group of the pioneers of mercantile enterprise in this part of the Deccan. He had seen the battle of Poona and Kirkee, which resulted in the annexation of these towns and the adjacent districts to the British territory. His brother was a shroff to the British Government at a critical time, when a trustworthy and careful man was needed to guard the public treasury—he himself having sustained great losses amounting to several lakhs, owing to money despatched from head-quarters for the pay of the troops being robbed on the way to Bhor—and for his services in this capacity he was rewarded with a pension for three generations. He is deeply regretted by a large circle of friends, and great sympathy is felt for his family, which includes two sons and a number of great-grandchildren. They were probably prepared for his death; he simply succumbed to old age. The attendance at the funeral procession, including almost all the Parsi community of this station, indicated a general desire to do him honour and pay their last tribute of respect.—Deccan Herald.

THE Sikhs are still agitating in favour of the establishment of the Khalsa College at Amritsar, and a meeting was held at the Golden Temple for this purpose a few days ago.

ON account of the accommodation for a British Mountain Battery at Camp Thobba, Marree Hills, not being completed, the battery which was to have gone there this summer will go to Bara Gully.

A SUIT for Rs. 50,000 is being brought against the North-Western Railway by Dr. S. Armstrong, a lady-doctor of Lahore, for damages sustained at Kamoki station owing to the train moving on as she was alighting, resulting in a fractured thigh.

A SHOCKING triple murder is reported from Khushab, where a bunniah attempted to murder the entire family of a rival bunniah. He succeeded in killing three persons, but was pluckily arrested by a Pathan sergeant of police, who also arrested two out of three of his relatives who attempted a rescue.

A CASE has been tried in Lahore, in which a dismissed khitmutgar sued a European lady for defamation, because she wrote across the chits giving him by his previous employers that he was impertinent. The Court decided that the evidence did not show this statement to be untrue, and therefore defamatory, and the khitmutgar's remedy was a civil action.

A TEMPORARY pavilion erected by the Parsee Theatrical Company in the compound attached to the Town Hall at Bareilly, was burnt down on Monday. The Company have lost all their property. The fire is said to have originated at the back of the structure where some one was cooking, and owing to high wind prevailing it was found impossible to save anything.

FRONTIER NEWS.

THE Lahore paper publishes the new rules promulgated by the Kashmir Council for the preservation of game in Kashmir. The rules are very complete, forbidding the destruction of the females of the animals enumerated or the destruction by battues with dogs or the selling of heads and skins, with adequately severe penalties. The rules will be very welcome to sportsmen. Europeans breaking the rules will be dealt with by the Resident.

THE Lahore paper says that the same ill-luck in the matter of weather, in a minor degree, seems to be in store for the Black Mountain Expedition, as befell the Miranzai Force. The troops were to begin moving on Thursday, and on that day bad weather appeared to have set in over the greater part of the Punjab. The 11th Bengal Lancers are the first to move, followed by the Mountain Batteries, 28th Punjab Infantry, 37th Dogras and 11th Bengal Infantry. The Seaforth Highlanders were to march on Saturday. The signalling company marches with them. The General starts on the 4th. Colonel Palmer from Sialkot takes over the district.

THE second of the Kabuli riot cases closed on the 23rd February, when the jury found the prisoners (Khyrotis) not guilty and they were discharged. The five Suleimans who were convicted at Calcutta in the previous case were then brought up for sentence. Mr. Justice O'Kinealy, in passing sentence, told the prisoners they had been convicted of an offence that rendered them liable to rigorous imprisonment for three years. From inquiries he had made he found their people were not frequently brought before the courts in this country, as they generally behaved very well. He did not think it necessary to inflict a very severe punishment, though he was bound to punish them so far as to prevent their people taking the law into their own hands in future. The sentence was rigorous imprisonment for four months.

A TELEGRAM from the Miranzai field force, dated Kohat, 1st March, says:—The first telegraphic instructions have just been received from the army head-quarters for the breaking up of the Miranzai field force, and orders agreeable to the above instructions will be issued to-morrow. We were all in hopes that our detention here for the last five days meant that we were going somewhere else, and we are much disappointed that it is not to be. The 1st and 29th Punjab Infantry have lately had heavy hailstorms at Gawada, but are keeping very fit. They were to have had a Gymkhana on Saturday last, but I fancy it must have been postponed on account of the weather. The weather for the last three days has been thoroughly Miranzai, that is, continuous rain and snow on the neighbouring hills. Malitk Makhmuddin is still here, awaiting the decision of the civil authorities as to his future.

A FORT TREGEAR telegram of Saturday (28th ult.) says:—Captain Hutchinson's party, which started on the 28th instant to punish Jacopa for his attack on Mr. Murray, has just returned to the latter village, and we got into heliographic communication with them to-day. They have encountered no opposition, Jacopa having fled. The other Mollienpui chiefs sent in yesterday to renew their professions of loyalty and express their pleasure at Captain Shakespear's return from the southern regions, which are a terra incognita to them. It is evident that, as a body, Mollienpuis are faithful, and the late outbreak must be put down to one of those impulses of unreasoning rage which are so common with savage tribes. The good account given of themselves by the few men who were surrounded in the village will probably make people more chary of meddling with even small parties of our men in future.

OBITUARY.

GENERAL J. C. C. GRAY.—The death occurred, at 1, Kildare Terrace, Bayswater, on the 15th inst., of Gen. James Clarke Charnock Gray, who entered the service of the Hon. East India Company as a cadet of infantry, Bengal Presidency, in the year 1811. He was appointed ensign Bengal Infantry 12th July 1814, became lieutenant 5th June 1816, captain 1st August 1828, major 1st September 1841, lieutenant-colonel 27th August 1847, colonel 28th November 1854, major-general 20th July 1860, lieutenant-general 25th June 1870, general 1st October 1877, when he retired from the service. He first saw active service in the Nepaul War, 1814–15, under Sir David Ochterlony; next at Gureah Kotah. in 1819, under Col. W. Brookes, and in 1825–6, at the siege of Bhurtpore, under Lord Combermere, when the brigadier commanding the storming column issued a complimentary order testifying to the gallant conduct of his regiment in ascending the breach. This regiment was the late 21st Bengal Native Infantry, now the 1st Native Infantry, one of the few regiments of the Bengal Presidency which remained loyal in the great Sepoy Mutiny of 1857. On the formation, in 1837, of the Oude Auxiliary Forces, the deceased, then only a captain, was appointed by Lord Auckland to raise, organize, and command the 1st Regiment of that force, and he held the command for ten years until promoted to regimental lieutenant-colonel in 1847. In the period from 1847 to 1855 Gen. Gray commanded the 34th and 35th Native Infantry, and was selected to raise, organize, and command the 3rd European Regiment, now the 107th, or 2nd Bn. Royal Sussex Regiment. In January 1856, Lord Dalhousie, then Governor-General in India, in a letter couched in complimentary and appreciative terms, communicated to the deceased the new policy about to be adopted in relation to the kingdom of Oude, including the organization of an irregular force, consisting of three field batteries, three regiments of cavalry, and eight regiments of infantry. "My first care for this force," wrote his Lordship, "must be to place it under the command of an officer of ability, energy, and experience, in whose knowledge, discretion, and soldierly qualities the Government may place full reliance. I feel confident that, acting in that view, I cannot do better than select you for this command. It will be agreeable to you to know that your acceptance of this offer will be very satisfactory to Gen. Outram as well as to myself." But before this force could be thoroughly organized and disciplined unmistakable indications of the great Sepoy Mutiny had become widespread, and thus this force in due course disestablished itself after a very brief existence, and Gen. Gray, and such officers of his force as escaped the first hostile intentions of their men, found themselves interred in the Residency at Lucknow, in the successful defence of which they participated from first to last, until relieved by Havelock and Outram in September, and by Lord Clyde in November 1857 and March 1858. Born under the sound of Bow Bells on 19th August 1794, the third son of the late Capt. James Gray, of the Royal Navy, and a grandson of the late Right Hon. Sir James Gray, K.C.B., P.C., Ambassador at the Courts of Naples and Madrid, the deceased General, the father of the Indian Army, commenced his Indian career in 1812, and remained in India uninterrupted for 54 years, 46 of which were passed in the plains, with but a very short term—but once only—in the hills. He went out as a boy of 17, and returned to England at the ripe age of 71, re-establishing his home in London in 1866. As a boy he witnessed the funeral of Lord Nelson in 1806, and the Jubilee of King George III. in 1810, and that of the Queen in 1887, at the age of 93. He remained in the full possession of all his mental faculties to the very last.

MAJ.-GEN. WILLIAM MOORE DICKINSON, late Madras Staff Corps, who died suddenly on the 17th inst., at 12, Medina Villas, Brighton, entered the Army in March 1855, became lieutenant in April 1858, captain in March 1867, major in March 1875, lieutenant-colonel in March 1881, colonel in March 1885, and major-general in July 1887.

COL. JOHN HADOW JENKINS, late Bengal Staff Corps, who died at Terriers, High Wycombe, on the 13th inst., entered the Service in December 1850, obtained his lieutenancy in May 1855, captaincy in January 1862, majority in August 1864, lieutenant-colonelcy in May 1871, and colonelcy in January 1879.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THERE is no intention of increasing the force on the Lushai frontier this season, although, as is known, the 3rd Bengal Infantry in Fort William have been under orders to proceed thither at once if required.

THE Secretary of State has sanctioned the staff salary of the Adjutant of H.E. the Governor of Madras's Body Guard being raised to Rs. 180 per mensem, including horse allowance, in addition to the office allowance now drawn by him.

THE Civil and Military Gazette hears from Rawalpindi that General Ellis seems hardly in the state of health for arduous campaigning, such as that in the Black Mountain, irrespective of the enemy, is sure to be. He can hardly be said to have thoroughly recovered from his illness after the Attock Manœuvres.

THE cost of the Miranzai and Black Mountain Expeditions will serve to reduce the surplus which the coming Budget is expected to show. The expenditure on the former will all fall during the current year, but as the Hazara Field Force will not move till the 10th of March, and is likely to remain across the border for several weeks, a portion of its cost will appear in the accounts for 1891–92.

IT seems that the 40th Native Infantry, which is now in camp at Kanchrapara, were first attacked by cholera at Goalunda, where the crowd of pilgrims along the river was unprecedented. The regiment was on its way from Lushai-land to the North-West Provinces, to be disbanded. It is the old Shahjahanpur Levy, raised in 1858, and Jhansi is the regimental centre.

COLONEL T. VAN STRAUBENZEE, C.B., R.A., who is now in command of the Royal Artillery at Bangalore, will, states the Madras Mail, succeed Major-General G. J. Smart, R.A., in the command of the Madras District, and not Colonel A. M. Rawlins. Colonel Van Straubenzee is fifty-three years of age, and entered the Royal Artillery in the year 1855. He was made a Companion of the Bath for his services in the Egyptian Campaign of 1882, when he commanded the Royal Artillery of the Indian Contingent.

HER Majesty the Queen Empress of India has been graciously pleased to formally approve of the 12th (Kelat-i-Ghilzai) Regiment of Bengal Infantry being permitted, in commemoration of its distinguished conduct at the defence of the Fort of Kelat-i-Ghilzai, in Afghanistan, in the year 1842, to continue to bear on its regimental colour the device of a Mural Crown superscribed with the motto "Invicta."

THE paucity of field officers in the Madras Staff Corps is shown by reference to the officers now with the four regiments of native cavalry in the Southern Presidency. There is not a single major borne on these lists. The 1st Lancers are commanded by Colonel Warner, the 2nd Lancers by Colonel Gallaway, the 3rd Cavalry by Lieut.-Colonel MacLeod, and the 4th Cavalry by Captain (Brevet-Major) Fenton. The squadron commanders are captains, with a few lieutenants officiating in that rank. Colonel Gallaway vacates his command in April 1892, and Colonel Warner in August 1894, by which time three of the squadron officers will have been promoted to major. The Madras cavalry regiments may be few in number, but the young officers serving in them are now in a better position regimentally than their brethren in Bengal.

THE annual contribution of three lakhs of rupees which the Government of India have expressed their willingness to give towards sanitary improvements in cantonments, will, says the Pioneer, be gladly utilized by the military authorities in the coming financial year. It will be devoted to waterworks, several schemes being now in hand. The Quetta works have been completed, and the Military Works' share has to be repaid to the Public Works Department; the Rawalpindi scheme, a large one, will be pushed on, and that for the Gullies begun. Dum Dum gets its supply of wholesome water, not a day before it was wanted, and the pipes, connecting the Allahabad cantonment with the Municipal area, will be laid. The Dehra supply will be extended to the lines of the Mountain Battery and the 1st Battalion of the 2nd Goorkhas. In all some nine lakhs will be spent in the year.

THE post of Garrison Quartermaster, Fort William, is to be abolished.

ON account of the accommodation for a British mountain battery at Camp Thobba, Murree Hills, not being completed, the battery which was to have gone there this summer will go to Bara Gully.

THE Secretary of State, in his forwarding despatch accompanying the Royal Warrant amalgamating the Staff. Corps of the three Indian Presidencies, draws attention to the fact that he does not propose for the present discontinuing the use of the title "Staff Corps." It appears to his Lordship that so long as there remain any officers of local service or general list, a change of name would be inconvenient.

THE Office of the Western Circle, Military Accounts, has closed at Calcutta, and will be opened at the new head-quarters at Rawal Pindi. The following officers move with the office to Rawal Pindi:—Colonel M. A. Rowlandson, Controller; Major D. A. Macpherson, Examiner; Captain G. B. Renny; and Lieutenant C. E. Mardall.

CAPTAIN H. R. BLYTH, Royal Warwickshire Regiment, has joined his appointment as Adjutant of the Administrative Battalion Presidency Volunteers, relieving Capt. A. A. Barrett, whose tenure of service has expired. Colonel Chatterton desires to place on record his high appreciation of the devotion to the interests of the battalion which Captain Barrett displayed from first to last in everything that he did, and which gained for him the admiration and esteem of all ranks. The battalion loses the services of a most efficient and valued officer.

CERTAIN important changes are notified in the organization of the Hyderabad Contingent in an Army Circular. The establishment of British officers per regiment of cavalry and infantry is increased from six to eight. One officer will be added to each regiment during the current year, and another in 1893. This increase in the number of British officers is in no way to affect the position or duties of the native commissioned officers in command of troops or companies. Squadron and wing commanders are to be appointed on the same rates of pay as now obtaining in the Bengal Army, and wing and squadron allowances and forge allowance will be granted as in the regular army; the contract allowances now granted to commanding officers of infantry being abolished. The kit allowances for recruits on enlistment is raised from Rs. 20 to Rs. 30.

THERE was a time when gentlemen who honoured public promenades in Madras with their presence, invariably paid the ladies who frequent those places of public resort the compliment of wearing black coats, &c.; but now-a-days some officers consider that this mark of respect is uncalled for, and the Brigadier-General Commanding the Madras District has considered it necessary to issue this District Order:—

"Officers going to places of 'Public Worship,' 'Marina,' or other places of 'Public Resort' of an evening will invariably appear suitably dressed.

"Note—(Small caps, flannel and jhool suits, it may be observed, are not suitable.)

"The above Order does not refer to officers when engaged in cricket, tennis, football, &c."

THE Statesman says:—"The question of increasing the number of Volunteers in Bengal is now engaging the attention of the local government. A conference, consisting of Messrs. P. Nolan, Secretary to Government, A. Smith, Commissioner of the Presidency Division, H. Lee, Chairman of the Municipal Commissioners, Col. F. W. Chatterton, Commandant, Administrative Battalion, Presidency Volunteers, Lieut.-Col. R. C. Sterndale, Commandant, Presidency Volunteer Reserve Battalion, and the Hon. F. M. Halliday, Member, Board of Revenue, will meet at Belvedere on Tuesday, the 10th March next, at 11 o'clock a.m., to discuss the question with the Lieutenant-Governor. The need for such a conference is scarcely apparent. The causes of the feebleness are already well-known to the 'higher authorities,' and no cobbling or patching will improve the position of affairs. One 'company' on Tuesday furnished two men on inspection! The wonder is that there was one. But the 'rot' is not in one company only, but all through."

A few days hence the new Commander-in-Chief of the Madras army will have arrived, and Sir Charles Arbuthnot, too, will, says the Madras Mail, sever his all-too-short connection with the much-maligned troops of the Government of Fort Saint George. His Excellency had made his name long before he came to this Presidency as a gallant and experienced soldier; and he brought to it a reputation for single honesty of purpose and modest dislike to modern advertising methods, which he has been remarkably successful in maintaining, and which has earned for him the respect and admiration of all under his command. He has been a type of the brave Bayard, of which in times of danger the British army has fortunately always produced so many; of the "officer and gentleman" who does his duty as a matter of honour, and of course without considering that he has thereby done anything unusually meritorious or aught else but what was expected of him. And, as might be expected of such an one, he has been rigidly impartial in the bestowal of such patronage as fell to his share, favouring none, but dealing to all alike a just and considerate attention to their claims. Officers serving under him have been perfectly convinced that he would never knowingly be a party to a job; and they have relied in confident and well-earned security upon his known straightforwardness and honesty of purpose. Conscious merit has felt that wherever discovered it would be recognised, and has had little fear that interest or impudence would be preferred. That is a very great deal to say for a prominent soldier in these days of unearned decorations and general push for notoriety at any price; but it can be safely said of Sir Charles Arbuthnot, and it explains at once the esteem felt for him by the army under his command, and the sincere regret with which that army has now to bid him farewell.

The proposal to abolish the presidency commands finds favour with the Civil and Military Gazette, which advances this plea in favour of the idea:—The old ideas which supported the presidency system had a great deal to be said for them before it was necessary to give our first and best thoughts to the possibility of a Russian invasion; but the internal political considerations which then governed the organisation of the Indian army have now been greatly modified, and the fear that, by an unification of the three armies, the diversity in the class of recruits would be diminished, and thus, in the case of internal troubles, lead to general insecurity, may also be considered a thing of the past. The uselessness of enlisting men from unwarlike races has been recognised, and a determination has grown up to recruit only from the best fighting races of India, from Goorkhas, Sikhs, Afridis, and other frontier tribes, together with Punjab Mahomedans. Bengalis are never enlisted, and the tendency recently is not to enlist men from Southern India.

From the London Gazette, Tuesday, March 17.

THE NINTH INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS OF ORIENTALISTS,

TO BE HELD IN LONDON, SEPTEMBER, 1892.

A GENERAL MEETING of the English Signatories and Representatives of the International Assembly of Orientalists was held in London on January 15, 1890, at which (by Resolutions I. and III.) it was resolved to hold the next (or Ninth) Congress in London, September 1–10, 1891, on the basis of the Statuts définitifs adoptés par l'Assemblée Internationale, laid down at the first Congress in Paris in 1873.

An Organizing Committee was appointed, and communications were opened with the French General Assembly. (See "Record of Proceedings," page 10.)

At the Second Meeting, held in London on April 29, 1890, progress was reported, and it was announced that Sir Henry Rawlinson, G.C.B., &c., had accepted the Honorary Presidency, and Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff, G.C.S.I., &c., the Presidency. Additions were made to the Committee, and four Honorary Secretaries were duly appointed, viz. Professor Douglas, Dr. Leitner, Mr. J. F. Hewitt, and Dr. Bullinger. At this meeting, Dr. Leitner announced that the proceedings, &c. of the English Committee had been ratified in Paris on March 31, 1890, and that the formal transfer of powers from the French members of the Commission Administrative of 1873 had been received by the Committee. Resolution VI. of this meeting duly acknowledged the Resolution of the Paris meeting of March 31, as printed on page 14 of "Record of Proceedings."

Two meetings of the Central or Organizing Committee have since been held in London on June 12 and October 9, 1890. At the former of these, with the view of expediting the business, it was resolved (Resolution II.) "That this Committee act independently, in accordance with the Statutes, and with the powers delegated to itself by the French Committees, and in harmony with their Resolutions." The Committee was again enlarged, and since then Professor Max Müller has been elected as President (October 9). Dr. Leitner's name no longer appears in connection with the Committee or Secretariat.

With these exceptions, everything remains the same: the continuity of the Committee is unbroken; its powers are unchanged; while the Minute Books—the Official Record of Proceedings—are in the hands of the original Secretariat.

At the meeting of the Committee, held on November 10, 1890, it was resolved that in view of the fact that other important Congresses will be held in England in September 1891, and that the said year would also be inconvenient for many foreign delegates, who, on that account, had not yet joined; and acting under the full powers transferred to and vested in this Committee, the date of the Ninth Congress of Orientalists, to be held in London, be deferred till the following year, viz. September 1892.

The Committee has the full support of Professor Dillmann, of Berlin, and Professor Kuenen, of Leiden, Presidents of former Congresses (as the appended translation of an extract from an open letter, addressed by Professor Dillmann to Professor Douglas, testifies).* It is now engaged in arranging the business of the Congress, and invites the membership of all Orientalists, so that the next Congress may see them all united in the prosecution of their great and important labours.

All Communications concerning Papers, &c. connected with the various Sections, to be made to the respective Presidents or Secretaries.

All other Communications to be made to the General Secretaries of the Congress:—Professor Douglas, British Museum, London, W.C.; J. F. Hewitt, Esq., Devoke Lodge, Walton-on-Thames; Dr. Bullinger, Bremgarten, Woking, Surrey; Professor A. A. Macdonell, 7, Fyfield Road, Oxford.

President.—Professor F. Max Müller, K.M.

Vice-Presidents.—The Marquis of Ripon, K.G., G.C.S.I., Lord Northbrook, G.C.S.I., D.C.L., Lord Reay, G.C.I.E., LL.D., Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P., Sir George Birdwood, M.D., LL.D., K.C.I.E., C.S.I., Sir William Hunter, K.C.S.I, Sir William Markby, K.C.I.E., the Provost of Oriel College, Oxford, the Master of Balliol College, Oxford, the Master of Christ's College, Cambridge.

The Central Committee of Organization consists of the Vice-Presidents, together with the following:—Prof. A. H. Sayce, Prof. R. K. Douglas, Dr. C. D. Ginsburg, Dr. E. W. Bullinger, Dr. C. H. H. Wright, Dr. T. H. Thornton, C.S.I, Prof. Peterson, D.Sc., E. Delmar Morgan, Esq., Prof. C. Bendall, Prof. Mahaffy, E. Ransom, Esq., L. B. Bowring, Esq., C.S.I., Prof. R. Pinches, Esq., and the Presidents and Secretaries of the various Sections.

* "I am in the happy position after that the votes of the whole eleven members of our Committee are presented before us, of making to you and the President, with the other Members of the Organizing Committee, the formal announcement that the Committee elected at Christiania and reinforced by co-optation, is quite agreeable both to the choice of London as the place for the next, Ninth, Congress, and the date 1892; also to the choice of Professor Max Muller as President, and the composition of the Central Committee of Organization. We also surrender to the same all further steps in the preparation of the Ninth Congress."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, MARCH 24, 1891.

CALCUTTA, SIMLA, AND THE BUDGET.

WITH the publication of the Budget Statement the "season" at Calcutta comes to an end for the summer months. The Viceroy, the Members of Council, the heads (and a good number of the tails) of Departments are now hurrying away from the City of Palaces and pale faces, to that paradise or pandemonium (according to conflicting opinions) called Simla. As no fresh taxation has been proposed by the Financial Member of Council, his "Statement" has to be "taken as read," and no debate or discussion thereon allowed. This is not a new device for avoiding the awkward situation—for the Government of India—of hearing unpleasant remarks made in the Council Chamber by "non-official" members, and of afterwards reading them in the columns of the Anglo-Indian and Native press. If we mistake not, the ingenious arrangement was introduced during the viceroyalty of Lord Northbrook, but it was too attractive a way of getting out of a difficulty, not to win official favour and to be imitated afterwards. When it was first attempted, Calcutta considered itself "sold," to use a vulgar but very expressive word to illustrate the situation. Calcutta thinks that the only public opinion in India worthy of attention is that within its own municipal boundaries, and was therefore angry when the Government Gazette simply published the Budget Statement, and the Government—that is to say, the Viceroy, the Lords of the Council, and "all the nobility"—went away to the hills and left Chowringhee, and the critics therein and about, to their own opinions and reflections on official turpitude and deceit. The situation has, however, slightly improved now. The decency is at least observed of allowing the Financial Member to read his Statement in the Council Chamber, even though no debate be allowed upon it. This is a sop to the Calcutta "non-official" Cerberus, but, according to the latest telegrams, it is not likely to stop the growling of the "many-headed monster" which protests there against the Simla exodus. It is not likely that the Statement which Sir David Barbour has put forward will be accepted by the Indian tax-paying public without considerable comment, and that, too, of a hostile nature. That the Minister of Indian Finance has been able to announce that the accounts for 1889–90 show a clear surplus of Rx. 2,612,033, and that the estimated surplus for the current year is Rx. 2,787,100, looks pleasing and satisfactory enough; but, as the writer of an able leader on the subject in the Times puts it, when we come to the Estimates for 1891–92 we pass to the region of conjecture and prophecy:—

"The assumed receipts for that year are Rx. 86,025,300, and the assumed expenditure is Rx. 85,909,700, giving a bare margin of Rx. 115,600 for contingencies; so that, as Sir David Barbour remarks, the year's accounts in reality just balance. Allowance has been made for an expected further decline in the nett revenue from opium. This revenue stands in the revised estimates for 1890–91 at Rx. 5,673,200, or Rx. 218,000 less than the sum at which it stood in the original estimates of the year. In the estimates for next year it is set down at the still lower figure of Rx. 5,301,700—a reduction of Rx. 361,500. Exchange is put at 1s. 5¼d., 'with the usual reserve,' a point to which we shall presently recur. The famine grant is restored to its original amount of Rx. 1,500,000, of which a little less than one-third is swallowed up by the nett loss on three railways, which have been constructed as famine protective works. It is certain, moreover, that there will be expenditure next year for which no provision is made out of the year's revenue."

But in glancing further into the future, the tone of Sir David Barbour's Statement savours more of doubt than of hope. The revenue from opium is becoming less year by year, and although this stern fact may cause much rejoicing in the deep hearts and shallow intellects of the anti-opium and other Indian reforming faddists, it must remain a very trying difficulty with the Financial Member of the Government of India who has the task annually of showing how revenue is to be raised and expenses met without putting further burdens on the taxpayers. Then follows a hint that possible decreased railway traffic must be taken into calculation. But worse than this is the doubt expressed as to the further extent to which military expenditure must go. Opium, railway traffic receipts, and fluctuations in exchange may always be troublesome items to deal with; but even in calculating these, some possibly accurate guesses may be arrived at. With military expenditure, however, the case, according to Sir David Barbour, seems hopeless. Wars and famines are no doubt exceptional and difficult contingencies to deal with; but surely some fair idea might be come to as to how much more "the defence of the country [India] at all points" is to cost. Sir David says that due provision for this must yet be made, that this has not yet been done, and that it will have to be done at a cost the amount of which he is as yet unable to estimate. Why should this be so? With whom does the responsibility of ordering this impossible-to-be-ascertained expenditure rest? Are there to be more strategic railways made, and further unchecked outlay made, to protect India from the invasion of the Russians? These are questions which are possibly being asked in Calcutta just now, but to which probably no reply will be vouchsafed from Simla.

NEW REGULATIONS FOR ADMISSION TO THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

These regulations will in the first instance apply to candidates for admission to the Royal Military College who pass the Further Examination in June, 1891, and to the Militia Officers who pass the Competitive Examination for commissions in the Army in September, 1892. Officers admitted to the Army before the 1st September 1892, will remain eligible for appointment to the Staff Corps under the regulations in the Appendix printed below.

1. A certain number of appointments to the Indian Staff Corps will be offered to candidates for admission to the Royal Military College at each Further Examination, and to Officers of the Militia (not over 23 years of age) at each Competitive Examination

2. All Queen's cadets (British and Indian), and Honorary Queen's cadets nominated by the Secretary of State for India in Council, will have the option of electing whether they will join the Royal Military College for appointment to the Staff Corps, or for commissions in British Cavalry or Infantry. The appointments in the Staff Corps remaining after the claims of the Queen's cadets and Honorary Queen's cadets (Indian) have been satisfied, will be allotted in order of merit to successful candidates who have elected for the Indian Staff Corps at the Sandhurst Further and Militia Competitive Examinations.

3. Election shall be final, and no candidate for the Staff Corps will thereafter be eligible for transfer to the Cavalry or Infantry of the Line except by exchange.

4. After the final examination at the Royal Military College, and in the case of Militia candidates after the Competitive Examination, a successful candidate will be gazetted as Second Lieutenant on the unattached list of the British Army, and will be provided with passage to India. He will be required to embark within two months of being gazetted. From the date of first commission to the date of arrival in India he will receive the British pay of his rank.

5. On arrival in India he will be attached to a British regiment, and will receive Indian pay and allowances as an Officer of the British Army. While so attached, leave (excepting privilege leave) may only be granted to him on medical certificate, and during any leave out of India he will be restricted to the British pay of his rank.

6. At the expiration of one year's actual duty with a British regiment (exclusive of all leave excepting privilege leave) he will be admitted to the Staff Corps in the rank of Second Lieutenant and appointed to a Native Regiment.

7. At the expiration of one year's actual duty with a Native regiment (exclusive of all leave excepting privilege leave) he will be promoted to the rank of Lieutenant, provided he has passed the Examination in the Native languages by the lower standard. Should he not then have passed the Examination, he will only be promoted from date of passing. An exception to this rule may be made, with the sanction of the Secretary of State for India, in the case of delay or illness resulting from field service.

8. He will not be permitted to remain in the Service unless during the first three years from date of first commission his retention therein is shown to be in every respect desirable.

9. Within three years of the date of his admission to the Staff Corps he will be required to pass the higher standard Examination in the Native lamguages and the professional Examination required under Indian regulations.

10. Until he shall have passed the above Examinations he will not be eligible to hold any permanent or officiating appointment (regimental or other) except that of Squadron or Wing Officer.

11. Should he not pass the Examinations within the period of three years, he will be removed from the Service and be provided with passage to Europe; he may also be allowed, at the discretion of the Government of India, a gratuity not exceeding one year's British pay of his rank.

12. No extension of the period within which the Examinations must be passed will be allowed except on account of delay or illness resulting from employment on field service, and only then with the special sanction of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

13. Any officer of the British Army who may be specially selected for exceptional qualifications for service in India may, with the concurrence of the Secretary of State for War, be admitted to the Indian Staff Corps.

14. An exchange may be permitted between an officer of the British Service and an Officer of the Staff Corps, provided that both Officers have under seven years' service, that the Officer exchanging into the Staff Corps is fully qualified for staff employ under Indian regulations, that immediate and suitable employment is available for him, and that he is physically fit for service in India.

15. Under special circumstances or in special cases, the Secretary of State for India may deviate from any of the above regulations.

APPENDIX.

3. The period of probation must be passed with Native troops, and the date of joining a Native Corps shall be the date of appointment on probation.

4. Should the Officer not have passed the Examination in the Native languages by the lower standard before joining a Native Corps, he will be required to do so within 18 months of so joining, otherwise he will cease to be a Probationer.

5. After the expiration of one year from the date of appointment on probation, the Probationer, provided he has passed the higher standard Examination in the Native languages and the professional Examination required under regulation, may be admitted to the Staff Corps.

6. On the expiration of 18 months from date of appointment on probation he will be admitted to the Staff Corps, whether he has passed the above Examinations or not, on production of certificates.

7. Should he not have passed the above Examinations before admission to the Staff Corps, he will be allowed a further period of 18 months (or three years in all from date of appointment or probation) within which to pass.

8. Should he not pass within this period he will be removed from the Service.

PART. II.—OFFICERS OF CORPS SERVING OUT OF INDIA.

9. An Officer of a corps serving out of India will be eligible to become a Probationer on the following conditions:—

I. He shall, at time of application, have completed one year's actual regimental duty; in the case of Officers of the West India Regiment, two years.

II. He shall not, on the 1st January of the trooping season during which he embarks, be more than 25 years of age.

12. The period of probation must be passed with Native troops; the candidate will be appointed to a Native Corps on arrival in India, and the date of joining it will be the date of his appointment on probation.

13. Before the expiration of 18 months from date of joining a Native Corps he must pass the Examination in the Native languages by the lower standard; otherwise he will cease to be a Probationer

14. After the expiration of one year from the date of joining a Native Corps, the Probationer, provided he has passed the higher standard Examination in the Native languages and the professional Examinations required under regulation, may be admitted to the Staff Corps.

15. On the expiration of 18 months from the date of joining a Native Corps, he will be admitted to the Staff Corps, whether he has passed the above Examinations or not, on production of the certificates.

16. Should he not have passed the above Examinations before admission to the Staff Corps, he will be allowed a further period of 18 months (or three years in all from date of joining a Native Corps) within which to pass.

17. Should he not pass within this period, he will be removed from the Service.

PART III.—GENERAL REGULATIONS.

18. The names of Probationers will be retained on the lists of their British regiments until they are admitted to the Staff Corps.

19. During the period of probation it will be open to the Commanding Officer of a Native Corps to report that he thinks the Officer, either from temper or other cause, is unsuited for employment with Native troops; in which case the Commander-in-Chief in India, should he be satisfied that such is the case, will post the Officer to his own regiment, or to a battalion of it, if one be serving in India, or, if not, to any regiment or battalion of the Line in that country, pending orders from His Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief.

20. The same course will be followed in the case of an Officer who may not, at the expiration of 18 months' duty, be able to obtain the necessary certificates for admission to the Staff Corps.

21. No Officer will be allowed to resign his probationary appointment except on sufficient grounds to be approved by the Commander-in-Chief in India, the Government of India, the Secretary of State for India in Council, and His Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief. An Officer applying for permission to resign will be required to produce a declaration and a certificate in the Forms F and G, and the Commander-in-Chief in India, if satisfied with the reasons given, will at once post the Officer to his own regiment, or to a battalion of it, if one be serving in India, or, if not, to any regiment or battalion of the Line in that country, his resignation being sent forward at once for the final orders of the Secretary of State for India and His Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief.

22. A Probationer obtaining leave out of India, either on private affairs, or for more than six months on medical certificate, will be held to have resigned his probationary appointment.

23. Until the completion of three years' service a Probationer shall remain subject to the provisions of the Royal Warrant of the 5th December 1888.

24. When an officer is ultimately admitted to the Staff Corps the date assigned to his admission shall be that of his first appointment on probation.

25. An Officer shall not be eligible to hold any permanent or officiating appointment, regimental or other (except that of Squadron or Wing Officer), until he shall have passed the higher standard Examination in the Native languages and the professional Examination required under regulation.

26. No extension of the prescribed period within which these Examinations must be passed will be allowed, except on account of illness or delay resulting from employment on field service, and only then with the special sanction of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

27. An Officer removed from the Service under paragraph 8 or paragraph 17 will receive a free passage to Europe and a gratuity of one year's English pay of his rank.

28. Under special circumstances, or in special cases, the Secretary of State for India may deviate from any of the above regulations.

NOTE.—These regulations must be understood as referring only to admission to the Staff Corps and to probation, and not to the conditions of service in the Staff Corps.

THE AGRA BANK.

The ordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Agra Bank (Limited) was held on Thursday at the City Terminus Hotel. Mr. W. L. Watson presided, and, in moving the adoption of the report, stated that, from a financial point of view, the past year had been one of the most eventful in recent times. While this was true of banking generally, it was especially true as regarded Eastern banking. During the year there had been in India an extraordinary fluctuation in the rates of interest. They began the year with a great scarcity of money in India. For some reason, never fully explained, the two great Presidency banks, which were the depositories of the Government balances, began the busy season at the opening of the year with the very inadequate aggregate balance, taking the rupee at par, of £2,700,000. The consequence was that, when the usual demands were made upon them, they were unable to meet the requirements of trade. Severe stringency set in, and the discount rate ran up to 12 per cent., the business of the trading community being much hampered. In the case of their own bank their funds were well in hand at the time, and they were able to take some advantage of the situation. The balance of the Presidency banks at the end of the year had risen to no less than £12,000,000. The bank rate in India went down in September to 3 per cent., and money had been for some time almost unlendable there. They had also had to contend with fluctuations of exchange such as had not been experienced for a long period. They began the year at about 1s. 5d., and, owing entirely to the resolution of the United States Congress to increase the Treasury purchases of silver and the speculation founded thereon—but in no wise owing to any change in the balance of trade with the East—the rate was run up last August to as high as 1s. 8¾d. (he was taking the transfer rates). The rise, however, was very short-lived, and the rate dropped away again until they finished the year at 1s. 6 3-16d., and now the rate was 1s. 5¼d. Such an advance as they had last autumn in the rate had not been an unmixed good to the trading community, at all events. They had made a fair rate of profit on their exchange business. They proposed to divide £50,000 of the balance at their disposal, and to place the remainder (£15,000) to the reserve fund. The question of reducing the capital of the bank had been most carefully gone into by the directors, and they came to the conclusion that it would not be to the interest of the bank to do so. They had considered it prudent and proper, in the interests of the bank, to accept the invitation of the Bank of England to join in the Baring guarantee fund, and they had done so to the extent of £100,000; but there was every reason to suppose that there would be no call on the guarantors. As regarded the future of exchange, international bimetallism seemed as unlikely of realization as ever, and he saw nothing in the position of silver or the probable balance of trade to raise the rate of exchange permanently, but rather the reverse. On this point he was expressing his own views, not committing the other members of the board to them. No doubt, when the new session of Congress in the United States began, attempts would again be made by the Western men and the representatives of the silver States to carry enactments calculated to raise the price of silver, but he greatly feared that all such attempts to bolster the market artificially would, as in the last attempt, only have a temporary effect. The policy of the directors was to build up such a reserve fund as would cover all fluctuations in exchange, and they must ask the shareholders to exercise some self-denial in the matter of dividends until this had been accomplished. Mr. W. L. Alexander seconded the motion. Some discussion followed, in the course of which some of the shareholders criticised the action which the directors had taken in joining in the Baring guarantee fund, though other speakers commended them for having done so. One shareholder argued that the results of the year's working were most inadequate, and compared very unfavourably with those obtained by other Eastern banks. The chairman briefly replied, and the motion was adopted.

EAST INDIA (FACTORY ACT).—A Parliamentary paper has just been published containing copies of despatches from the Secretary of State in Council to the Government of India, dated May 15 and July 3, 1890, relating to the amendment of the Indian Factory Act, 1879. On the former date the Secretary of State forwarded a copy of correspondence with the Blackburn Chamber of Commerce on the subject. The following is the general instruction sent in this letter:—"The general principle of all factory legislation, as already adopted in this country and in India, is that life and limb must be protected, and that the health of all women, young persons, and children must, so far as possible, be assured. To this principle Her Majesty's Government have recently, in the Berlin Conference, declared their adhesion, thus recommending it for adoption by the other Powers of Europe. How far this general principle has been already applied in India is a matter for your consideration. As regards any additional factory legislation in India, due regard must be had to the circumstances of that country, which are in many respects different from those of any European nation. But the same general principle is nevertheless applicable, and the object of any such legislation must be to secure without fail, for the various classes of operatives in India, an amount of protection for life and limb and an amount of security for the health of women, young persons, and children not inferior to that which is afforded by the law of England." On the latter date the Secretary of State forwards the proceedings of the Berlin Conference and Mr. Howorth's question in the House of Commons (May 12) on the extension of the Factory Act to the Native States, together with the reply of the Government. He adds, on this latter subject, "Any law passed by the Indian Legislature would be applicable to British India only; but there are factories and gold and coal mines in native States, and we may hope that the numbers of such industries will increase. It is probable that the rulers of such States may be willing to follow the example of the British Government in the matter; and when the new law is passed and in working order your Excellency might see fit to advise some of the chief native States upon the subject."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA."

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of

EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

BROAD ARROW.

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other Service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week, written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain.

Jeopardy of Life, the Great Danger of Delay.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

HEADACHE AND DISORDERED STOMACH.—"After suffering nearly two and a half years from severe Headache and Disordered Stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your 'FRUIT SALT,' and before I had finished one bottle I found it doing me a great deal of good, and now I am restored to my usual health; and others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, ROBERT HUMPHREYS, Post Office, Barrasford."

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHER SALINES.—"Dear Sir,—Having been in the habit of taking your 'FRUIT SALT' for many years, I think it only right to tell you I consider it a most invaluable medicine, and far superior to all other saline mixtures I have ever tried. I am never without it, as I find it possesses three most desirable qualities—pleasant to the taste, promptly efficacious, and leaves no unpleasant after-effects. I do not wish my name to appear, but you are welcome to make use of this testimonial if it is of service.—A DEVONSHIRE LADY. Jan. 25, 1889.

The Secret of Success.—Sterling Honesty of Purpose. Without it Life is a Sham!—A new invention is brought before the public, and commands success. A score of abominable imitations are immediately introduced by the unscrupulous, who, in copying the original closely enough to deceive the public, and yet not so exactly as to infringe upon legal rights, exercise an ingenuity that, employed in an original channel, could not fail to secure reputation and profit."—ADAMS.

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of Weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storms of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1, 1891.

General Intelligence.

[By Overland Mail.]

The Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 14th March; from N.W.P. and Madras to the 12th March; and from Bengal to the 11th March.

At the meeting of the Supreme Council at Calcutta, March 18, the Bill amending the Merchandise Marks Act was passed, and Reports of the Select Committee on the Oudh Courts and Obsolete Enactments Bill presented.

H.E. the Governor of Bombay goes on an extended tour of the Southern Maratha Country during April.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal will probably also go on tour about the same time, proceeding first to Jalpaigori, and then through Purneah to Nya Dumka in the Sonthal parganas.

The Government of India, it is said, has abandoned the scheme for cutting down the administrative appointments in the Medical Services, and has sent a despatch to that effect to the Secretary of State.

The preliminary census returns for Calcutta show that occupied houses number 65,147, with a population of 416,123 males and 232,123 females, the total being 650,246. These results, however, cannot be regarded as perfectly accurate, as they have not yet been checked. They also do not include the figures for the port or the canals within the municipality, and the area of the present municipality does not correspond with that of the year 1881, so that the population of certain blocks must be added to, and subtracted from, figures of either year before an exact comparison can be made. But it may be said generally that the results show an increase of about 7 per cent. in those wards in which comparison is at present possible.

The census returns for the North-West Provinces and Oudh are now nearly complete. All the Oudh districts show a large increase, and so do the densely populated districts, such as Gorakhpore in the North-West Provinces. The districts of Mainpuri, Farukhabad, Jalaun, and Etah, which have been depressed of late years, have fallen back. The evidence of increased colonization on the Dun is seen in a rise of 16 per cent. in the population, and the hill districts generally show a very large advance.

The rumour that there is to be a big camp-of-exercise at Delhi next cold weather has been again revived. There does not seem, however, the least chance of anything of the kind, as the annual allotment for such camps all over India has for the present been limited to one lakh of rupees, the Government being unable to spare more money owing to the uncertainty about exchange, and the steady decline in the opium revenue.

The Lahore paper hears that the Government of India contemplate abolishing the title of Prime Minister which Raja Amar Singh, of Jummu, now holds. He will merely be known as President of the State Council for Kashmir and Jummu.

It is intended to maintain the present small garrison in Sikkim during the hot weather.

Rumours are current at Bhamo of trouble brewing among the surrounding Kachin tribes, aggravated by prospect of a raid of Chinese filibusters from across the frontier. The garrison is accordingly to be strengthened by 100 men of the 4th King's Royal Rifles from Mingyan.

The services of Mr. Egerton, District Superintendent of Police at Ajmere, are to be lent to the Oodeypore State for settlement work. Mr. Clogstoun, Personal Assistant to the Inspector-General of Police in Bengal, will succeed him.

The Public Offices at Allahabad will probably close on the 4th of April and re-open at Naini Tal on the 13th idem.

A Calcutta paper says that a paper manufactory, under the auspices of several respectable zemindars of Behar, is to be started at Patna under competent European supervision, and with this view arrangements have just been completed in Calcutta to import the necessary plant and machinery from England. The services of a competent foreman are also to be imported from home, and a certain well-known paper manufacturer of England has been addressed on the subject. It is anticipated that the venture will succeed, as Behar possesses an abundance of the raw materials suited to the manufacture of paper.

Mr. P. Gray, C.S., officiates as Registrar of the High Court at Allahabad for Mr. Fraser, who takes six months' furlough.

According to the official report the landslips which occurred about the end of last month on the Sind Peshin Railway in the neighbourhood of Mudgorge station were even more serious than was at first thought. About five hundred feet of hillside came down, filling up a cutting with mud and boulders. Some thousand feet of railway were obliterated, and pushed three hundred feet out of line. At present the engineer in charge estimates that it will need a month to restore the line, but if the rains continue the work will take much longer, and further slips are to be expected. With favourable weather it is hoped that it will be found possible to construct a line for temporary use.

The Sibi annual horse show, which has now come to be about the most important event of its kind, has just concluded, and appears to have been an unqualified success. Remounts of an aggregate value of Rs. 23,000 were purchased by the Government officers. The show of bullocks was also excellent. The Remount Agent highly approved of the young stock and brood mares, which he said were the finest he had seen in India. There were over 1,200 entries in all.

The Lord Bishop of Calcutta proceeds to England on leave by the P. and O. steamer Rome, which leaves Bombay on April 7.

Mr. Watkins, one of the oldest solicitors in Calcutta, died on March 18.

Messrs. W. H. Allen & Co. have published Sketches of Some Distinguished Indian Women. By Mrs. E. F. Chapman, with a Preface by the Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava. The sketches include the following:—

The Pundita Ramabai Sarasvati;
Dr. Anandibai Joshee;
The Maharani of Kuch Behar;
Cornelia Sorabji.

Lady Dufferin says in her Preface: "I am sure this little book will be read with interest by everyone who takes it up; while to those who have thought of Indian women, or who have worked for their welfare in any way, it will come as a message of hope and encouragement, and, as such, will give them unmitigated pleasure."

NOTES.

ALL other news from India, by wire or post, is overshadowed by that which appears this morning telling of the disaster which has befallen the British force at Manipur. It is difficult, in the absence of full details, to understand how this catastrophe has happened. A revolutionary party—common in all Native States—had deposed the protégé of the Government of India, Maharaja Chandra Kirti Singh, K.C.S.I., and the Government sent the well-known and able Chief Commissioner of Assam, Mr. J. W. Quinton, to restore order and arrest the ringleaders of the conspiracy. According to Reuter's and the Times' correspondents' telegrams, Mr. Quinton advanced with an escort of about 400 Goorkhas, crossed the border, and having reached the scene of disturbance, summoned a durbar for the purpose of restoring order—seizing the conspirators and re-placing the deposed Maharaja in authority. On the same night, however, the camp of the Chief Commissioner, situated between Kohima and Manipur, was surprised by the hostile tribesmen, and after two days' fighting, the Goorkhas having exhausted their ammunition, were overpowered and massacred, their officers being either killed or taken prisoners. Such is the non-official account said to have been brought into Assam territory by two fugitive Assam frontier policemen.

ACCORDING to their story, the Goorkhas, numbering from 450 to 470 men, fought splendidly under their British officers for forty-eight hours, until (when their ammunition was exhausted) Mr. Quinton gave the order, Sauve qui peut. This part of the story must, however, be received with considerable doubt. Mr. Quinton was not likely to be in command of the escort, or to give, in face of a native enemy, such an order to British soldiers, who still had their bayonets and kookries. The Sauve qui peut, which is of Waterloo origin, may or may not have been uttered by Napoleon; but it may be taken for granted that no such order was given at Manipur, and that the formation of Goorkhas stood fast until overpowered by numbers—as the 66th were at Maiwand. But it is still hard to understand how a determined, gallant body of men, armed as the Goorkhas were, failed to cut their way through an undisciplined foe, armed chiefly with spears, bows, and arrows, but with few, if any, rifles.

"30th March, 1891.—Regret serious disaster has occurred Manipur. Mr. Quinton, Chief Commissioner Assam, arrived there 22nd March with escort of 470 men, 42nd Bengal Infantry, 44th Bengal Infantry. Only accounts are from fugitives to Kohima and Tammu, and not very distinct, but apparently Chief Commissioner attempted arrest Senapati on the afternoon of 23rd March, and Manipuris, aided by Kukis, probably brought in for purpose, resisted and attacked escort, and, after severe fighting, overpowered and destroyed it on the 24th March, when escort's ammunition was exhausted. Lieutenant Brackenbury, 44th Bengal Infantry, known to be killed. Fate of other British officers nothing known, though unfortunately there is reason to anticipate all are prisoners or killed. The following were with Mr. Quinton:—Civil Officers—Cossins, assistant-secretary; Grimwood, political; also Mrs. Grimwood. Lieutenants Gurdon and Woods, Assistant-Commissioners, and, possibly, Mr. Melville, Telegraph Department. Military officers—Colonel Skene, Captain Butcher, Lieutenants Chatterton and Lugard, and Surgeon Calvert, 12th Bengal Infantry; Lieutenant Simpson, 43rd Bengal Infantry; Captain Boileau and Lieutenant Brackenbury, 44th Bengal Infantry; Captain Cowley, with two hundred Rifles, 43rd Bengal Infantry, from Cachar, was expected to arrive at Manipur 27th March. No news from this detachment; but it is believed that Manipuris intended to attack them at a difficult pass. Lieutenant Grant, 4th Goorkha regiment, 2nd Battalion, was advancing from Tammu on Manipur, with eighty rifles, will be recalled if possible, necessary action being taken to send reinforcements, and to prevent spread of disorder in neighbouring country."

THIS is bad and sad enough news in itself, but we cling to the hope that when further and more reliable intelligence is received, the disaster will not have been so overwhelming as at first represented. It is possible, of course, that, as reported in one account, only one British officer has been killed, and that the rest are prisoners. But if the gallant rank and file of the Goorkhas have all perished, it is hardly likely that their British officers would have allowed this sacrifice without sharing with their men the same fate. It would not do to tell in Gath or Ascalon that a body of British officers allowed their men to be massacred before their eyes, and themselves accepted the rôle of prisoners or hostages. Therefore, again we say that we cannot accept the story in its dire entirety, but look forward with hope to some modifying accounts of the disaster being made public before many more hours.

BUT with the slender information which the public has before it, it is rather too bad in some of our London contemporaries, writing from the safe and confident "intellectuality" of Fleet Street, apportioning blame or damning with faint praise any English officer who had responsibility on his shoulders at that critical time. Yet the Daily News takes upon itself to say of Mr. Quinton, "His courage carried him too far. He committed a splendid imprudence." What does the Liberal organ know about the facts of the case beyond what the very unsatisfactory telegrams just published have stated?

BUT another Liberal organ goes on the same tack: "It may appear hereafter that Mr. Quinton acted imprudently in taking action when he had so small a force for his protection, and that he under-rated the unpopularity of the Rajah whose authority he had gone to restore." This journal adds: "We should like to hear the 'rebel' view of the 'massacre' at Manipur." The meaning intended to be inferred from this is, that Mr. Quinton and his force had no business there, and that British "ill-advised zeal," therefore, received a not undeserved check!

THE HANDEL FESTIVAL.—Our Great National Festival in honour of Handel's music—celebrated at intervals of three years—will come round in June next. There is every prospect that the extraordinary demonstration will this year be made with particularly brilliant features. Among the hoped for Royal visitors may probably be the Emperor of Germany, whose presence in this country will, it is trusted, accord with the days of performance; and if he come we shall be able to present to him a peculiarly significant musical result that, it is not too much to say, could not be offered to him with equal completeness of beauty anywhere else. The knowledge of, as well as the admiration for, Handel's music is wide and deep in this country; the knowledge is necessary for the assembling of such a chorus and orchestra as is brought together; the loving admiration, largely partaking of a strong religious feeling, is essential to attracting the vast audiences, who realise the most notable musical result that is ever presented, with its subtle effects of grandeur and pathos. The Crystal Palace is the only arena where the demonstration can be made; and only a long-standing organization could produce it. The 4,000 executants are selected and rehearsed carefully. Only at intervals of three years is it possible to bring them together; they include the cathedral choirs, and the élite of provincial choral societies, who then meet the London body; but every voice is tried and approved, and its natural quality and cultivation ascertained, and the taking part in this Festival is esteemed as an honour. All these singers are diligent students of Handel's music, and hence the exceptional effects of tone and mastery that outdo all other similar performances, even if equal numbers of singers can be assembled. The most eminent of our solo singers are already engaged, and the utmost vigilance is exercised to secure the best. Madame Albani, Miss Macintyre, Madame Emily Squire, and Madame Nordica will be among the sopranos; Madame Patey will be in America, but Miss Marian McKenzie has been already engaged. Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr. Barton McGuckin, Mr. Santley, Mr. W. H. Brereton, and Mr. Bridson complete the list up to the present. Mr. August Manns will be, as heretofore, the conductor. Alterations and renovations are being made in the great orchestra and its immense roof. Mr. Manns is organizing the provincial rehearsals that will be held at important county centres, and the metropolitan rehearsals are in active preparation. Every endeavour is being made to render the coming celebration in June the most perfect performance in the long line of the great Handel Festivals

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

BY TELEGRAPH.

(Times Correspondents.)

DISASTER ON THE ASSAM FRONTIER.

SLAUGHTER OF INDIAN TROOPS.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 30.

The Government has received most serious news from Manipore. Mr. J. W. Quinton, C.S.I., Chief Commissioner of Assam, had gone there with an escort of about 400 strong to settle affairs, and he appears to have been attacked on the 24th inst. by the adherents of the Senaputty, or Commander-in-Chief.

Two fugitives have arrived at Kohima and two at Tammoo, on the Burmah side. They state that fighting went on during the whole of the 24th and part of the 25th, till the troops' ammunition was exhausted, when Mr. Quinton ordered them to save themselves.

The telegraph wires have been cut, and nothing is known regarding Mr. Quinton's fate. Lieutenant Brackenbury, commanding the escort, was killed. The only other Europeans there were Mr. Grimwood, the British Resident, and his wife, whose fate is also unknown. It is stated that the guns presented by the British Government to the late Maharajah were used against the Residency.

The 3rd Bengal Infantry from Calcutta, the 13th, from Barrackpore, the 2nd Goorkhas, and a mountain battery have been ordered to proceed to Manipore at once, and troops are also being sent from Burmah.

Owing to this news the Viceroy has given up the Kumaon tour and has gone to Simla.

LATER.

The news regarding the attack on Mr. Quinton at Manipore continues to be vague and uncertain, as the wires have been cut on either side of the frontier post at Kohima. It is now stated that the party were surprised near the northern boundary of the State, and apparently the affair was premeditated and got up by the persons who deposed the Maharajah last autumn.

Only Lieutenant Brackenbury is known to be killed, and it is generally supposed that Mr. Quinton and the other missing Europeans are prisoners. Steamers are being taken up for the troops, and the 3rd Bengal Infantry starts to-morrow.

The escort consisted of 450 men of the 42nd Goorkhas, and it is stated that Captain Butcher and Lieutenant Chatterton were with the party, but this is also uncertain.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 30.

Yesterday two Goorkhas, belonging to the Assam Frontier Police, reached Kohima, the station nearest to the Assam-Manipore boundary, and brought the disastrous intelligence that a British force had been cut to pieces by some of the savage tribes of Manipore, and that the British Commissioner of Assam and seven British officers were missing.

Some while ago the Rajah of Manipore, at whose capital resides a British political agent, was deposed by the chief of one of the warrior tribes which infest the country. The Rajah made an appeal to the Government of India, and Mr. J. W. Quinton, C.S.I., Chief Commissioner for Assam, whose headquarters are at Shillong, started for Manipore with a considerable escort, consisting of detachments of the 42nd and 44th Goorkha Light Infantry.

Having advanced across the border and reached the seat of disturbance, Mr. Quinton summoned a durbar of the chiefs for the purpose of obtaining the arrest of the rebellious chief who had overthrown the Rajah. On the same night the camp of the Commissioner, which was at some point south of Kohima, and between that station and Manipore, was attacked by tribesmen.

For two whole days the assault was withstood and the foe driven back, but at length the ammunition of the gallant Goorkhas, who had fought splendidly under the direction of their British officers, was exhausted, and Mr. Quinton then gave the order for a Sauve qui peut.

The refugees report that fully 450 to 470 Goorkhas were killed. With regard to the officers, the accounts differ slightly. One says that one British officer is known to have been killed, but does not specify his name. The same report states that Mr. Quinton and his staff were seized, and that their fate is unknown.

Another account says that Colonel Skene, commanding the 42nd Ghoorkha Light Infantry, Captain G. H. Butcher, Lieutenants E. J. Lugard and J. B. Chatterton, of the same regiment; Captain T. S. Boileau, second in command of the 44th Goorkha Light Infantry; Lieutenant L. W. Brackenbury, of the same regiment, and Mr. Calvert, and, finally, Mr. Quinton are missing.

There seems to be little doubt that the attack on the British camp by the Manipuris, who are famous as much for their treachery and cunning as for their bravery and indifference to danger, was deliberately planned. They had, for one thing, cut the telegraph wires in order to prevent Mr. Quinton's force from communicating with Assam.

As soon as the news of the slaughter reached Simla, the Viceroy summoned the Council to meet there in haste.

Two native regiments quartered in Assam were at once despatched to the Manipore frontier, and the 3rd Bengal Infantry start in the morning. It is believed that Mr. Quinton was not accompanied on the fatal expedition by his son and daughter.

LATER.

Mr. Quinton and his escort reached Manipore on the 22nd inst., and were well received.

The following troops have been ordered to proceed to Kohima forthwith:—13th Bengal Infantry, 1st and 2nd Goorkhas, 8th Bengal Mountain Battery, 36th Bengal Infantry (Sikhs), 3rd Bengal Infantry.—Reuter.

SIMLA, MARCH 30.

The Government has received intelligence of a terrible massacre of British Goorkha troops in Assam. The British camp was attacked by hostile tribesmen for two whole days, and 470 Goorkhas are reported killed. Seven British officers and the Commissioner for Assam are missing.—Reuter.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 30.

Brigadier-General Lockhart, commanding the reserve brigade of the Black Mountain force, arrived at Palosi yesterday to consult and receive orders. His brigade concentrates at Derband to-day.

The enemy on the Baio heights are increasing, their number now being about two thousand. The British troops at Mardan will make a demonstration on the Bonerwal border.

MADRAS, MARCH 30.

A serious fracas occurred last night at Tuticorin between Arabs and Marawas. The police were compelled to summon the assistance of the 4th Pioneer Corps to quell the disturbance.—Reuter.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 29.

The excitement as to the Age of Consent and the Factories Bills which has prevailed for the last three months is now rapidly subsiding, and the Viceroy and most of the members of the Government being on tour, there is for the moment little to occupy public attention.

The Budget has attracted but little criticism, although some newspapers, while admitting it to be satisfactory on the whole, have selected particular portions for attack. Thus the Pioneer argues that from an economic point of view the famine insurance fund is a bad mode of saving money, and hopes that next year the finances will permit of a reduction in the salt tax, the abolition of the rice export duty, and the raising of the minimum of taxable incomes. The Calcutta Englishman protests against the growing military expenditure. The Times of India, which is published at Bombay, considers the financial statement eminently satisfactory, though the satisfaction is tempered by an uncomfortable feeling that what may be called the legitimate surplus arising from revenue and economy might have been turned into a deficit had the exchange been unfavourable. Sir David Barbour's remarks on the currency question meet with general, although not universal, approval. Hope is expressed on all sides that the Government may make a serious attempt to grapple with the difficulties of the exchange problem.

The section of the native Press and the public which opposed the Age of Consent Bill is now divided into two parties. The more moderate and sensible, while not concealing their disappointment, urge their countrymen to accept the measure loyally, and carefully to watch its working, with the view of suggesting any further safeguard that may be found necessary. The other party talk vaguely of keeping up the agitation and petitioning the Secretary of State to veto the Act; but it seems evident that the storm has spent its force, and it may be hoped that the last sounds of opposition will speedily die out.

Regarding the new Factories Act, public opinion has expressed itself clearly and unmistakably in accord with Mr. Mackay, Mr. Nugent, and Mr. Nulkar, summaries of whose speeches were telegraphed last Sunday. The belief, right or wrong, is universal in this country that the pressure brought to bear on the Government is due partly to Lancashire manufacturers' dread of Indian competition, partly to ignorance of the real conditions of Indian factory labour. It may be conceded that there is some need of reform in the Bombay mills, and the new Act will meet this need, but it is generally felt and said that the utmost limit of restriction has now been reached, and there can be no doubt that any attempt to carry it further will lead to a widespread and dangerous agitation throughout the country.

Lieutenant-General Sir George Chesney, K.C.B., left Calcutta for Madras yesterday. On the 20th of next month he will vacate the office of military member of the Council, which he has filled successfully for the last five years. Great disappointment is felt in the Indian army at the selection as his successor of an officer in the British service who has had little experience of this country. No one, of course, dreams of questioning General Brackenbury's high professional character and distinguished services, but the appointment, taken in conjunction with the fact that several of the highest Indian military posts are now filled by British officials, is held to indicate the desire on the part of the Horse Guards to monopolize the prizes of the Indian army to the exclusion of officers of the local forces; and, apart from the fact that the military membership of the Council is an office requiring Indian experience, there is a probability that this appointment may hereafter lead to awkward and apparently unforeseen complications. As the law stands, only two of the five ordinary members of the Council can be selected from beyond the limits of the Indian services. This provision was meant to give a wider range in the choice of financial and legal members. In a few weeks the two unreserved posts will be filled by Sir A. Miller and General Brackenbury, so that when Sir David Barbour's term expires his successor must necessarily be taken from the Covenanted Civil Service.

The resistance offered to the Black Mountain expedition during the last ten days amply proves that the punishment inflicted on the tribes in 1888 was not sufficient, and that the colony of Wahabee refugees from India still retains some of its power and influence. Evidently a severer lesson and a more prolonged occupation of the country will be necessary, and General Ellis is not likely to return till peace is fairly established and the disturbed tract thoroughly opened up by roads. A telegram, dated Palosi, of Friday night, says:—"The enemy having cut the water-supply, General Hammond advanced this morning and captured the Akazai village of Surmal after slight opposition. We lost two wounded; the enemy about 80. The reserve brigade, on reaching Haripur, will march to its base at Derband and there await orders."

A Madras telegram of yesterday states that Sir Madhava Rao is again very ill and in a critical condition.

In his annual address to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce last month, the president suggested that a finance sub-committee should be appointed to consider the currency question, in view of the serious injury which the frequent and violent fluctuations in exchange are causing to trade. This committee has obtained from Sir David Barbour an outline of his personal ideas how a gold standard could be introduced into India. The document, which is a very important one, has not yet been made public. The following is an outline of Sir David Barbour's scheme, which, it should be understood, represents his personal views, and in no way commits the Indian Government:—

The first measure would be to stop the free coinage of silver.

The second would be to open the mints to the free coinage of gold. Anyone bringing gold would be entitled to have it coined into gold coins of, say, 10-rupee and 20-rupee pieces. The weight and fineness of the coins would be such that the par of exchange between them and the sovereign would be that exchange which it was desired to establish; for example, if it were desired to establish an exchange of 1s. 5d., then the 10-rupee coin would contain gold worth 170d.

Thirdly, when the above measures were carried out, it might be found that no gold was brought to the mints, and that the exchange fell below 1s. 5d. This would be a sign that the currency was redundant, either by silver rupees coming out of hoards or back from foreign countries. The only remedy would be for the Government to reduce the silver rupee currency until the exchange rose to 1s. 5d. This might involve considerable expenditure, but there is no other remedy.

Fourthly, a practical difficulty remains. The 10-rupee and 20-rupee coins would be too valuable for ordinary use in India, therefore the Government must be prepared at every great centre to give silver rupees in exchange for gold coins to any amount, and every treasury must be ordered to give rupees for gold coins as far as possible. The gold coins thus accumulated by the Government would cause no loss, as they could take the place of silver in the paper currency reserve, or be shipped to England in case of need.

Fifthly, Sir David Barbour adds, the operation would be the greatest and most difficult of the kind ever undertaken; it would have far-reaching effects, and ought not to be attempted unless under the pressure of necessity.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 29.

The Viceroy on Saturday opened the Gola Pillibheet Railway in Oude. In his speech on the occasion, his Excellency reiterated the views he expressed at the opening of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway on the 3rd inst., denying that the Government wished to keep the entire railway system under its own control, or look askance at private enterprise so long as reasonable terms could be secured. Lord Lansdowne also dwelt on the importance of efficient railway communication as a means of preventing famine.

The new line completes the direct connection between Lucknow and Pillibheet.

The Chinese envoys arrived at Gnatong on Saturday, and were expected to leave there yesterday for Darjeeling.—Reuter.

BURMA.

RANGOON, MARCH 29.

No further fighting is reported from Wuntho. Between three and four thousand stand of arms have already been captured or given up in Wuntho, although but a small portion of the territory has yet been searched. This shows how thoroughly the Tsawbwa was arming his people. Two brothers of the Tsawbwa and his first cousin have surrendered.

The formal decision of the Government of India in regard to the annexation of Momeik has not yet been received; the delay is probably due to the removal of the Government from Calcutta to Simla. Sir A. Mackenzie has established a military post in the town of Momeik, and has strengthened the military police at the Ruby Mines, so that immediate action can be taken when the Viceroy's sanction is received.

At Shwebo, in Upper Burmah, a sepoy of the 32nd Madras Infantry ran amuck yesterday, killing a subadar and then shooting himself.

Sir A. Mackenzie has left Rangoon for Moulmein, whence he will go to Mergui to inspect the tin mines, which promise to become of some importance.

RANGOON, MARCH 28.

Mo Ba, an important Wuntho Boh, who was supposed to have been killed during the recent fighting at Kawlin, has surrendered to Inspector Kenny at Pinlebu.—Reuter.

THE MANIPUR DISASTER.

(Times.)

Since the battle of Maiwand, no such serious disaster has befallen the British arms in India as that which is reported from the small Native State of Manipore. Mr. Quinton, the Chief Commissioner for Assam, who had gone with an escort into Manipore on a political mission, has been treacherously attacked by insurrectionary tribesmen. His escort, consisting of from 450 to 470 Goorkhas, has been cut to pieces; while Mr. Quinton himself and six or seven British officers are stated to be "missing"—the hope that the majority of these have not fallen in the general massacre apparently resting on the probability that the Manipuris would recognise the value of English hostages, and on the statement that one only, Lieutenant Brackenbury, is known for certain to have been killed. The calamity appears to be terribly complete. Nothing is left of the expedition except the four fugitives who have brought the ill tidings to British territory. In one respect this disaster resembles many others in the history of our relations with savage or semi-savage communities. It is the first that people in this country have heard of any expedition to Manipore at all. As not more than a handful of observers knew that a Zulu war was proceeding until Isandlana brought the fact home in a very disagreeable way, so it is here, except that the ignorance prevailing concerning Manipore is many degrees darker. We have heard a good deal about the Black Mountain and Lushai expeditions, and about the Tsawbwa's rebellion, but calamity has come from a quarter where danger was wholly unsuspected. Now that the blow has fallen it may teach us cogently how multiform and ubiquitous is the responsibility of maintaining peace on the Indian frontier.

(Standard.)

The news of the destruction of a British force of nearly five hundred men, and the capture, if not the murder, of the Ruler of a great Indian Province, is calculated to send a painful thrill through all orders of English society. Since the massacre of the Cavagnari Mission, nothing has occurred at all comparable to it in melancholy interest. There is, of course, no parallel between the two calamities in point of political significance. The attack on the British Envoy at Cabul marked, for the moment, the humiliating miscarriage of a policy upon which our Imperial credit and security were staked; while the gravest consequence that need be apprehended from the catastrophe in Manipur is the addition of another to the long list of our frontier expeditions. But if we look only to the extent of our loss in gallant soldiers, and to the tragic completeness of the surprise, the misfortune stands almost alone in the annals of Indian administration.

(Daily News.)

It is one more little war. There is no way out of it, and unfortunately it is a war in a rather disturbed region. To the south lies Burma not yet completely pacified, to the north Thibet, which gave us some trouble about Sikkim two or three years ago. The Shan States, with which we have had no little difficulty, are in the same quarter. The downfall of Theebaw released them from their loose dependence on Mandalay, and they showed a strong disposition to set up in the business of government for themselves. In such matters it is not advisable to carry the view very far afield. If it were, it might be shown that Burma brings us by many marches nearer to Tonquin, and that in Tonquin we come into a sort of rivalry with France. It is not a hostile rivalry, and there is no reason to suppose that it ever will be, but both Burma and Tonquin are new starting-points for China. The situation is complicated by the fact that China strongly objects to be the prize of this race between two great commercial Powers.

(Daily Telegraph.)

Very serious as the loss of life among our Nepaulese levies must be considered, the affair would not warrant anything like a panic, or even serious political emotion, if it were not that we can never afford in India to be beaten. The Viceroy, on receipt of this news at Simla, instantly summoned his Council to discuss the situation. Two native regiments quartered in Assam were immediately despatched to the frontier, and the 3rd Bengal Infantry was to start within eight hours of the arrival of the disastrous intelligence. All this means that the usual indispensable energy is being displayed, which can and will have but one result, that is, the rooting out from the infested districts of these desperate and dangerous tribes. If, however, they have made prisoners of our Chief Commissioner and of any of the gallant officers whose names are mentioned, these wild people will hold against us a very awkward lever, and we may have much trouble before we come to close quarters with them. Nor can we disguise from ourselves that the news of this military catastrophe will pass on the wings of the wind through India, not without temporary damage to that prestige by which our power is most of all sustained. For this reason a prompt and energetic and completely victorious termination of the affair must be obtained at any cost of strength and money.

Manipur is a native state lying to the south of Assam, in the north-eastern corner of India. On the north it is bounded by the Angámi country; on the west by the British district of Cáchár, on the east by the Kubo Valley and Upper Burma, and on the south by the country of the Lushais, Kukis, and Sutis. Its relations with the British Government are conducted through a Political Agent, who, in matters connected with Assam, is under the control of the Chief Commissioner of Assam. The State consists principally of a large valley, 650 square miles in size, lying in the midst of the mountainous country stretching between Assam, Cáchár, Burma, and Chittagong. In population it is estimated to reach the total of 139,000 persons, of whom 74,000 are hillmen and 65,000 are Manipuris. The people of the valley are chiefly Hindus, while the hillmen, who inhabit the mountainous tract of country under Manipur rule, are divided into Nágás and Kukis. It is worth mention that the game of hockey on horseback was formerly almost peculiar to this State, though it has now become popular in India and England under the name of polo.

According to the Times of India of Jan. 3, 1891, a revolution broke out in Manipur in September of last year, when the Maharajah, who was alleged to be half imbecile, was eventually induced to resign in favour of his mother and brother, the latter being the heir-apparent. There was some desultory firing on both sides, but nobody seems to have been much hurt. The Maharajah has four brothers, all sons of Kirti Sinh by different wives, and there seems to have always been a good deal of jealousy among the quartette (despite the fact that they hold between them all the important offices of the State), as well as disloyalty to the reigning power.

The military force employed in the Province of Assam consisted, a few years ago, of the 34th Regiment Native Infantry, stationed at Cáchár; the 42nd Regiment Assam Light Infantry, stationed at Kohimá, in the Nágá Hills; the 43rd Regiment Native Infantry, stationed at Dibrugarh; and the 44th Regiment Sylhet Light Infantry, stationed at Cáchár—the total strength being 3,325 officers and men.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

(Pioneer.)

It gives one a sort of catch in the throat as we emerge from the clear moonlight air of the long cantonment road and plunge into the thick heavy atmosphere of the native city, so close to the trim bungalows where English children are already plunged in their beauty sleep, and yet so separated from them by the great gulf which lies unbridged between the white and the brown man. What a compound of odours greets us as we enter the murky bazaar! We identify at once stale ghee and assa-fœtida, the smoke of cow-dung and vile paraffin, but there is more than a soupçon of something nastier still, the stuff out of which typhoid and cholera are produced. How strangely silent is this great hive of men! We think of what would be going on in a Western city in these opening hours of the night, the throngs of promenaders, the rattle of the hansoms, the excited crowds pouring out of the theatres, the buzz and bustle of a real live humanity surging along with the determination to drink business and pleasure to the very dregs. But though an Eastern city sinks into its death-like torpor soon after the sun descends below the horizon, to-night everything, perhaps in anticipation of the mysterious enumeration which is going on everywhere, is strangely and weirdly silent. Even the very pariahs seem to share in the general inertia of their masters, and for one night at least in the year are lulled in sulky repose.

Presently round a corner we come upon an enumerator at his work—a gaunt spectacled pleader who squats on the platform before a shop, and checks his register. His only light is a smoky hurricane lantern. How natives manage to do writing work at night in semi-darkness is one of the many mysteries which will remain a secret for ever. The Bunnia who is under examination does not seem quite happy in his mind. He is never free from a lingering suspicion that pen and ink and registers in the hands of an official mean an assault on his income. When he has a nightmare it takes the form of a "tikkus," and this trader is judiciously reticent. His wife, who sits in the shadow behind the door to watch her lord and master and see that he does not make any damaging admissions likely to result in pecuniary loss, grunts assent to his answers as to the names and ages of his children. But she snorts defiance when she is asked if any of them are deaf and dumb or blind or leper. She thinks she has had enough of this ill-omened investigation, and retires to her bower in a state of decidedly nasty temper.

Then for a change we pass into a slum: but it is very different from a regular slum in Darkest England. It is a small yard in which some half a dozen labouring families manage to support existence. The air of the early spring night is still sharp and chilly, so the children of this unromantic alley are all cowering round a smoky fire of rubbish to make up for the decided deficiency in their raiment. Round another fire the men sit and smoke, while a bunch of women chatter loudly behind, until they fall into startled silence as the Hakim enters the courtyard.

And here we come on one or two of the tragedies from which no life, not even that of the stolid fatalistic native, can ever be free. "Rukmini, little girl aged two years—where is she," asks the enumerator. "She disappeared last week." In other words, she has died since the preliminary census, and her ashes have ere this mingled with that of millions of her forefathers down the mighty river which flows calm and stern a few yards below us. "The cold killed her," a woman, who turns out on inquiry to have been her mother, informs in a mechanical way, but still there is a hint of suppressed tears in her voice, and we can guess that poor little Rukmini has left a gap in that wretched household which will not easily be supplied. "And Sundari" (the beautiful one), aged sixty—"where is she?" goes on the enumerator. "Come out, old woman," calls out a rude little girl who seems to take a very intelligent interest in the proceedings; and "the beautiful one," in the shape of a crippled hag, gradually emerges out of a bundle of rags in a corner. She at once becomes communicative and hastens to assure us that her father was a Brahman and a zemindar, and diverges into a long story of a Bunnia and a law-suit and the wrongs that she has suffered, and now the poor old woman is an outcast in the pariah quarter, grinds flour when she can get work, and begs or starves when she is unemployed. She is asked to what tribe of Brahmans she belongs, but with the decencies of existence all knowledge of the time when she possessed a caste in which she once took pride has long since faded into forgetfulness.

And so we go on to the large house of the Rani, where a gang of young Brahmans, whom she supports in return for their religious services, sit droning over their books in a long, dark verandah. And then we come on a hawk-nosed vakil drawing up a plaint for a keen-eyed Mahajan client. Verily this is the Bunnia Raj, as the contemptuous old-fashioned Pathan calls it.

As we go on we try to elicit what the people think of all this queer business. "If the Sirkar meant a tax," calmly responds a sturdy old greybeard, "why should any but the Mahajan be counted? If it was only for famine purposes, why should the Brahman and the Rajput be enumerated?" Here in the towns the people at least pretend to be superior to the prejudices of their rustic brethren. We hear nothing of the tale of human heads needed to strengthen the foundations of the great Calcutta bridge, or the conscription of comely maidens to reward the victorious troops from Kabul and Kandahar. It is one of the mysteriously inscrutable proceedings of the great Sirkar across the seven oceans. Sarkar ka hukm. Bas! as the wiseacres say, and this explanation answers all purposes. Here at least no signs of hostility or suspicion are apparent; on the contrary, there seems a general desire to make the great record as complete and accurate as possible.

At length our weary tour of inspection is over. We return through the weird silent bazaar, where only the rattle of our horses' hoofs break the repose of this city of the dead. Sleep reigns supreme except in one faintly-lit verandah, where beside a flickering mud saucer lamp some careful trader pores over a ledger. We think with a feeling of awe of the millions of names being recorded at this very hour throughout a mighty empire. How many of them, how many of ourselves, will appear at the next decennial enumeration? How is this system of ours going to end? Will population in this reign of peace outrun the resources of production? What new demon of famine and disease will take up the duties of the powers of evil against which our campaign is being conducted? How are we to bridge the gulf which lies open between the thousands in the bazaar and the hundreds in the cantonments? To these and other questions of the sort we have no sufficient answer ere the white tents and lights of home gleam out of the darkness; and so to bed with a prayer that ere the next census comes the wife and babes who sleep so calmly beside us may be safe at home in the little island washed by the Ocean of the West.

THE REGISTRATION DEPARTMENT.

(Englishman.)

A growing revenue and a diminishing expenditure—this is, in brief, the record of the Registration Department during the past three years. Not only is the number of registered documents increasing year by year, but, as we learn, it is increasing at an accelerated pace. Four years ago the total amounted, in round numbers, to seventeen lakhs, in the next twelve months to eighteen, then to more than nineteen, while in 1889–90 it had increased to upwards of twenty-one lakhs of rupees. The proportion of expenditure to receipts has dropped with equally encouraging rapidity. Standing at over sixty-five per cent. in 1886–87, it had fallen steadily to less than fifty-seven per cent. in 1889–90. Turning to the record of Bengal, we find that here alone the number of registrations has risen from seven to nine lakhs in the course of three years. This increase has, however, been coincident with a decided falling off in the aggregate value of property transferred by registered documents. The decrease, amounting to about four hundred lakhs in the course of a single year, has been confined almost entirely to transactions relating to immovable property, but for its cause the Goverment confesses itself quite unable to account. It is noticed in general that whereas the number of deeds registered has shown a considerable progressive rise, the proportion of deeds optionally registered has declined, a fact which the Department appears seriously to have taken to heart. Efforts will be made to establish additional offices wherever the receipts are likely to cover the cost. The Department, it is urged, has not been established for the purpose of realising a profit to Government, but in order to secure a better record of title in land and better evidence of monetary transactions among the people. In the year 1889–90 alone there is a surplus of about fifteen lakhs of rupees, and the Governor-General in Council urges upon local administrations the desirability of devoting these profits to the provision of further facilities for registration.

REGIMENTAL PROPERTY AND HONOURS.

(Madras Mail.)

It will be within general recollection that when the 10th, 12th, and 33rd Madras Infantry were broken up, the Commandants of those corps were ordered to hand over to the Burma battalions which replaced them, the colours, mess, and regimental funds. This procedure, since it had emanated from Simla, was of course regarded by our Allahabad contemporary with approval; and in the case of the 33rd Madras Infantry, whose Commandant had already divided the mess funds amongst the officers belonging to the regiment before he received the order alluded to, much vapouring was indulged in, and it was even announced that the extra retiring annuity of £150 would be withheld from him for doing what he was well within his rights in doing, until he had made good the amount so divided. This high-handed action of the Supreme Government was naturally resented by all interested in the Madras Army, who felt that the Government had added insult to injury. The matter was accordingly fought out. It then had to be admitted that the action of Colonel Richmond, the officer referred to, had been perfectly correct; and that the regimental funds of the disbanded corps legally belonged to them, and not to the battalions that superseded them. The Pioneer then grudgingly acknowledged the correctness of the attitude that was maintained by the Madras military authorities, and supported in these columns. Recently four Hindustani battalions of the Bengal Army have been "converted" (which is the Simla euphemism for disbanded); and bearing the above resumé of facts in mind, the colossal calmness of the following paragraph culled from the Pioneer will become apparent:—

It is, we believe, intended that the mess and band funds of the four Hindustani Levies now under orders for conversion shall be divided among the officers at present serving with the regiments. This is in accordance with the opinion of the legal advisers of the Government of India. The subalterns of a few years' service are in luck's way, as they will receive their share of funds which have been accumulating from a period before they were even born. At the same time everyone will be glad that the Government has done the right thing by these regiments. Any other course, however it might be justified, would have undoubtedly produced an impression of bad faith.

Evidently, therefore, the Pioneer does not believe in the correctness of the old adage, which states that what is "sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander." When it is a question of not only disbanding but despoiling Madras regiments, our contemporary regards the proposed outrage complacently; but as soon as Bengal corps are concerned, it discovers the impropriety of the methods it had approved of when applied to Madras battalions.

In connection with this matter the question may be again asked why the battalions of Burma military police lately added to the Native Army at the expense, of course, of that portion of it recruited in Madras, should be called "Burma Regiments of Madras Infantry," and be permitted to bear honours which were gained by Madras sepoys, while the classes from whom these corps are now recruited were either outside of, or actively hostile to, the British Raj? The title is in itself a meaningless misnomer, and it would appear that the supreme authorities have recognised the fact, and officially style these corps as 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th Burma Battalions. They should, therefore, be no longer permitted to usurp the places in the Army List of the late 10th, 12th, 32nd, and 33rd Madras Infantry. Those corps have been done to death by Simla; the men who filled their ranks have been turned adrift as a warning to all in Southern India who may wish to enter the military service of the Queen Empress; and with their disbandment some names have disappeared from the long roll of honoured battle-fields still borne by the shattered relics of the Old Coast Army. None of the Burma Battalions have the slightest right to the words "Carnatic," "Mysore," "Sholingur," "Amboor," "Assaye," "Cochin," or "Ava" which they have been allowed to filch from the splendid records of the regiments they have superseded. It was not Sikhs, or Kareens, or whatever classes they may be composed of, that gave up their life-blood for the British Government upon the occasions commemorated, but Madras sepoys; and it is not only incongruous but offensive that they should be permitted thus to ransack a history they had no share in making, and thereby to deprive all such decorations of any value whatever.

A NEW SANITARIUM.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

IT will be remembered that, at the beginning of last year, the Government of India sanctioned the trial of Ajmirgarh Hill as a sanitarium for British troops in the Nagpore district. A party of 50 men was sent there last hot season, but the hill was found to be quite unsuitable as a sanitarium, and, sickness breaking out in the detachment, its speedy return to Kamptee was necessitated. Since then the feasibility of selecting a better site, both as to accessibility and healthiness, has engaged the attention of the Bombay authorities. We believe the choice has now fallen on a small plateau north of the village of Chikulda, which is said to be an excellent site for an experimental sanitarium. The fort of Cawilgarh was also mentioned as a likely sanitarium, but it has been condemned by the medical officers who visited both it and Chikulda. The Chikulda plateau is the top of a spur, and is thought to have all the advantages required, namely, accessibility, freedom from dirt, rank vegetation, human habitations, &c., a pure and sufficient water-supply, and space enough to permit the accommodation of as many convalescents as are likely to be sent from Kamptee. The only disadvantage of the site is that there is but little room for expansion in its immediate vicinity. Chikulda is the summer head-quarters of the civil administration of the Hyderabad Assigned Districts, and is reached by rail from Kamptee to Budnera, and thence by a route march of 51 miles. It is proposed to send 100 men there this hot season to test its suitability for sanitarium purposes. There can be no doubt that the troops at Kamptee want a good sanitarium, for the station is known as one where fever strikes heavily. For some time past, convalescents have had to be brought down from Kamptee to Khandalla on the Ghauts near Bombay, and also to Deolali which is said to be a good place for convalescents. This expense will be saved should Chikulda turn out to be a suitable sanitarium.

POPULAR WEALTH IN THE PUNJAB.

"Sapphire" writes in the Pioneer:—In the Pioneer of 28th January an allusion is made to Mr. E. S. Maclagan's investigation of the Punjab trade in gold and silver work, and the dwellers in Kulu are put down as possessing ornaments to the value of three lakhs and a half. I am not acquainted with the sources from which this information has been drawn, but even to a casual observer it must appear an absurdly low estimate. No hill district in India is half so wealthy as Kulu, and nowhere are the hoards of jewels and ornaments possessed by natives so astonishingly large in proportion to their outward circumstances as in Kulu and its subordinate districts of Waziri Rupi and inner and outer Seoraj. On the final day of the last Deserah Fair at Sultanpore (Kulu), which was not nearly as well attended as usual, there were at the lowest estimate about 8,000 people, the majority of whom were women and girls all more or less literally loaded with silver ornaments, with a large sprinkling of gold ones; striking an average of even Rs. 80, a very low figure indeed, for, say, 4,000 women, we have the sum of Rs. 320,000; this without taking into account the enormous wealth of Deotahs, the valuable ornaments of the men, every one of whom wore silver or gold according to his means, and the jewels of Seoraji women, who were almost entirely unrepresented this year. The richer Brahmin and Kanait families possess thousands of rupees worth of ornaments that never see the light; add to this the wealth in sapphires and gold and silver ornaments owned by the Rai, our local banker, and the many rich bunniahs, and the figure does not, I feel assured, fall far short of ten lakhs. Fortunately for the peace of mind of hoarders in these hills house-breakers and rogues are almost unknown, and the dacoit an institution that has not yet been imported. Why this is so is not quite clear, Kulu being within easy reach of everywhere, and the people, particularly on fair days, very reckless. Perhaps as years run on and a cantonment or two is located in the valley, with necessarily larger bazaars than we now possess, the predatory instincts of enterprising outsiders may be excited, and the "Stunt" have more serious cases to decide than he has at present.

UNCONGENIAL RACES.

(Madras Times.)

Agitate as they may the Hindus cause hardly a ripple upon the surface of European thought in this country. There are few Englishmen who trouble themselves about the Age of Consent Bill, not many more who treat the elective principle as worthy of more than a passing thought. Of these two subjects, in only one case is any settlement that may be arrived at likely to affect the Anglo-Indian directly, and as the settlement of this appears to be remote, he is content to let things slide. But he has something else to trouble him. He is worried about Exchange. American statesmen and financiers are having a pleasant game of shuttlecock and battledore with silver, and while at one moment the shuttlecock is tossed high into the air, at another an adverse wind, and at yet another the action of the players, brings it nearly to the ground. The consequences in India are far-reaching. They press upon the Anglo-Indians individually in most cases; his home remittances cut more deeply into his income; his clothing, &c. cost more. And in a more indirect fashion the fall of exchange affects Anglo-Indians as members of a race. For trade is suffering terribly, and trade forms the chief link that binds India and England together. The Anglo-Indian's anxiety is not altogether of a selfish character, however. It is true that injury to the trade of India re-acts upon Great Britain, but the chief sufferer is India. Some argue that this country gains by a fall in the price of silver, as this brings her better prices for her crops. But however this may be in the long run, for the moment trade is dislocated, and any increase of values that may be noticeable applies, unfortunately, to crops that are, in many parts of the country, unusually scanty. By the time that India recovers in this respect, exchange may have recovered; and, in any case, a prolongation of the present tension, acting upon the mania for speculation that appears to have been engendered among native traders by the violent fluctuations of silver, will bring the country face to face with a commercial crisis of no small importance. There are rumours abroad already, and if speculation has been carried to anything like the extent that is reported, there must, sooner or later, be a financial thunderstorm and a clearing of the commercial atmosphere.

While the Anglo-Indian thinks of silver and its influences upon his own exchequer and that of the country, and upon trade, the Hindu, and in a lesser degree the Mahomedan, does not trouble about these subjects. It is important that our native friends should consider how far they are wise in devoting their attention almost entirely to social and political matters. One crying evil, that stands in the way of all reform, is constantly brought to the front by those who lament the poverty of India. This will not be lessened by the acceptance of the elective principle, or the introduction of a measure of representative Government; nor will it be reduced by the passing of any Age of Consent Bill, nor by opposition to any such Bill. One great path to reform lies along the course taken by the practical politician, the man who tries to increase the prosperity of the country. In a country that is not prosperous, neither social nor political reform is likely to prosper. Is it not, therefore, important that commercial and agricultural questions should be given at least as prominent a place in the programme of reformers as matters political and social? We have urged before, and we urge again, the need of a steady development of India's agricultural resources. There is need also that trade should be more energetically developed, with the assistance of native capital and native enterprise. At present the Indian trader works, like his European compeer, for profit; but unlike his rival he rarely utilises his profits in his business, swelling the volume of capital occupied in fostering the trade of the country. It is urged against the Englishman that he comes to India to make money, and that when he has made it he retires with his money. With still more force this remark about the making and the withdrawal of profits applies to the Indian who embarks in trade. Not merely when he has made a large fortune or a retiring competency does he withdraw the amount; but year after year he increases his investments in house property, land, jewels, &c. out of his annual trade profits. The tactics of the European are different, and we are inclined to think that they are better suited to the requirements of Indian trade, which needs more capital and more enterprise than it has yet had to push it on. In this matter, as in only too many others, Anglo-Indians and Natives do not co-operate, and, in the result, India suffers even more than England; or, to put our statement more mildly, were things otherwise, were the two races more congenial, or were they to work together in good fellowship, the result would be an even greater gain to India than to Great Britain.

CRIMINAL PROCESS IN INDIA.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The recent Act amending the Code of Criminal Procedure of 1882 supplies a long-felt deficiency in the statute book. The favourite weapon of offence, or retaliation, amongst a large section of our Indian fellow-subjects, is the application to the police or magistracy for the arrest of their enemy, or, for the matter of that, their own familiar friend, for an offence of which he may be entirely innocent. Witnesses are usually forthcoming in abundance to testify to as many particulars and details of the imaginary misdeed as may be considered requisite; and it is by no means uncommon for such conspirators to have a rehearsal of the scenes which they intend to swear to before they go into court, so as to prevent any discrepancy in their statements. Even if a conviction was not obtained, the object of the complaint was sufficiently achieved by the temporary arrest of his adversary, and the inconvenience and ignominy to which he was subjected by a more or less prolonged detention pending the conclusion of the trial. If, as we may hope is generally the case, the victim of the plot was honourably acquitted, it was, of course, open to him to put the machinery of the law into motion on his own account; but the process is cumbersome and expensive, and the result proverbially uncertain. Moreover, while some trumped-up cases can easily be proved to be groundless, others may have a substratum of fact, innocent enough in itself, which may yet be sufficient to vouch for the apparent good faith of the complainant in bringing a charge which he knew was practically a fabrication; and so, while the facts complained of were proved not to be true, it nevertheless might be impossible to prove that the motives of the complainant were other than unimpeachable. Hence a man who had undergone prosecution of this sort might think he was sufficiently lucky in meeting with an acquittal, and not care to stir further in the matter; and the evil-doer would thus escape all retribution for his sins. The Code of Criminal Procedure, however, as it stood before the present amendment, did provide a simple and efficacious remedy for a certain class of such cases; but, strange to say, it was for simple cases only, and not those in which the victim of a plot might undergo arrest. Section 250 of the Code, under the chapter for the trial of summons cases by Magistrates, authorised a Magistrate who acquitted an accused person, and was of opinion that the complaint was frivolous or vexatious, to direct the complainant to pay to the accused compensation not exceeding fifty rupees. So far as this went, nothing could be better. It enabled the court which actually tried the false complaint, and was cognisant of all the details from the witnesses who had been before it, to apply a sharp and vigorous remedy without running the risk of a series of interminable details, such as the law loves, which would probably result in the issue of process for a separate trial of the author of the false complaint. But in the chapter for the trial of warrant cases by Magistrates there was no corresponding provision, and it was therefore obviously advisable, in bringing a false complaint against anyone, to make it a really substantial one. The new amendment cancels Section 250, above referred to, and adds, as Section 560 of the Code, a provision on similar lines applicable to all cases tried by Magistrates without distinction, whether the complaint was originally made to the Magistrate or to a police officer. The Magistrate has, of course, to record his order in writing, and he has also to consider any objection made by the complainant against an order for compensation of the accused person. The amendment will be welcomed by the magistracy and police as well as by the general public.

THE CENSUS.

THE preliminary Census returns for Calcutta show that occupied houses number 65,147, with a population of 416,123 males and 232,123 females. These results, however, cannot be regarded as perfectly accurate, but the results show an increase of about seven per cent. in those wards in which a comparison is at present possible.

THE complete Census returns for the North-West Provinces and Oudh, subject to modification on a subsequent scrutiny, show that the total population for the British districts has risen from 44,107,869 to 46,905,387, and for the Native States of Rampur and Tehri Garhwal from 741,750 to 799,165, so that the total increase over all is 2,854,933, or about 6½ per cent.

THE general results of the Census in Bengal have now been sufficiently ascertained to admit of an estimate of the total population being made. There is no doubt that there has been an increase during the past ten years of four and a half millions, raising the population to 74 million people. The increase is most marked in the neighbourhood of Calcutta. In the tea districts and in Eastern Bengal the Census has cost less than half that of 1881.

THE Census returns for the North-West Provinces and Oudh are now nearly complete. All the Oudh Districts show a large increase, and so do the densely-populated districts, such as Gorakpore. In the north-west districts, Mainpuri, Farukhabad, Jalaum, and Etah, which have been depressed of late years, have fallen back. Evidence of the increased colonization on the Dun is seen in the rise of 16 per cent. in the population, and the Hill Districts generally show a very large advance.

THE Farukhabad district shows a decrease of 50,000 in population in the present Census as compared with that of 1881. There are in that district 133,015 occupied houses, 463,374 males, and 395,002 females, or a total of 858,376 persons.

THE civil and military station of Bangalore, remarks a local contemporary, was, we are told, one of the first stations in Southern India to communicate to the Census Commissioner in India the total of the population. This is creditable to Mr. Hewetson, the District Superintendent of Police, on Census duty. That the male population exceeds the female (by 312 only) is accounted for by the fact that we have so many unmarried fighting men. The total of the Census of this year exceeds that taken in 1881 by about six thousand souls.

DISAPPOINTMENT with the results of the Census is not confined to the Western Presidency, remarks an up-country journal. The citizens of Madras are now complaining that the increase in the year amounts to less than half a lakh. They would not wish it more through mere pride in inflated numbers; but it was generally hoped that the Census would throw a more favourable light on the sanitary condition of the city. As a matter of fact, the increase makes a difference of only ten per cent. between the real and apparent death-rates of the last few years; and this, it is readily admitted, is not sufficient to remove Madras from the category of unhealthy to that of healthy cities.

So far as the Census returns for the Bengal districts received show, the percentage of increase is as follows; Darjeeling, 43·4 per cent.; Noakhali, 23·9 per cent.; Tippera, 17·0 per cent.; Julpaiguri, 16·3 per cent.; Howrah, 15·0 per cent.; Maldah, 14·3 per cent.; Dacca, 13·7 per cent.; Chittagong, 13·0 per cent.; Mymensingh, 12·9 per cent.; Manbhum, 12·5 per cent.; 24-Parganas, 11·6 per cent.; Cuttack, 11·4 per cent.; Bogra, 10·7 per cent.; Faridpur, 9·8 per cent.; Sarun, 8·5 per cent.; Midnapur, 8·5 per cent; Khulna, 8·3 per cent.; Champarun, 7·7 per cent.; Puri, 5·6 per cent.; Hughli, 5·5 per cent.; Hazaribagh, 5·3 per cent.; Purneah, 4·9 per cent.; Balasore, 4·6 per cent.; Shahabad, 4·1 per cent.; Muzafferpur, 3·3 per cent.; Bhagalpur, 2·9 per cent.; Monghyr, 2·9 per cent.; Dinajpur, 2·4 per cent.; Pubna, 2·1 per cent.; Murshidabad, 1·4 per cent.; and Patna, 1·4 per cent. The following districts show a decrease:—Birbhum, ·6 per cent.; Nuddes, ·9 per cent.; Rungpur, 1·3 per cent.; Rajshahi, 1·9 per cent.; and Jessore, 2·8 per cent. The State of Kuch Behar also shows a decrease of 4 per cent.

THE Census of Simla shows a population of 13,150, about the same as at the last count. This is out of season.

THE Census returns for Cuddapah show a decrease of 1,600 from the figures of 1881. It will need a much larger falling off than this, however, to induce Government to transfer District Head-quarters to some sweeter spot.

THE various nationalities residing upon the land taken up for the Kistna Bridge, and depending upon that work for a livelihood, are as follows, as ascertained by the Census:—Europeans and Eurasians, 66; Telugus, 1,017; Hindustanis, 770; Punjabis, 429; Mahrattas, 259; Guzeratis, 243; Bengalis, 11: total 2,794. There are, in addition, some thousand or fifteen hundred more, principally Telugus, who do not live within the bridge colony. The recent scare is now entirely at an end.

OFFICERING OF THE NEW REGIMENTS.

Particular care seems to have been taken in the selection of officers for the four new regiments which are to replace the last of the Hindustani Levies. Taking them in order we find that the Commandant of the new 33rd, which is to be composed entirely of Punjabi Mahomedans, is Lieutenant-Colonel Dyce, who has belonged to the 21st Punjab Infantry since 1869, and who has thus had a long acquaintance with the class of men now about to come under his orders. The Wing Commanders are Brevet-Major C. Hogge, who was selected for the 34th Pioneers when that regiment was raised in 1887, and Captain H. T. Faithfull, of the Musketry Staff, who has been thirteen years with the 19th Punjabis. The Adjutant is Lieutenant E. H. Watson, who now holds a similar post in the 40th Bengal Infantry. For the 38th Dogras Lieutenant-Colonel Campbell, 2nd-in-command of the 2nd Battalion 3rd Gurkhas, has been chosen as Commandant, an officer who has seen service in three frontier expeditions and in the Afghan War. Major Vivian, late of the 18th Bengal Infantry, which had some Dogra companies, and Captain R. E. S. Taylor, now on duty in Russia, but already belonging to the old 38th, are the Wing Commanders. Lieutenant Stainforth is the Adjutant; he has served for four and a half years in a similar capacity in the 39th. The 2nd Battalion of the 3rd Gurkhas became the 39th (Garwhali) Regiment of Bengal Infantry, with Lansdowne as their permanent station. Their officers remain as at present, with the exception of Lieutenant-Colonel Campbell, who, as just stated, takes command of the 38th Dogras. The new battalion of the 2-3rd Gurkhas, to be eventually located at Almora, have as their Commandant Major H. D. Hutchinson, now 2nd-in-command of the 1st Battalion. The Wing Commanders are Major Wheatley, 2nd Gurkhas, and Captain Molesworth, of the old 39th. Lieutenant Woodyatt accompanies Major Hutchinson as Adjutant. Four subalterns in the 39th are lucky enough to be posted to this new Gurkha regiment. The Commandant of the new 40th Baluchis is Major Graves, at present officiating as 2nd-in-command of the 42nd Gurkhas, but really belonging to the 26th Punjab Infantry, with which he has served since 1876. The Wing Commanders of this frontier battalion are Captain Woon, who has done good work as Adjutant of the North-Western Railway Volunteers, and Captain Hunter, 10th Bengal Infantry, who made his mark as an energetic officer in Burma. Lieutenant Dillon is Adjutant; like Major Graves, he belongs to the 26th Punjabis, of whom he has been Adjutant for nearly four years. With officers of the stamp that have been selected, the new regiments should make rapid progress towards attaining efficiency.—Pioneer.

BENGAL.

BEFORE it was made known that Sir Charles Elliott was the generous donor of the Rs. 15,000 to the Dufferin Fund, the balance of Rs. 20,000, for which the anonymous giver stipulated, had already been subscribed by two magnates of the Rungpur District. Raja Janaki Ballabh Sen, of Dimla, has given Rs. 4,000, and Raja Gobindlal Ray, of Tajhat, Rs. 2,000. This is heaping coals of fire on the heads of the native residents of Calcutta, who have practically done nothing for a purely local charity.

MADRAS.

THE Board of Directors of the Southern Mahratta Railway Company, writes the Madras Mail, has accepted the resignation by Colonel J. G. Lindsay, R.E., of his dual appointment of Agent and Chief Engineer of that line, from the 6th proximo. Mr. J. Campbell, the present Auditor, has been appointed Agent on Rs. 1,800, rising in five years to Rs. 2,000 per mensem; and Mr. E. Hallum, now the Deputy Chief Engineer, has been nominated Chief Engineer on Rs. 1,600, rising in five years to Rs. 1,800. The appointment of Deputy Chief Engineer, now held by Mr. Hallum, will be abolished from the date of Colonel Lindsay's retirement. Mr. J. Partridge, who was recently Government Examiner of Railway Accounts at Hubli, obtains Mr. Campbell's place on a salary of Rs. 1,300, rising in five years to Rs. 1,500, on the understanding that he retires from the Government service on pension. The Board, in accepting Colonel Lindsay's resignation, expresses its high appreciation of the valuable service rendered to the Company by that officer. Since 1882 all the works of the Company have been almost exclusively carried out under Colonel Lindsay's supervision. A remarkable circumstance is that these works, which have entailed an expenditure of more than eight millions, were executed, on the whole, much below the estimates, with no failures of any importance, and within a remarkably short time as compared with those of other lines of a similar extent. All these circumstances, the Board says, are undeniable testimony to Colonel Lindsay's indomitable energy, ability, and skill. Colonel Lindsay entered the army in 1855, became Captain in 1863, Major in 1872, Lieut.-Colonel in 1878, and Brevet-Colonel in 1882. He served in the Indian Mutiny Campaign in 1858, and was present at the affairs of Jheegung and Rubrai, the battle of Banda, the relief of Kirwee, and in the Reserve during the storming of the heights of Punwarree (medal with clasp). He also served in the Afghan War in 1879–80, and took part in the march to Candahar with the force under Major-General Phayre (mentioned in despatches and medal).

THE same journal learns that a scheme is under consideration for the establishment in Madras of a School of Music, to be incorporated as a Society for the Advancement of Literature and Art under the Indian Companies' Act. A Memorandum was originally drafted by those interested in the scheme and circulated to about forty ladies and gentlemen, who met on the 30th January at the office of the Director of Public Instruction, and appointed a sub-committee, which has already drawn up Articles of Association, and is now engaged in correcting and considerably modifying the proposed scheme of operations. This last will probably be ready in a few days, when it is proposed to call a meeting in the Banqueting Hall to take further steps in the matter. It is hoped that his Excellency the Governor will preside on the occasion. It is too early yet to comment on the scheme, but the influential support which it has already received will probably ensure a trial being given to it.

BOMBAY.

MR. HORMUSJEE BORABJEE, a wealthy Parsee land-holder of Umargaum, was on Tuesday acquitted by the unanimous verdict of the jury, concurred in by Mr. Crawford, the Sessions Judge of Tanna, of the charge of culpable homicide not amounting to murder and with doing grievous bodily harm. Mr. Pherozeshaw M. Mehta defended the accused.

THE result of the ballotting at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce on Wednesday evening for two representatives of the Chamber on the Board of Trustees for the Port of Bombay, in place of those whose term of office expires on the 31st inst., was that the following gentlemen were elected:—The Hon. Mr. L. R. W. Forrest, of Messrs. Killick, Nixon, & Co., and Mr. A. F. Beaufort, of Messrs. Lyon & Co.

AMONGST the passengers who went home by the mail steamer on Saturday last were Sir F. and Lady Edwards; Mr. Henry E. M. James, C.S., late Revenue Commissioner, Northern Division; and the Ven. Archdeacon Goldwyer Lewis. A number of friends of Mr. James and Archdeacon Lewis were present at the Apollo Bunder, some of whom accompanied them on board the mail steamer.

HER MAJESTY'S Flagship Boadicea, Captain the Hon. A. G. Curzon Howe, C.B., with Vice-Admiral the Hon. Sir E. R. Fremantle, K.C.B., C.M.G., on board, arrived in harbour on Tuesday afternoon from Trincomali, which port she left on the 5th instant. She left Calcutta on the 12th January, calling at Rangoon and the Andaman Islands. At Madras the Boadicea stopped for about three days, and then sailed for Trincomali, stopped there three days also, and then proceeded to Colombo to meet H.I.H. the Cesarewitch. Mr. Harvey, the Secretary to H.E. the Commander-in-Chief, who died suddenly from apoplexy during the stay of the vessel in that place, was buried there. On the return of the Cesarewitch to Colombo from up-country, the Boadicea left for Trincomali. She will remain in Bombay till the end of this month, and then leave for Trincomali, afterwards proceeding to Malta to pay off.

N.-W. PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

THE Punjab Government have now, in accordance with the recent sanction of the Government of India, appointed public prosecutors for the Dehli, Umritsur and Sealkote, Lahore and Ferozepore, Mooltan and the Jhelum Sessions Divisions. The Peshawur Division is already provided with one. Mr. Sydney Robinson, barrister-at-law, is the Public Prosecutor for the Lahore and Ferozepore Division. Criminal prosecutions on behalf of Government will now, it is hoped, be better managed; and there can be little doubt that considerable good will result from these appointments. All the other public prosecutors are native pleaders or barristers.

IT is an unpleasant characteristic of Oriental ingenuity, says the Pioneer, that the Native frequently looks upon the resources of civilisation merely as extending the opportunities for fraud. The Post Office, for instance, has for years afforded a splendid field for the talents of the Artful Dodgers of the East. It is only a short time since one ingenious exploiter endeavoured to pay his debts by sending a notification to his creditor of the transmission of notes to the due amount by post, and when the notes did not arrive, accusing the Post Office authorities of fraud. Equally ingenious was the device of a certain Vishnu Gobind Oak, who has been sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment by the Jhansi magistrate. Vishnu Gobind Oak was in need of money in the spring of last year. Procuring a few stones, he wrapped them in rags, took them to the post office, insured them as ornaments valued at close on Rs. 4,000, and despatched them to a brother residing somewhere on the Bombay side. The brother, of course, had an intimation beforehand of the plot, and on being offered the parcel by the Post Office refused it on the ground that he had not received a letter announcing its despatch. The parcel was duly returned to Jhansi; Vishnu Gobind Oak looked at it, declared it had been tampered with, refused to take it back, and demanded compensation for the loss of his jewels. Numbers of witnesses were forthcoming to support Vishnu Gobind Oak's story, and the amount of false swearing gone through in order to account for his possession of so large a quantity of ancestral jewels was prodigious. It was, however, easy to show, both that it would have been difficult for the Post Office official at Jhansi to tamper with the parcel, and that the story of the accused and his witnesses was exceedingly improbable. It is to be hoped the case will serve as a lesson. Nothing is easier than to declare you have sent valuables to a friend, tell him not to accept them, and then declare that they have been abstracted by the Post Office officials; but the Jhansi case proves that it is exceedingly difficult to make the tale hang together coherently.

ON the Punjab frontier during the past year, with the exception of the misconduct of the tribes which necessitated the Black Mountain and Miranzai Expeditions, the general state of affairs has been satisfactory. On the Peshawar border good relations have been maintained with the tribes of the Khyber, though certain inter-tribal feuds and difficulties continue and show no improvement. Among the Darwesh Khel and Mashud sections of the Waziris ill-feeling continues to exist, but it has been somewhat controlled by the influence of the Deputy Commissioners of Bannu and Dera Ismail Khan. It is intended that these officers should, if possible, take up all cases between the two sections before the commencement of the coming hot season, and try to settle as many of the causes of quarrel as they can. The Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, in referring to recent events on the frontier, gives a brief account of the opening of the Gomal Pass. Much, he says, still remains to be gradually done, but the arrangements made with the tribes have so far worked successfully. Three posts have been established in the Gomal Pass, and this road will shortly be, it is hoped, a true royal highway, instead of a difficult route infested by desperate robbers, and impassable except to strong bodies of armed men. Allowances amounting to Rs. 35,000 per annum have been granted to the Mashud Waziris, and the Shiranis have received an annual assignment of Rs. 14,500. The Darwesh Khels of Wana have also been granted an allowance of Rs. 14,000 per annum. In the case of the Waziris these allowances are probably not much greater in amount than the income which these tribes used to derive from constant theft and robbery in the Gomal Pass, and they are largely given as payment for tribal service in the protection of roads. It is proposed that a light toll should hereafter be levied on all animals and persons using the Gomal route, as in the case of the Khyber Pass. The Dera Ghazi Khan border was quiet throughout last year. The whole of this border is now enclosed by British Beluchistan, and before long it will necessarily cease to retain its frontier character, and remain merely a difficult hilly country between two British jurisdictions.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1, 1891.

THE INDIAN VOLUNTEER FORCE.

THE Anglo-Indian papers to hand by the present Overland Mail have a good deal to say about the present state of the Volunteer Force in India—a state which, if one may read between the lines, does not seem to be altogether satisfactory to the military authorities or to the editors of the papers in question. The remarks in the press have been called forth in consequence of other remarks made by general officers at some Volunteer inspections lately. Brigadier-General Van Straubenzee held such an inspection of the Madras Volunteer Brigade, consisting of the Artillery, Guards, Mounted Infantry, and Cadet Companies, and when the drilling performance was over, and all were anxiously waiting for the usual flattering compliments which it is the habit of inspecting officers to pay to Volunteers in India as at home, General Straubenzee, no doubt to the surprise of his expectant listeners, told them that he felt sure that, instead of hearing the flatteries usual on such occasions, they would prefer a candid opinion from him. This was really paying the Madras Volunteers a high compliment, but, whether they accepted it as such or not, the Brigadier at once proceeded to give them his "candid" opinion of themselves. This was not altogether a flattering one, for he found fault with their unsteadiness and other military defects; but, "in conclusion," he told them that he had great pleasure in inspecting them on that occasion, and he "hoped this feeling would be enhanced when he came to know them better." A Madras Volunteer would appear to be like the gentleman of the music-hall ditty—a very good fellow, but you have to know him first. It is to the credit of the Madras editors, however, that they have accepted the inspecting officer's remarks in a most excellent spirit, in the articles which they have penned on the now seemingly vexed question of Volunteering in India. The Madras Mail declares that although it very seldom happens that inspecting officers speak out their minds, for fear of hurting the feelings of those who voluntarily give up so much of their time for the good of the common weal, words of reproof just now are the kindest words that can be uttered with regard to the Volunteer Corps in India. The Madras Times also considers that "something must be done" to stay decadence and disbanding, and to make the Volunteer movement in India popular. The situation has evidently become a serious one. The Mail says:

"'To be or not to be?'—that is the question which is just now being asked by the Press throughout India; and, indeed, with good reason. Thoughtful critics are calling attention to the fact that the material of which the best Volunteers are made at home is not available in this country, or, if available, is not attainable; and they endeavour to trace the effect to its cause, with, however, but indifferent success. It is acknowledged on all sides that the Volunteer Force in India is neither what it might, nor what it should be. In the absence of any imminent danger of disturbance from within or from without, Europeans and Eurasians of the better class show a lamentable want of public spirit in assisting towards making the Volunteer Force in India what it should be, a real and practical bulwark of defence. The number of Regular troops in India is of necessity insufficient for the defence of this vast Empire, and the Government may well ask, though it has no legal right to demand, that those Britishers and descendants of Britishers who are capable of bearing arms should make up the deficiency."

Sir Frederick Roberts, who has also made a Volunteer Inspection—that of the Presidency Volunteers—has also been expressing his candid opinion, but on the question generally rather than on the Volunteers individually. For those whom he inspected at Calcutta he had nothing but praise to bestow regarding their appearance, drill, and "set-up"; but he added that he would have been still better pleased had there been more present. "It is, and always has been, my opinion," said his Excellency, "that every European in India who does not belong to the Regular Army, and who is capable of bearing arms, should become a Volunteer. For those who are past hard work, or whose leisure hours are restricted, there is the newly-formed Reserve; but the great majority ought to, and I hope will, enroll themselves as active Volunteers. In 1881 there were only 30 corps, with some 6,000 efficients; there are now 83 corps, numbering nearly 21,000 efficients. Satisfactory as this is, I shall be surprised if the census which has just been taken does not show that, even at this figure, Volunteers bear but a small proportion to the total number of Europeans and Eurasians in India. I sincerely trust that there will be a still further improvement in this respect, and that in a few years there will be scarcely a civilian in the country who is not connected with the Volunteer movement."

The Commander-in-Chief's wishes are more than re-echoed in the columns of the Anglo-Indian press; they are insisted upon as wishes which should be carried out quickly and without fail. But how this is to be done unless the Government of India takes some measure to enforce that all Europeans and Eurasians join the Volunteer Force, as suggested by Sir Frederick Roberts, it is not easy to see. And although the Government of India can be wisely despotic, it is not likely that it would issue any orders to bring about such an enrolment. Englishmen in India ought themselves to see the necessity of combining together in such a defensive force. Had such a force been formed throughout the country before 1857, many a dark and painful memory of the Mutiny might have been spared. No doubt the dangers then encountered stimulated Englishmen to muster in some strength afterwards as Volunteers; but danger over, fear soon dies, and a carelessness or reckless disregard as to what might happen again is, and always has been, the characteristic of Englishmen. It is not satisfactory to learn to-day that the state of the Volunteering question in India is "disheartening," and surely the journalist is writing wisely and well who pens the following:—

"There are many thousands of able-bodied men of European descent now in India who ought to take their share in the voluntary scheme of defence for the Empire, but who studiously hold aloof from it. Many of these men say, 'Oh, if necessity arises, we 'll join'! as they did during the Russian scare, forgetting that however English an Englishman may be he cannot work with trained soldiers—even Volunteers—without some sort of training; and that when the hour of danger arrives there will be neither time nor opportunity for instructing him in duties with which, in his selfishness, he has neglected to make himself acquainted."

It is to be hoped, however, that a change for the better will now follow on the words spoken by Sir Frederick Roberts and the Press.

They consist of half-a-million acres, in the sunny and salubrious climate of Victoria, and South Australia, on the great River Murray, which affords an abundant supply of fertilizing water for the Irrigation of Vineyards and Fruit Farms, and for the production, in assured quantity and excellence, of Grapes, Oranges, Lemons, Olives, Apricots, Figs, and other Fruits (already so successfully grown in Australia), by Cultivators with large and small Capital, holding from Ten to Eighty Acres and upwards. MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

IT is understood that Brigadier-General Adam, who has just given up the Quartermaster-Generalship, is likely to get the Nagpore command in succession to General Anderson, who goes to Mhow.

COLONEL CURTEIS, Assistant Adjutant-General, is about to take a few months' leave. Colonel Hogg will officiate.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL LLOYD, Assistant Adjutant-General, having been relieved as officiating Deputy Quartermaster-General, Poona District, and Major Stopford being also relieved as officiating Assistant Adjutant-General, will rejoin their battery in Bombay.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL GATACRE, Adjutant-General, is about to go home on three months' leave. He is now at Aden with the Commander-in-Chief, and goes home from there.

COLONEL CUNNINGHAM, Deputy Adjutant-General, will discharge the duties of Adjutant-General during General Gatacre's absence.

COLONEL ADAM, Staff Corps, has been placed on general duty, Poona.

COLONEL RIVETT-CARNAC, of the Ghazipur Volunteers, is now in Calcutta, and will take part in the discussions of the Committee on Volunteering in Bengal. The first meeting of the Committee took place on Tuesday at Belvedere.

COLONEL GRANT, C.B , whose term of command of the 7th Dragoon Guards is approaching its close, is about to take the Assistant Adjutant-Generalcy at Allahabad, which becomes vacant by the resignation of Major Lawrence, who returns to the King's Dragoon Guards.

IT is notified that all movements of troops in relief from Quetta are postponed until further orders, on account of the numerous breaches in the Harni Railway. No. 1 Company, Bengal Sappers and Miners, en route to Quetta in relief, will be detained for some ten days or so at Mecan Meer for the same reason.

THE Governor-General in Council has been pleased to sanction the separation of the Cawnpore Volunteers—Light Horse, Rifles, and Reserve—from the 3rd Administrative Battalion, N.-W. P. Volunteers, and their formation into a 5th Battalion. The detachment of the Allahabad Volunteers at Banda and Fategarh will be transferred to the new corps.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL SANFORD, Director-General of Military Works, has received a two years' extension of his appointment. It is fortunate, thinks an up-country paper, for the public interests that this officer, under whose superintendence our whole system of defence works may be said to have come into existence, will thus be able to see it carried practically to completion. Few men are able to have their names allied with a bigger or a better piece of work.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS had evidently not scrutinised his Army List before addressing the Calcutta Volunteers on Saturday, says a Madras paper, for he referred to the Hon. Mr. Garstin as commanding the Madras Reserve Battalion—an office which he voluntarily resigned some time ago. While feeling gratified for what the Commander-in-Chief said about certain of the Volunteer officers of this presidency, it must not be forgotten that the Volunteers down here are sadly under-officered, and, despite the greatest efforts, seem likely to remain so.

MR. LESLIE ROGERS, Captain Commandant of the Dehra Mounted Rifles, an enthusiastic Volunteer, has been permitted to accompany the Black Mountain expedition, and joins it immediately as an attaché on the General's Staff. A few weeks' experience of actual work in the field must be worth a lifetime of parades for a man who has the command of a Volunteer Corps, and it is only to be regretted that more cannot do as Mr. Rogers. Hitherto, however, the Government has shown no disposition to encourage the presence of the amateur on field service. But is it fair to the Volunteer officer always to regard him as such?

THE Governor of Madras's Body Guard was inspected on Monday by H. E. the Governor, who was accompanied by Captain the Hon. R. T. Lawley, Military Secretary, and Captain the Hon. Everard Baring, A.D.C. The Guard was drawn up in review order under Captain Kerrich in the square at the Body Guard Lines, and was in full dress. After inspecting the troop, his Excellency visited the hospital and the Veterinary Sick Lines, the riding schools, and the lines and buildings of the Body Guard. After spending more than an hour, his Excellency the Governor left, expressing himself highly satisfied with what he had seen.

THE EXAMINATION IN NATIVE LANGUAGES IN INDIA.

Government, in laying down a pass standard for examinations in the native languages, has obviously (says the Times of India) but a single end in view, namely, to have full assurance that officers have, for all practical purposes, an adequate acquaintance with them. The line between pass and honour men should, therefore, in reason, as it is in the universities, be distinctly drawn, so that whereas it should suffice for the former to possess that conversational fluency which is sufficient for the efficient performance of their duties, a literary facility implying more or less familiarity with written and printed native thought, should be exacted from the aspirants to honours. It is a singular phenomenon that this pedagogic insistence on mere book-knowledge, which is as evanescent as all other smattering by cram, should be suffered to endure so long as the guardian genius over the portals of the native army. This is pushing the spirit of old conservatism to extremes that are of no benefit to the army, and may blast, at its inception, many a promising career. There is not an officer in the army who does not know that these standard examinations, however scrupulously carried out, frequently return men whose knowledge, tested though it has been in the examination hall, is very disappointing dross indeed when tried in the crucible of daily experience. How many officers, even among those who are notable men, and have passed their lives in India, are capable of reading the "Bagh-o-Bahar," of penning or even deciphering a native exercise? Their ignorance of these by-paths of select knowledge has been no hindrance either to their advancement or to their efficiency, whether on the parade-ground or in the office, for their vivâ voce vocabulary was rich and voluble; and that is emphatically what is wanted to make a soldier and not a pedant, a practical commander and not a littérateur. Those in whose hands is vested the initiation of these reforms must be aware of what is of common knowledge—that men have been known to pass even high tests, who, nevertheless, are practically worthless as interpreters. Conversely, others are often colloquial experts who make a lamentable hash of a passage from the books. Mere pass examinations should not be devised for exceptional, but for ordinary requirements, and surely most officers in military employ go through their whole service without being called upon either to indite or to translate a bit of native composition. The schoolmaster is abroad, and the necessity for a literary acquaintance with the vernacular is diminishing daily. It is, therefore, all the more astonishing that the severity of the standard should be enhanced by enforcing a fruitlessly painful absorption of high bat books. They do not, at any rate in this Presidency, contain the language of the people. It is no sooner learned than it has to be all forgotten in order that the sahib may become intelligible to his own butler or to any of the native ranks. At present, a book-worm who laboriously stammers through a few formulas may come off with credit, while another man who babbles Hindustani with native ease may be rejected for incompetence in books.

THE WOMEN OF INDIA.

LADY DUFFERIN, IN THE "NINETEENTH CENTURY."

In order to make the subject of infant marriage clear, it may conveniently be divided into two parts—betrothal and marriage—the betrothal being as binding as the marriage, and the betrothed becoming a widow should the other party to the contract die. The evils attached to the betrothal of infants are, first, that the anxiety of providing husbands, and the expenses attending the ceremonies in connection with it, are very great, and fall very early and very heavily upon the parents; and, secondly, that a very numerous class of virgin widows is created. This is a custom with which it is very difficult for European minds to sympathize; but, as it appears to have a religious foundation, and to be in "accordance with the spirit and the letter of the Hindoo scriptures," it is one with which it would seem impossible to interfere. The age at which marriage may legally be consummated in India is ten years. The physical, mental, and moral objections to marriage at such an early age require no explanations; they are patent to all. That a child is in no sense fit to become a wife and mother, that her own health often pays the penalty, and that the race that springs from her is likely to lose in physical and mental vigour, are facts which do not admit of contradiction. Marriage, however, will always take place in India much earlier than in European countries, and that it should be postponed for two or three years is all that the most ardent reformer can hope or expect at present. It is calculated that in India one woman in five is a widow; of these a very large proportion must be women who, having been betrothed at any time between the cradle and ten years of age, have become widows without ever having been wives. To understand the full misery of their condition one must realize that marriage is the very Alpha and Omega of an Indian woman's existence, and that the whole bent and training of her mind points to a husband as the end and object of life. He is, in fact, her only raison d'être; and when, therefore, she either altogether misses the fulfilment of her destiny, or loses her husband early, she is, both in her own and in public estimation, a most unhappy being. The shorn head, the plain clothes, the absence of ornament, the abandonment of all luxury, are not gratuitous cruelties; they are but the symbols of an overwhelming misfortune, and seem to be accepted as the natural expression of a hopeless grief. I do not see how this sentiment with regard to widowhood is to be modified by any reforms that we can suggest. It is only by the education and elevation of women that any change can come over the feeling of the people with regard to marriage, and it is only when public opinion ceases to regard her as a chattel, and begins to recognize her as a helpmate, that a woman's condition, whether as wife or widow, can become more honourable and more worthy of respect.

It is almost impossible to make a positive assertion with regard to any Indian custom. It would seem an easy matter, for example, to decide whether Indian women do or do not see male doctors; but even on this point the evidence is most conflicting. I think, however, that a careful examination of many contradictory statements leads to the conclusion that, in a very large number of cases, no man would ever, under any circumstances, be allowed into a zenana; that, in others, he would only be admitted at the last extremity, and would never be called in for minor maladies, or in the early stages of a serious illness; that in many more, while permitted to enter the sacred precincts, he would be given no chance of making a real examination of the patient's state; he might through a hole in the curtain try her temperature, feel her pulse, or see her tongue, but that would be all. No man would ever be called in to attend a confinement case, and for all female diseases and chronic ailments Indian women are practically without any medical aid whatever. The published reports of the Government dispensaries in India show that a large number of women do attend them; but from these statistics it would appear that far more men than women require relief, and as this is very unlikely to be the case, one must conclude that many women, even of the lowest castes, go without medical aid rather than receive it at the hands of men. But there is even a darker side to the medical question than the absence of a doctor's help in sickness; there is the positive harm done by the ignorant, superstitious, and cruel practices of soi-disant midwives, and it would be difficult to exaggerate the loss of health and the loss of life occasioned by these women. For some years efforts have been made to provide trained medical assistance for Indian women, and during the last five a larger and more national scheme to supply this want has been organized, each year bringing fresh proofs of the steady progress it is making and of its success.

To persons not specially interested in this part of the subject, it may seem too much to claim for it, that—leaving out of consideration the missionary question, with which I do not presume to deal—the very best way in which we can help our Indian sisters is by supplying them with medical relief. I must confess that I think it is; because it aims at diminishing suffering and at saving life; because education and general enlightenment must follow in its train; because it encourages and inculcates respect and consideration for women; because it brings cultivation and learning in contact with the zenana; and because in medicine and nursing Indian women will find professions open to them which they can take up with profit to themselves and advantage to their fellow-creatures—professions in the exercise of which widows, deprived as they are of home and family ties, may fill their lives with all the interest, occupation, and honour, so sadly wanting in their present state. It may be thought that many of my statements are contradictory. I can only say that the contradictions exist. The trials of a native woman's life are very peculiar and very great; and they are of such a nature that they affect not only a class or a section of the population, but every single household in the country; and for this reason they appeal very specially to our sympathy. But deeply as I feel for an Indian woman's sorrows, I cannot ignore her joys; and I certainly am able to have a more kindly sentiment towards the nation as a whole, because I have seen happy wives and happy mothers in India, and because I believe in happy Indian homes.

SOCIAL REFORM AND POLITICAL REFORM.

The time has arrived when Young India must reconsider its position in regard to Reform, both Social and Political. There are many now who wish to keep the two subjects separate. The one has nothing to do with the other, they tell us. They want, in fact, all the sweets with none of the bitters of life, all its power with none of its responsibilities. For years past many of the same men who have attended the annual meetings of the National Congress have subsequently met together at Social Conferences to discuss Social Reforms. We have not statistics at hand, nor have we the leisure to study the names and to probe the political tenets of each individual who has attended at these Conferences, or declared his sympathy with their aims; but we are under the impression that they represent in the aggregate a majority of those who have attended the annual Congress gatherings, and that few who have not been identified with the Congress cause have taken a share in the question of Social Reform. In the eyes of the Anglo-Indian the two have been not inseparable certainly, but hanging together; they have been regarded as natural products of the advancement of thought produced by the system of education that has lately been adopted. And year after year the Congress has tacitly encouraged by its silence the belief that, although it held itself aloof from social questions, it was not antagonistic to social reform. That the Government has thought this to be the case, may be taken for granted. The Anglo-Indian in general thought so, and he has repeatedly urged the Congress-wa lah to pay more heed to social matters and less to political if he really wished to benefit his country and his fellow-men. And it may be said, we think, without any great hesitation, that in former years, when Congress-wallahs were thus urged, they did not distinctly state that they were adverse to the Social Reform movement. Their silence may have been dictated by considerations of policy; it may have been clear to them then that to speak was to alienate sympathy in regard to their political aspirations; but, at any rate, they have now spoken, and, in doing so, they have obliterated one of the very few favourable impressions they had produced on Anglo-Indians, and have weakened their position to such an extent as to render it untenable.

Our remarks do not apply to all who are interested in the welfare of the National Congress. There are many of these who desire to push Social Reform, and who do their best towards this end by means of advice and exhortation. But there are also many who, while seeking Political Reform, urge that Hindu sociology should be left to itself, so that instead of being treated as running hand in hand or even in good fellowship, the two reforms are now held to be almost antagonistic. There is only one way in which this can be regarded as showing a measure of consistency. The political cry may be raised again, "India for the Indians," and the anti-social reformers may echo it, saying, "Let Indians manage their own affairs." But there the parallel ends. The political reformers quote in their favour the teachings of history, and beg the help of their British fellow-subjects to push ahead reforms like those which the experience of England has shown to be certain to come in course of time. "Help us to be more as you are," is the real meaning of the request submitted to the British electorate by the Indian political reformer; and in strange contrast to this comes the fractious cry of the Social Conservative, "Leave us alone." The inference is that Political Reform is wanted not because the Indian mind has been trained to appreciate the benefits of the British system of representative Government, to understand its growth, and to be able to apply its lessons if given a chance; but that India is envious of England, sees what it thinks is good and wants to taste it, even while ignorant of its flavour or its properties. Were the mind rightly trained, the Indian would feel that opposition to Social Reform is antagonistic to and unreconcilable with the desire to press forward towards a measure of representation in regard to the administration of the affairs of the country. The one action reveals Conservatism of the most bigoted kind, while the other wishes to assure us that a tide of Liberalism has spread over the land, softening the prejudices and the time-hardened landmarks of Hindu thought, and preparing the land for re-partition and for cultivation according to Western methods. This, at least, is the Anglo-Indian view of the subject, as we understand it to be generally held by those who have taken the trouble to study the present trend of Hindu thought and life.—Madras Times.

EDUCATIONAL FAILURE IN BENGAL.

(Pioneer.)

THERE is no end to the curious developments of the agitation against the Age of Consent Bill. The wire-pullers, in Calcutta recently arranged for a meeting of graduates of the local University, and at this gathering resolutions were adopted condemning the policy of the Government, a handful of Brahmos alone showing that they disagreed with this expression of opinion. The result is pointed to as proving that educated Bengalis, and more particularly that rising generation of which so much is expected, are hostile to the measure. This may be so, but it proves a good deal more; for if Western education cannot bring the Bengali race into line with civilisation, what force can possibly accomplish that desirable end? The "Star in the East" must set; the "Old Man's Hope" change into despair; and the social regeneration of the millions of India become an idle dream. This prospect, however, does not seem to trouble the irreconcilable section of the Bengali Press. The paper which has attained most notoriety by its vituperation of English officials in the past coolly remarks:—"Of course some of our contemporaries will mourn over the result of the high education given to the natives of Bengal; but the books were selected by Englishmen, the graduates were educated by English professors, and they were passed by English examiners." This amounts to a declaration that if the graduates have ranged themselves on the side of those who protest against the abolition of a revolting custom, it is because they have been educated by Englishmen. The confusion of mind here shown is indeed remarkable. Is it desired that in future English books, professors, and examiners should be banished from the University, and the Pandits have it all their own way? By all means let this be so, if the curriculum based on that of our great English colleges leads to the advocacy of consummation of marriage with children under twelve years of age.

BENGALI LITERATURE.

(Englishman.)

Few Europeans have any idea of the literary activity of the great multitude of educated Bengali who do not use English, and of the ability and ingenuity with which their tastes are gratified or stimulated by vernacular authors. A perusal of the annual Report of the Custodian of the Bengal Library affords conclusive evidence that Bengali literature is not all rubbish, but earnest men of thought, and men gifted with imagination and versatility burn the midnight oil, stimulated by the hopes and enduring the anxieties of authorship. While it is gratifying to read the list of books of a solid character, more interest attaches to the curious publications. Thus under the head of "Art," we find a book which teaches how to make sweetmeats and chutnies. A play named "Mayar Khela" is notable because fairies are introduced into it for the first time in Bengali drama, in imitation of Shakespeare. "Vot Mangal" describes the stir and excitement of Municipal elections. Mr. U. N. Das, having returned from a visit to England, composed a play after the plot of Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," which he named "Brother and I." A rival playwright wrote a parody, the title of which in Bengali was "The Ass and You"; but he also headed it in English "You and Ass"—a pun on Mr. Das's name. Byron's "Manfred" found a spirited translator, and we may mention in this connection that an Assamese translation was made of Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors." The publication of a number of books designed for the moral training of students is a novel feature of Bengali school-book literature.

In dealing with these books "with a purpose," the reviewer observes that most of them do not teach how a man should become a good citizen, thoroughly acquainted with his duties towards his Government, his society, his relations, neighbours, &c., but rather how one may become a clever man and protect oneself against the evil designs of others. Notwithstanding the stir produced in other provinces of India by the cow-protection movement, the only two books on the subject published in Bengal were the work of Mohamedans. The year was remarkable for the publication of an ancient and long-lost treatise on Hindu medicine by Banga Sen, who is extensively quoted in all standard works on Hindu medicine. The Editor, a distinguished native physician of Sahr Beri, in the remote district of Rohtak, in the Punjab, says that he could not procure a complete manuscript elsewhere, but had to work on odd chapters from different families of Vaidyas in India. Two specimens of very violent writing were directed against the Hindus of Bengal, one by a Bengali returned from England, and the other by a Mohamedan, The first abuses the Hindus because they excommunicate all persons who go to Europe, unless they agree to undergo a ceremony of expiation. He calls the Hindus very strong names, and compares their society to the infernal regions. The other writer thinks that the Hindus are the cause of all the calamities of the Musulmans of Bengal. It was the treachery of Hindu officials that caused the downfall of the Musulman Government in Bengal, while the ruin of many opulent Mohamedan families has been brought about by the sycophancy, cringing spirit, and treachery of their Hindu amla. He therefore asks his co-religionists not to join the Hindus in the Congress movement, and warns the English Government against confiding too much in their pliable and complaisant Hindu officers.

A book on the education of children is enlived with a long account of the impression produced on the author's own child of four years by a visit to the Zoological Gardens. Although many Bengali books of superior and permanent character are purposely overlooked in this notice, we are constrained to give a place to the following reference to a work of peculiar merit:—"Galpa Svalpa," by Mr. S. N. Tagore's sister, the distinguished Svarnakumari Devi, though designed for students of our schools, is pervaded by such a pure and elevated moral atmosphere that grown up people may use it with profit as a moral text-book. It contains a number of interesting anecdotes of original composition, written in simple and engaging Bengali, imparting lessons of the highest morality." The political publications of the year are, as usual, all in the form of tracts and pamphlets: there are no "large and sustained works, developing any scheme of Government, imperial, provincial, or local, or systematically criticising the working of the various departments of the Government."

THE INCOME-TAX IN BURMA.

(Englishman.)

Introducing the income-tax into Lower Burma appears to be rather a hopeless task. In 1888–89, the year when it was first attempted, the tax was collected in 27 towns, and, in the following year, 18 other towns were added, making a total of 45. Exclusive of the amount collected from Government servants and pensioners, the tax in the first year yielded Rs. 3,69,080, and in the second, Rs. 4,26,719, both sums being considerably less than the original assessment. In the second year the total number of persons assessed was 11,291, the number of objections lodged was 5,442, and of these 3,995 were either completely or partially successful, resulting in a reduction of the original assessments by Rs. 1,04,877. Anything more utterly abortive in the shape of revenue administration it would be difficult to find; yet it must be remembered that the officials who are endeavouring to work it are the best the province can boast of, and it is the character of the measure they are asked to carry out which is responsible for the failure. Where a tax is universally objected to it is impossible for any servants of Government to work it efficiently or fairly, however much they may be goaded on not to spare the taxpayers. In addition to the difficulty of making correct assessments there is equal difficulty in collecting what is assessed, and at the close of last year there were arrears amounting to Rs. 1,05,423. No other tax has ever been collected under such conditions, and yet the Government professes to see no difference between this tax and any other tax, the explanation that people who have to pay a tax naturally object to it, being considered sufficient to account for every failure. The number of processes issued was 435 as compared with 135 in the previous year, and it is stated that if the officers responsible for the collection had done their duty many more processes would have been issued.

AFGHAN BORDER POLITICS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

We have before noted the fact that the Amir has taken into his employ on the frontier the well-known outlaw, Chikai of Chinarak. This man has already done something to earn his pay by ridding the neighbourhood of another outlaw who has given considerable trouble to the Amir. Nur Muhammad, the son of Sirdar Wali Muhammad, who was a political refugee under British surveillance at Peshawar, escaped across the border a year or two ago, gathered a force and descended upon Khost, expelling the Afghan governor. The Amir succeeded, however, after a time, in recovering Khost, and since then misfortune has dogged Nur Muhammad's steps. He dare not come back to India, where he will be at once seized; he cannot find another opening or gather an adequate force for another expedition; and, meanwhile, he has been sinking deeper into poverty and indebtedness. When we last heard of him he was unable to leave Tirah, where he had found a refuge at Manozai, on account of his debts to the people. From there, Chikai, the outlaw first mentioned, has, however, apparently managed to drive him out; for the other night four ruffians armed with fire-arms broke into his house, and, being discovered, fired upon the inmates, severely wounding one of Nur Muhammad's followers and slightly wounding Nur Muhammad himself. The assailants were, however, overpowered and put to death, but not before they had confessed that they had been sent, with promises of reward, by Chikai to kill Nur Muhammad. The latter has, therefore, concluded that Mamozai is no safe asylum for him, and has fled to the Manikhel country. Such are the present fortunes of the adventurer whose attempt upon Afghanistan met with such unexpected initial success only a year or two ago.

India in Parliament.

INDIA AND THE FACTORY BILL.

Sir G. Campbell asked the Under Secretary of State for India whether it was true, as stated in the Times of March 11, that the Secretary of State had intimated to the Indian Government that certain parts of the Factory Bill submitted by them to the Indian Legislative Council "would be contrary to pledges given in the Imperial Parliament, and could not be accepted"; if so, when and to whom those pledges were given; whether, since the despatches of May and July, 1890, the Secretary of State had been in further communication with the Viceroy regarding the Factory Act; and whether, now that the communications had resulted in a Bill, he would lay the further correspondence upon the table?

Sir J. Gorst.—(1) The statements made in Parliament by the First Lord of the Treasury regarding the Indian Factory Bill, which are, I presume, referred to in the question, have not formed the subject of communications by the Secretary of State to the Government of India. (2) Yes. (3) The presentation of further correspondence will be considered by the Secretary of State as soon as the new Indian Factory Act is received.

Sir G. Campbell said that the right hon. gentleman had answered a question which had not been asked, and had not answered a question which had been asked. He repeated the first portion of his question.

Sir J. Gorst replied that nothing had passed between the Secretary of State and the Government of India referring to any pledges given in Parliament.

Sir G. Campbell again repeated the first paragraph of his question, and asked whether it was true or not. (Cheers.)

Sir J. Gorst remaining silent,

Sir G. Campbell gave notice that he would put the question down for to-morrow. (Hear, hear.)

MAHARANI SARNAMOYI v. MAHARAJAH NRIPENDRA NARAIN OF COOCH BEHAR AND ANOTHER.

This was an appeal from a decree of a Division Bench (consisting of Mr. Justice Mitter and Mr. Justice Beverly) of the High Court of Bengal of May 21, 1887, varying a decision of the Subordinate Judge of Rungpore.

Mr. Cowie, Q.C., Mr. J. H. A. Branson, and Mr. H. W. Cave were counsel for the appellant; Mr. Doyne and Mr. C. W. Arathoon for the respondents.

The arguments were heard recently, and their Lordships reserved judgment.

Sir Richard Couch, in now delivering the judgment of the Board, said that the suit was brought for possession of land and mesne profits, and that the original plaintiff, the Rani Anundmoyi, who had died, was now represented by the respondents. The plaint stated that at the time of the survey of the plaintiff's zemindary estate of Kantagarha a dispute arose between her late husband and the defendant (the present appellant) as to the enclosure line of the property, as drawn by the Amin, and that the defendant took possession of the greater portion of the land. Thereupon her husband in 1859 instituted suits to have the enclosure in question maintained and for possession, and he obtained a decree to that effect from the High Court. He died in 1870, and the defendant, as was alleged, dispossessed the plaintiff of two plots of the land and took possession of a third plot, which had been diluviated by the Dhulla river and then reformed. The appellant answered these allegations by stating that neither the plaintiff nor her husband had been in possession of the disputed land within twelve years, and that the suit was consequently barred by the law of limitation, and that the land in question was not that claimed in the suits in 1859 and decreed to the husband, nor a re-formation on its original site or a contiguous accretion. The Subordinate Judge held that the suit was not barred, and he gave judgment for the plaintiff for the three plots, of which he laid down the boundaries. The High Court confirmed that result, but varied the Subordinate Judge's decision in regard to the boundary line. After reciting the facts, their Lordships, Sir Richard Couch stated, were of opinion that the boundary, as laid down by the High Court, had been properly taken, and they would, therefore, humbly advise her Majesty to affirm the decree of the High Court, and dismiss the appeal. The costs would be paid by the appellant.

THE INDIGO COMPANY v. OGILVIE, GILLANDERS AND CO.

An appeal in this action came before Lords Justices Lindley and Kay from an order made by Mr. Justice North, discharging an order he had made in chambers, allowing the writ to be amended by adding as defendants Gillanders, Arbuthnot, and Co., of Calcutta. The plaintiffs, having a patent for the manufacture of indigo, made contracts with the Calcutta firm as to the use of the patent, and the question in the action arose on the interpretation and carrying out of these contracts. The Calcutta firm consists of the five partners in the London firm, and one additional one, and the plaintiffs now suggested that the Calcutta firm were the principals, and were, therefore, proper parties, though the London firm, being consignees of the indigo, property in which was claimed by the plaintiffs, were also proper parties. Mr. Higgins, Q.C., and Mr. Robson appeared for the appellants; Mr. Cozens-Hardy, Q.C., and Mr. David for the respondents.

Lord Justice Lindley, in giving judgment, said the action was brought by the Indigo Company in this country against a firm called Ogilvie, Gillanders, and Co., and by the endorsement on the writ it looked uncommonly like an action of trover. Some of the partners in Ogilvie, Gillanders, and Co. did not reside in this country, and the plaintiffs would, therefore, be wrong in issuing their writ without leave against the firm; some of the parties being abroad, they ought to have applied for leave to serve them abroad. But the partners who were abroad had appeared. The plaintiffs had obtained ex parte from Mr. Justice North in chambers an order giving them leave to amend their writ of summons by adding Gillanders, Arbuthnot, and Co., of Calcutta, as defendants. Mr. Justice North subsequently discharged this order; but in the meantime the plaintiffs had availed themselves of it by putting on the writ the name of the Calcutta firm, and commencing a new cause of action altogether. It appeared to him (Lord Justice Lindley) that there had been misconception in the matter on both sides, and therefore, the order which he would make would be to dismiss the appeal with costs.

An Indian "Cause Celebre."—The Sessions Judge at Moorshedabad has just concluded a case, which lasted thirty-four days, and which, under the title of the Jain defamation case, has excited considerable interest throughout India. The costs so far are said to amount to over 100,000 rupees, and the question at issue, being one of the purity of caste, was regarded as of great importance by the whole Jain community. Briefly, the circumstances were these. Early in 1889, Nahatta, the son of a wealthy Jain of Moorshedabad, decided to visit Europe, and, accompanied by two co-religionists, got as far as Bombay, where some Jains tried to dissuade them. But they continued their journey, and, it was alleged, broke their caste by taking European food with Europeans. On their return home they found a large section of the Jain community opposed to their being readmitted to their caste. In the course of the dispute, which seems to have rent the Jains of Moorshedabad in twain, one Chutterput and some others published a pamphlet setting out the alleged enormities of which the young men had been guilty, and arguing against their purification and readmission to their caste. Thereupon Chutterput and the others were prosecuted for a criminal libel, and the whole question at issue was whether the religious or caste customs of the Jains had been violated by Nahatta and his friends or not. The Judge described the Jain community as one of great antiquity, dating back to 8 or 9 A.D., while their strictness in regard to food, he said, amounted to fanaticism. Nahatta himself said that he would object to take rice at a table where Europeans ate meat, or to eat vegetables cooked or served by Europeans or Mahomedans. He contended that while on board the steamer he ate nothing but vegetable food (in this he was corroborated by the captain) cooked in his own utensils and on a stove of his own. He averred that he took his own rice, on which he lived between Bombay and London, and that while in Europe he lived on vegetable food cooked by himself. But the weight of the evidence was all against the young men on these points, while in India they seem to have been watched at railway refreshment rooms and at hotels, and were seen to eat eggs and other forbidden food; on board the steamer, it was proved, they ate at the ordinary table, though they did not partake of meat; and a waiter at a boarding-house in Woburn Place gave evidence to the same effect as to their stay in London. It appears that after their return the relatives of the young men, though not excluding them from their houses, refused to eat with them, and that subsequently one meeting of their co-religionists exculpated them from offence, while another condemned them. It was also shown that a resolution, signed by 600 Jains, was passed declaring the young men themselves and all who should eat with them outcast. The jury gave a verdict for the defendants, on the grounds that the statements in the pamphlet were made honestly and with a belief in their truth, and that the defendants had sufficient interest in the subject to justify them in publishing the facts.

THE

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other Service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week, written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storms of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 8, 1891.

General Intelligence.

[By Overland Mail.]

The Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 21st March; from N.W.P. and Madras to the 19th March; and from Bengal to the 18th March.

The tour of the Viceroy, which was officially notified as embracing visits to Allahabad, Philibit, Naini Tal, and other places, has, we learn by telegram, been abandoned, in consequence of the Manipur affair, and His Excellency is now at Simla.

The result of a conference on the Volunteer Question, held by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, will probably be the framing of general suggestions for increasing the strength of corps in the province. It is not, as has been suggested, merely a preliminary step to a conference on a large scale, which would scarcely be of much practical use.

Sir Alfred Croft is re-appointed a member of the Bengal Legislative Council.

Dr. King, Director of the Geological Department, has left Calcutta for Tenasserim, to inspect the Survey operations for tin carried on during the past year by Mr. Hughes.

The last of the meetings of the Police Commission in the North-West Provinces and Oudh was held on March 17, and the Secretary will proceed forthwith with the final Report. The Report of the Bengal Commission, by the way, which had not to take up several of the points dealt with in the North-Western Provinces, has already been issued, though orders have not yet been passed upon it by the Local Government.

Upon Brigadier-General Luck proceeding home on leave, the current duties connected with the Inspector-Generalship of Cavalry will be discharged in the Adjutant-General's office at army head-quarters.

Major Muir, who was recently wounded in the country north of Gwadur, is reported to be making satisfactory progress. Shahdad Khan, who instigated the attack, is now said to be among the Baluchis settled within the eastern border of Persia.

The second cable from Madras to Penang for the China and Australian traffic began working on March 12.

Under new regulations probationers collecting in England for the Indian Staff Corps will be placed on the special unattached list, from which they will be posted temporarily to British regiments.

News from the Black Mountain Expeditionary Force states that Hindu baniahs are coming into camp from villages beyond the border, a sign that the tribesmen are preparing to resist the troops. It is also reported that breastworks have been thrown up along the right bank of the Indus.

The officers engaged on the Zhob Valley survey will recess at Dalhousie during the hot weather, where they will work up the material obtained during their six months' stay beyond the Suleimans.

Certain modifications in the musketry training of British and Native Corps, to be introduced into the course for 1891-2, will be announced shortly.

Deputy Surgeon-General Rudd, A. M. S., goes shortly to Meerut in the place of Deputy Surgeon-General Collis, whose term of Indian service is up.

Brigadier-Surgeon Hamilton, Honorary Surgeon to the Viceroy, has been selected for the administrative charge of the Allahabad District, vice Deputy Surgeon-General Rudd. Brigade-Surgeon Graves has been selected to succeed Deputy Surgeon-General Hinde, C.B., at Poona.

In the Allahabad High Court an order was made transferring the liquidation of the Uncovenanted Service Bank, Limited, to the Court.

Surgeon-Major Owen vacates the post of Surgeon to the Commander-in-Chief consequent on the grant of his furlough. He will be succeeded by Dr. Edwards, Resident Surgeon at the Eden Hospital in Calcutta.

Captain Newmarch, Assistant to the Resident in Mysore, proceeds shortly on leave. He will be succeeded by Captain Ravenshaw, the latter's place as Cantonment Magistrate at Secunderabad being taken by Captain Masters from Mhow.

Colonel Holdich, in charge of the Baluchistan survey party, will proceed home on leave this summer. Captain Wahab will probably officiate, if he has completed his work with the Black Mountain Expedition.

Operations in connection with the Black Mountain Expedition are being energetically pushed forward.

While the Governor of Madras was paying a visit to the local Penitentiary, one of the prisoners threw the contents of a basin of ragi gruel over him and the party who accompanied him. The man then hurled the basin at the head of the Superintendent, but the vessel broke on the bars of the cell. The offender was afterwards punished.

His Excellency Lord Harris presided at the annual distribution to the pupils of the Indo-British Institution. The report showed that the institution has been making satisfactory progress, not only as regards the education imparted to the pupils, but also in respect of its monetary affairs.

Owing to floods the districts to the north of Quetta have been in a state of semi-starvation during the past week, the price of atta having risen to the famine rate of four seers per rupee. Kandahar grain can be sold on the British side of the frontier at as low a rate as eighteen seers to the rupee, and it has competed so successfully with that from the Punjab, that the latter has been almost ousted from the market, so much so that the Khojak District and to a large extent Quetta itself are dependent on Afghanistan for supplies.

It is intended to withdraw such troops as are now on the Chittagong-Lushai Border frontier, the police taking up all outpost duties.

The Bengal Government will administer the country up to the Koladyne. On the Assam Border the old chain of police posts will be given up, and the frontier police will move forward so as to control directly the Northern Lushai Country. Their head-quarters may possibly be established at Fort Aijal.

Rear-Admiral Robinson will take over command of the East Indian Naval Station from Admiral Fremantle. The command, however, will be restricted, as the East African Coast becomes part of the Cape Command.

After a rather prolonged period of stagnation considerable activity begins to be shown in the Calcutta gold market. The improvement in rates is not great, but during the past week firmness has been shown all round, and there is a slight rise in several of the stocks.

The postage between India and the Colonies and all countries comprised in the Universal Postal Union is reduced to two and a half annas from the 1st April.

Further, the postage to and from French and Portuguese possessions in India is reduced to inland Indian rates.

Two annas per half-ounce will be charged on letters to and from Persia.

The postage between Aden and India is reduced to the inland postage rates in force for the time being in British India.

NOTES.

The news from India which is absorbing all attention just now is that which is being flashed home daily along the telegraph-wires. Unfortunately it is news of further troubles and disasters. The Manipur affair, although not so disastrous as was at first reported, is still bad enough. The fate of the captives is yet uncertain, but there is every reason to hope that the rumours of their assassination are unfounded. The Manipuris and the Kukis know the value of hostages, and they know also that dire punishment will follow the putting to death in cold blood of any Englishman.

A rising of the Chins in the Haka district, Upper Burma, resulting in an attack on a small British escort which was accompanying Mr. MacNabb, the political officer of the district, and the loss of five men killed and an officer—Lieutenant Forbes—and eleven men wounded, will necessitate another punitive expedition.

Small wars and the rumours thereof threaten now to give the Government of India plenty to do. The small but warlike tribes of the Miranzais inhabiting the mountainous district near the Indus bordering on Afghanistan have risen and been joined by other tribes, and a telegram from the Viceroy to the Secretary of State for India, dated yesterday, conveys the unpleasant intelligence of a further sacrifice of British soldiers' lives, nine men of the 29th Regiment having been killed, and four wounded.

Lieutenant Grant, of the 2nd Battalion of the 4th Goorkhas, who so gallantly captured the mud fort of Thabal from the Manipuris, is in sore straits, being threatened by a large and well-armed force of the rebels with artillery, and he is short of provisions and ammunition. Reinforcements, however, are being pushed on, and it is to be hoped that within a few hours the news that the required succour has reached him will be received here.

Sir George Campbell asked last night in the House of Commons for more information with regard to the disaster at Manipur, and Sir J. Fergusson replied: "I inquired at the India Office in case of a question being asked, and learned that all the information with respect to recent events at Manipur possessed by the Secretary of State had been sent to the newspapers. It appears by a despatch from the Government of India that the origin of the affair was a difference between the Maharajah and some of his brothers, upon which, under apprehension for his personal safety, he took refuge at the Residency, and subsequently made an act of abdication, and retired from the territory of the State. Under directions from the Government of India, the Chief Commissioner of Assam went to Manipur in order to place the government of the State on a proper footing, when he was resisted by the commander of the State troops, who was a brother of the Rajah. Of course, proper measures will be taken to restore order, and in due time the despatch to which I have referred will be laid upon the table."

Owing to floods the districts in the north of Quetta were, when the present Overland Mail left India, threatened with starvation. A telegram to a Bombay contemporary gives the following details showing the seriousness of the situation:—"Atta has risen to the famine rate of four seers per rupee; Kandahar grain can be sold on the British side of the frontier eighteen seers per rupee; and competed successfully with the Punjab so that the latter has been ousted from the market, necessitating the Khojak District and the greater portion of Quetta itself to be dependent on Afghanistan for supplies. The rainfall has amounted to over twenty inches, and has very considerably damaged the road from New Chaman to Kandahar. Traffic is entirely suspended, owing to the rivers Arghastan and Kadanai being impassable. Large numbers of camels and donkeys, laden with atta are awaiting the subsidence of the torrent on the northern banks. The Ameer's officials are assisting the transport over the Arghastan by rafts, which is not quite disinterested, the first post for levying tolls being at Takt-i-pul on the southern side of the Arghastan. Arrangements are being made for bringing flour by rail from India. The reserves at Quetta and Peshin are drawn upon in the meanwhile. A large population employed on the railway works at Khojak are in dire straits. Scarcity of mutton in the bazaar has caused a fat-tailed dumba to be sold at Rs. 25 each. The Political Agent was compelled to order sheep to be railed in from Gulistan."

Some further explorations have been lately made on the Upper Irrawaddy. Major Hobday, Survey Department, with an escort of fifty Goorkhas, succeeded in getting as far north as lat. 26 degrees 15 minutes up the Malika. Here the local tribes began to show opposition, and the party could not, without fighting their way, have proceeded farther. The point reached was, however, only fifty miles south of that which Colonel Woodthorpe gained a few years ago in his explorations from far north of Assam. Finding his progress barred to the north, Major Hobday turned due eastwards with the intention of striking the Mika, which is supposed to be the main stream of the Irrawaddy. After exploring the course of this river for some distance, he will journey back through the hills along the Yunan border, reaching Bhamo by land. Major Hobday will probably be transferred during the current year to Poona.

"One of the signs of the times," say the Pioneer, "is the bitterness with which the orthodox Hindus in Bengal now speak of the Congress and its works. Their argument is that the trouble arising in connection with the Age of Consent Bill is solely due to the reformers, political and social, who have disturbed the old order of things. 'The Bill is a lesson to many,' says one of the vernacular papers. 'Those who are attached to their own religion will never join those who have become apostates. Arrangements may be made for holding a Hindu Congress and a Mahomedan Congress, but no true Hindu will join a Congress in which men who are hostile to persons belonging to the former religion take a prominent part.' This is very significant, as it foreshadows the secession of all orthodox Hindus from the 'political party,' of which Mr. Hume is so proud, and which he has been at such pains to foster. As a matter of fact, this secession has practically taken place already in Bengal, where feeling has run high since the announcement of the General Secretary, that four-fifths of the Congress were with him in support of the Bill."

The following official report has been published concerning the attack on Major Muir, Political Agent, South Eastern Beluchistan :—"It appears that Major Muir was inquiring into the misappropriation of revenue, and had such good reason to suspect Shahdad of peculation that he had ordered him to find a surety of Rs. 5,000 for his attendance in camp. Major Muir was investigating the case in a grove of date-trees some 300 yards from his camp, where there was a strong escort left him by Sir Robert Sandeman. Having finished his day's work, he asked Shahdad to accompany him to his tent. This the Sirdar sullenly refused to do, and began to walk away, though he was warned that he would be put under arrest. Major Muir had with him a moonshi and a chaprassi. The latter followed him, whereupon the Sirdar turned round, drew a knife, and attacked him. At the same moment one of his retainers rushed out from behind the trees, and cut at Major Muir with a sword. The chaprassi pluckily rushed to his master's assistance; but as both were unarmed, they could make no real resistance. They were terribly cut about, but managed to reach the open ground in sight of the camp, from which relief quickly came. Shahdad and his men fled. The chaprassi died after both his arms had been amputated, but Major Muir is recovering, though severely wounded. As Shahdad has crossed into Persia, his capture will not be an easy matter."

By Telegraph.

(Times Correspondents.)

THE DISASTER IN MANIPUR.

Calcutta, April 6.

Two mountain guns and a pioneer company of Calcutta Volunteers start for Cachar to-day. The remainder of the mountain battery starts for Nigriting to-morrow. Troops and stores are going forward daily, and a force will advance from Cachar as well as from the other points.

Nothing is yet known regarding the prisoners. Various rumours from native sources are current, but they should be received with great caution. The general opinion of people who know the Manipuris well is that, unless the captives were killed directly they were seized, they will be safe. The Government is trying to communicate with them and the Regent through the Burma Government.

The line the Government is taking in sending letters to the Regent and giving him an opportunity of excusing himself, is perhaps the wisest in the interests of the prisoners, but it is thought that it may be embarrassing hereafter.

Calcutta, April 5.

The Manipur disaster has dwarfed all other topics during the past week, and the public is now awaiting news of the prisoners with intense anxiety. Probably definite intelligence will not come for some days. Meanwhile, although it cannot be denied that their position is one of grave peril, the general impression is that their captors will attempt no further violence, in the hope of thereby securing for themselves better terms.

Now that the first excitement is over, the question is being discussed on all sides as to who is to blame. With every disposition not hastily to condemn men who are in the power of a half-civilized enemy, and possibly in danger of their lives, and in any case unable to defend themselves, it is still impossible to avoid the conclusion that there have been grave errors of judgment somewhere. It seems most extraordinary that Mr. Grimwood, who has been political agent at Manipur for a considerable time, should have completely failed to grasp the situation, to understand the popular feeling, and to warn the Indian Government and Mr. Quinton.

It is hardly less strange that Mr. Quinton should, as appears to have been the case, have made no secret of his intention to arrest the Senaputty, should have proposed to effect his arrest during a durbar, and, that scheme failing, should have sent 250 men to make a seizure in a fortified place armed with artillery and garrisoned with about 6,000 men. The action of the military authorities is scarcely less puzzling. How, for instance, came it that Mr. Quinton's escort was armed with Sniders, while the Residency guard had Martinis, and presumably the reserve ammunition at the Residency was adapted only for the latter weapon? These and other questions may possibly be fully and satisfactorily answered hereafter, and, the safety of the prisoners once assured, the public will undoubtedly require them to be answered.

It is believed that all the Europeans and nearly all the escort are now accounted for. Great anxiety was felt regarding Lieutenant Grant, who, with 85 men, had marched from Tamu for Manipur. It is now ascertained that he fought his way against 800 Manipuris, and occupied the mud fort at Thobal, a few miles from the capital, where he is now besieged. A body of troops under Captain Presgrave left Tamu yesterday to relieve him. This is, as far as is yet known, the only brilliant exploit in the whole affair, excepting the conduct of a Sepoy named Joymani Thupa, of the 42nd Goorkhas, who, when Lieutenant Brackenbury fell mortally wounded, is said to have rushed forward under a heavy fire and carried him to a place of safety.

The party from Kohima has advanced to Maitifam, 20 miles beyond Mao on the Manipur road, and has found the bodies of five victims. The prompt action of the commanding officer and Deputy-Commissioner at Kohima cannot be too highly commended; it has not only made that important post safe, but it has probably prevented the Nagas from rising.

Some restlessness has shown itself among Manipuri settlers in Cachar, who are estimated to number nearly 30,000. A small body of them was stopped at the frontier while attempting to cross into Manipur, one being killed in the scuffle. The 3rd and 13th Bengal Infantry and the 2nd Goorkhas are now on their way to Cachar, and they will doubtless suffice to maintain order.

Preparations for the advance are being pushed on rapidly. The Government has wisely concentrated the civil and military authority in the hands of General Collett by appointing him Acting Chief Commissioner of Assam. Mr. M'Cabe, who did excellent service among the Lushais last year, goes as political officer with the Kohima column, which will probably consist of No. 8 Mountain Battery, the 1st Battalion of the 2nd Goorkhas, the 36th Sikhs, and 800 Goorkhas from the Kohima garrison.

It is understood that no advance will be made from Cachar, as on the road thence there are several rivers which are crossed by cane bridges, which the enemy has probably cut; but it is apparently intended to use the Cachar line for the provisioning force, as a number of bullocks and some stores are being sent to Silchar, and also a large quantity of wire for repairing the bridges. The road from Kohima to Manipur is about 105 miles long, and presents no difficulties, but the troops not actually on the spot must march from Nigriting, on the Brahmaputra, a distance of 117 miles, to Kohima.

Tamu is the nearest British station to Manipur, and its distance from that place is about 70 miles. General Graham's column can hardly assemble at Tamu before the 15th inst., so there is little chance of the troops reaching Manipur before the 20th.

A company of Calcutta Volunteers has offered its services to the Government, and it will start for Cachar shortly.

Rangoon, April 3.

The messengers who were sent to recall Lieutenant Grant and his party of 80 sepoys marching from Tamu to Manipur failed to reach him. A letter was received yesterday at Tamu from Lieutenant Grant, dated March 31, stating that he had reached Thobal, 13 miles from Manipur, fighting all the way. At Thobal, after a severe fight, he captured the mud fort from a large body of Manipuris.

Later.

The message from Lieutenant Grant at Thobal says that he has reason to believe that he is the only European alive in Manipur. As he appears to have no special means of information, a hope is still entertained that Mr. Quinton and the other prisoners are still alive in Manipur, although the report of the prisoners being massacred is confirmed from a native source.

Lieutenant Grant's message was brought to Tamu by a prisoner whom he had captured, the other prisoners being held as hostages for the safe delivery of the letter.

Lieutenant Grant's small band, consisting of Goorkhas and the military police, who were formed into the 10th Burmah Regmt., appears to have fought splendidly, and to have defeated the Manipuris when outnumbered by twenty to one. Lieutenant Grant asks for reinforcements and ammunition. Help is being despatched immediately to Lieutenant Grant, who reports that the whole Manipuri army is before Thobal, and his position is undoubtedly very critical.

Sir A. Mackenzie, who has returned from Mergui, is using every effort to hurry on the reinforcements to Tamu, and the Burmah column will probably be the first to start for Manipur.

April 5.

A telegram from Tamu received yesterday by the local Government states that eight Shan traders had arrived there from Manipur. They stated that they had heard at Manipur that all the European prisoners were killed there on the day of the attack on Mr. Quinton's escort.

This may be a mere rumour, and the prisoners are possibly kept close in the palace. The local Government is without any definite information as to the safety or otherwise of Mr. Quinton and his party. So far all available native evidence represents the prisoners as being killed.

A letter from the Viceroy to the Regent of Manipur, covering one for Mr. Quinton, has been forwarded from Tamu to Manipur by a special messenger, who was paid a large sum to carry it. The letter, which is carefully worded and judicious in tone, has been framed so as to avoid alarming the Regent or driving him to extremities. Lord Lansdowne informs the Regent that three strong bodies of troops are starting for Manipur to restore order. The rising there is treated as one rather against the Regent's authority than movements instigated by him or his brother. The Viceroy further states that he has learnt that the Regent has Mr. Quinton and other Europeans in his custody, and directs their immediate release.

The Manipuris are not savages, but are extremely ignorant. Neither the Rajah nor any of his three brothers have ever left Manipuri territory, and they are wholly ignorant of the real extent of British power.

Some alarm is felt lest Mr. Quinton's papers have been captured, and among these may have been found instructions very hostile to the Rajah's brother, the Senaputty, or Commander-in-Chief, who recently assumed the title of Jubraj, or heir apparent. In such a case the Senaputty, out of spite, might do his worst.

At daybreak yesterday Captain Presgrave, with 100 rifles of the 12th Burmah Regiment, taking an ample supply of ammunition, started from Tamu to bring back Lieutenant Grant's force from Thobal. As Thobal is only about 57 milles from Tamu, it is hoped that, even if the march is opposed, they will reach it within a few days.

The mystery surrounding affairs in Manipur is increased by the fact that 500 picked Goorkhas, commanded by experienced officers, were overcome by the Manipuris, who are notoriously an unwarlike race, while Lieutenant Grant, a young officer, with 30 Goorkhas and 50 military police, fought his way almost up to Manipur, repulsing the attacks of greatly superior numbers, and winding up by capturing the mud fort at Thobal and driving out 800 Manipuris who held it.

The 60th Rifles, the 2nd Battalion of the 4th Goorkhas, some mountain guns, and a strong body of military police are moving by forced marches on Tamu. All the military arrangements for the advance from Tamu are being carried out by Sir Frederick Roberts himself.

"From Viceroy, April 3, 1891.

"Detachment under Grant, which was despatched from Tamu on first receipt of news on 27th, was reported to have been surrounded at Waitank, in Manipur, on 30th, the messengers sent to recall him having failed to reach him. A later account states that Grant had driven the Manipuris out of Thobal on 31st, but was confronted by a larger body with guns. Chatterton is with Otter, near Silchar, safe. Melville a captive in Manipur. Lugard's wound very slight."

CALCUTTA, APRIL 3.

The following fresh news from Manipur, through official and private channels, although meagre, helps to clear up some points which have been hitherto doubtful:—

Mr. Quinton on his arrival at Manipur on the 22nd ult. summoned a durbar. As the Jubraj alone appeared, Mr. Quinton refused to receive him. On the same afternoon Mr. Grimwood had an interview with the Jubraj in the Palace. Next day the Sanaputty again failed to appear, and Mr. Grimwood had a further interview with the Jubraj, and, it is believed, intimated to him that the Government would not recognize him as Maharajah unless he surrendered the Senaputty, and would effect the arrest of the latter by force.

It now seems certain that, as this demand was not complied with, Colonel Skene attempted to seize the Senaputty in the Palace before dawn on the 24th, and that fighting began at once. The Manipuris, however, appear to have been preparing to fight before then, for on the 23rd the telegraph signaller at Manipur sent a message privately to the signaller at Lengmai to the effect that there was war.

The officers who have escaped say that the Residency was shelled from 5 to 8 o'clock in the evening, and again from midnight to 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. They attribute the failure of ammunition to the fact that the Sepoys of the 43rd Regiment had Martinis, while Mr. Quinton's escort of the 42nd and 44th Goorkhas had Sniders.

About 200 Sepoys escaped with the officers, and they had some fighting during the retreat. When they met Captain Cowley's detachment of 200 men, a consultation was held about returning to the rescue of the prisoners, but it was decided that it was impossible, owing to want of food and ammunition.

The following is a list of casualties as far as is known:—

42nd Goorkhas.—Colonel Skene, prisoner; Lieutenant Lugard, slightly wounded; 11 Sepoys wounded, and 97 missing.

43rd Goorkhas.—Lieutenant Simpson, prisoner; 2 Sepoys killed, and 2 native officers and 67 Sepoys missing.

44th Goorkhas.—Lieutenant Brackenbury, 2 native officers, and 10 Sepoys killed, and 62 missing.

Of those who have escaped 108 belong to the 42nd, 35 to the 43rd, and 114 to the 44th Regiments.

It is believed that Mr. Williams, the telegraph signaller at Lengmai, has been killed.

A Calcutta newspaper publishes an interview with the ex-Maharajah of Manipur. He maintains that the Senaputty is responsible, and blames Mr. Grimwood for allowing himself to be hoodwinked, and so misleading Mr. Quinton. The Maharajah adds that the prisoners are probably safe.

General Collett commands the advance from Kohima, and General Graham that from Tamu. Owing to the difficulty of the road, the forces can hardly reach Manipur before the end of the month.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, APRIL 6.

The latest news from the Black Mountain is to the effect that the crowds of armed men who assembled on the Baio heights some days ago have dispersed. It is reported in the British camp that Nyangul, the son of the Akhund of Swat, has persuaded the Swatis and Bonerwals to return to their homes, but probably the action of the Government in moving troops from the Peshawur valley to the Boner frontier has caused them to avoid trying conclusions with the expedition.

News has reached the Government that the post which was left on the Samana Range after the recent Miranzai expedition has been attacked by other tribes, and several men of the 29th Regiment are reported to have been killed. Reinforcements have been sent.

"From Viceroy, April 6, 1891.

"Sharp fighting has taken place near posts on Samana Range, which have been held by us since Miranzai expedition. It is reported that several tribes have risen. In engagement yesterday, 29th Regiment lost nine men killed and four wounded. We are strengthening force on Samana Range."

APRIL 5.

There has been little news from the Black Mountain during the last few days. It was reported in camp at Palosi that Nyangul, chief of Swat, with 500 followers, had arrived at Baio and ordered the Bonerwals to disperse, but this requires confirmation. The reserve brigade remains at Derband.

The Indian Volunteer force is greatly gratified by the honour conferred on Colonel Rivett-Carnac, of the Ghazipore Battalion, by his appointment as an aide-de-camp to the Queen. There is probably no man to whom the Volunteer movement in India owes more than to Colonel Rivett-Carnac, and this recognition of the force by Her Majesty is likely to have an excellent effect.

CALCUTTA, APRIL 3.

The preliminary census returns give the population of Bombay City at 806,000, of Calcutta as 674,000, and of Madras as 449,000. If all the suburbs, and Howrah and Bally, which are really as much part of Calcutta as Lambeth is of London, be included, the total for the capital would be 969,000. It is believed that the preliminary totals of the feudatory States are about four and a half millions short.

"From Governor, Madras, April 3.

"Continuance of high prices severely felt by poorer classes in affected parts of Chingleput and North Arcot. Five thousand six hundred labourers employed on special works in former district, 2,167 in latter district. Number on gratuitous relief in North Arcot 160. Condition of Tinnevelly so much improved that there is cause for anxiety no longer, except as regards Nanguneri taluk. Prices stationary."

BURMA.

Rangoon, April 6.

A column of 100 rifles, under Lieutenant Macnabb, has fallen into an ambush that had been carefully prepared by the Kanhow Chins, and sustained a loss of five men killed and ten wounded.

The column made an orderly retreat, and met with reinforcements advancing to its assistance under Major Mainwaring, to whom information of the attack had been given by a Haka chief.

The Chins are giving trouble on the Bengal side also. A punitive expedition is being arranged. Telegraphic communication between Kendat and Tamu is interrupted.

According to further details received to-day from Upper Burma regarding the attack on the column accompanying Lieutenant Macnabb, the force consisted of 100 men of the 2nd Battalion 3rd Goorkha Regiment, under Lieutenant Mocatta, and two guns of the 2nd Mountain Battery. The column was returning from Tao, 40 miles west of Haka, when it was attacked by 700 Llaingtlaing Chins, Lieutenant Forbes being wounded. Owing to the number of wounded and short rations Lieutenant Macnabb returned to Haka.

Colonel Mainwaring, learning that Lieutenant Macnabb's column expected to be attacked, sent forward 130 men of the same regiment to his support.

The Bengal Government will co-operate with the Burmese authorities in punishing the tribe from Fort Tregear.

The 2nd and 4th Goorkhas, the 12th Burmah Regiment, two guns of No. 2 Mounted Battery, and 250 men of the military police will concentrate at Tamu on Friday next. A wing of the King's Royal Rifle Corps, with two guns of the same battery, are expected to reach Tamu about the 17th inst. Two hundred men of the Oxfordshire Light Infantry hold the Kuto and Kale valleys, but will not form part of the field force. The 4th Burmah Regiment, which will form a reserve at Tamu, is now being recalled from the Chinbok frontier, where it has done excellent service with Captain Hastings's column.—Reuter.

Simla, April 6.

Intelligence has been received here of a slight Chin rising in the Haka district, Upper Burmah. The rebels made an attack on a British force. Lieutenant Forbes was severely wounded and five Goorkhas were killed.—Reuter.

Rangoon, April 5.

It has been decided to increase the strength of the Burma garrison by three native regiments. Henceforward the garrison will consist of 17 native regiments. The European force and the artillery will continue at their present strength.

April 3.

The Rangoon Times announces that the greater portion of the town of Wuntho has been burned, and that there is much sickness amongst the troops stationed there.

The Tsawbwa of Kale, a petty state on the Upper Chindwin, who was in treasonable correspondence with the rebels in Wuntho, and was reported by the local officers as sure to follow the example set in Manipur, has been arrested by Sir A. Mackenzie's orders, and is now in safe custody at Pokoko. This prompt action removes a source of danger which might have delayed the advance to Manipur of the column from Tamu.

April 1.

General Wolseley is at Manei, directing the advance into the Kachyen hills in pursuit of the Tsawbwas, who have retreated there. General Wolseley has been joined by the Mogoung column. Much reconnaissance work has been done in various directions.

The mounted infantry of the Cornish regiment, under Captain Custance, are 40 miles north of the Toungkonlon hills. Colonel Macgregor is at Endawgyee Lake. Wuntho itself is now quiet, but while the elder Tsawbwa remains at large there will always be danger of a renewal of disturbance.

The departure from Burma of the following troops has been countermanded:—The 2nd Battalion of the 4th Goorkhas, the 4th Pioneers, and the 8th Mardas.

PERJURY IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

The summing up in the Jain Case, which dragged along in the Calcutta High Court for thirty-four days, is remarkable for one statement that was volunteered by the Presiding Judge. Mr. Justice Pigot, commenting upon the evidence of one of the witnesses, said to the Jury:—"It must have struck you that Indra Chand Nahatta was attempting to conceal the truth when he was in the box. It was very wrong of Chutterput to offer a sum of money to Chunder Suker Sen's academy, but there are persons as skilled witnesses at home, too, who receive very handsome gratuities—gentlemen who give evidence favourable either one way or the other, or pronounce an opinion as to a case. Still it was reprehensible on Chutterput's part to have acted thus." These are his lordship's exact words as reported in the Calcutta papers, and they can bear but one construction, namely, that evidence can be bought in England, and that "skilled witnesses," by which, presumably, experts are meant, can readily be obtained there who have no regard for the sanctity of an oath. We cannot say what experience Mr. Justice Pigot has had in the English criminal Courts. It has probably been of the most limited kind, for otherwise he would scarcely have ventured to institute comparisons between witnesses in India and England. The offence of perjury at home is rightly regarded as one which merits sharp and severe punishment, and this it usually receives. In India, on the contrary, it is one of the commonest occurrences for tutored witnesses to be convicted of lying out of their own mouths, and for the Magistrate or Judge to declare that they have perjured themselves. But nothing further is heard of these cases; as a rule prosecutions for perjury are very rarely instituted; and the witness lives to lie another day, gaining increased confidence as he finds himself free to pursue his calling. In England it is the exception for a witness to be other than truthful, in spite of the Calcutta Judge; in India, as the records of our courts unhappily prove, the truthful witness is a rarity. The inconsequential way, too, in which English witnesses were dragged in to give point to the Judge's remarks, cannot fail to be remarked: "there are skilled witnesses at home, too, who receive very handsome gratuities"—presumably to perjure themselves—"still, it was reprehensible on Chutterput's part to have acted thus." Does the existence of English perjurers conjured up by the Judge mitigate the offence of illicitly procuring evidence in India? If this be so, then two blacks make a white, and there is no hope that the bearing of false witness against one's neighbour will ever be put an end to in this country.

MILITARY MEDICAL TITLES.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The much vexed question of military medical titles is settled at last by the telegram which we publish to-day; and medicos will in future enjoy the full distinction of their relative rank as "Captains," "Majors," and so forth. The system is copied from the practical American example; and its adoption will be welcome to the majority of British medical officers. In the I.M.S. the medical officers in military employ will for the most part be pleased with the change; but those in civil employ will perhaps be inclined, seeing that the change will make no practical difference to them, to opine that the service could have got on just as well without it. The majority of combatant officers, it goes without saying, will regard it as more or less of an encroachment on their rights and privileges; and the change will doubtless form a staple subject for mess chaff for some time to come. In individual cases we may even look for some little friction. Nevertheless, there can be no doubt that the new system is a wise adaptation to circumstances; and, after its novelty has worn off, the wonder will seem to be that the service ever got along without intolerable friction before it was introduced.

THE DECAY OF NATIVE INDUSTRIES.

A correspondent sends the following to the Editor of the Madras Mail:—

"I see from a recent issue of your journal that a movement is already set on foot in England for preserving or reviving the dying industries of the land. Nothing can be nobler and more philanthropic than this laudable endeavour of European ladies and gentlemen. There are several causes that contribute to the decay of native industries, such as the abolition of import duties, which had protective effect on native industries, the change of tastes and feelings of the people engaged in these industries, the revolution of Native Society disturbing the labour market, brought on by several causes, like the revolutionary system of University higher education, and so on. Among the several causes His Excellency the Governor, in the short speech delivered at the opening of the Fine Arts Exhibition, takes prominent notice of a chief cause of the decay. He says:—

"'It was for us, as far as we could, to reconstitute Indian Art on the footing it once occupied in ancient days, when all Rajahs and Zemindars had in their own palaces Special Schools of Art and Special Schools of Work and Industry. These are gradually disappearing, becoming less in number, and less intellectual in character. The Indian Government was no doubt looked up to to take the place of the Rajahs and Zemindars; but it was almost impossible, and we must look to the leaders of the people throughout the country to do their utmost as far as they possibly can to cultivate Indian Art and to keep it up to the level it once occupied. Government, on its side, would of course do something, but those who were bound up with the people of this country were able to do more even than Government could, with all its resources at its back.'

"The opinion of His Excellency is so correct and accurate

that it reflects great credit on the keenness of perception with which His Excellency has realised so soon the condition of the landed aristocracy and the consequent decay of the arts and industries of the country. If there be no consumers of the production of arts of the country, either in the shape of customers to buy in the market, or chiefly in the shape of systematic patrons of influence, wealth, and taste, the Indian industries must inevitably decay. For a Rajah or Zemindar to be a patron of Native arts, ornamental or useful, two conditions are necessary, viz. domestic peace and happiness, and also sufficient means for the maintenance and support of these arts. But these two conditions are sadly wanting in the landed aristocracy of the Presidency, whose condition is gradually sinking towards poverty and unhappiness. I know a big Zemindar of the Kistna District, the Rajah of Vallur, who keeps an industrial school where boys are trained by him under his superintendence, he being a good mechanic himself. He forms an exception to the general rule of Rajahs and Zemindars to whom the remarks of His Excellency the Governor are applicable. I had the pleasure of going with him in the Ellore Canal for some distance in his boat constructed by himself. His remark on the growing degeneracy of the landed nobility is worthy of notice. He said:—'In former times the Zemindars had ample means, with which they constructed tanks and irrigation works, did charity freely, and built temples. Now we are obliged to waste our money on courts and on lawyers without any benefit to us and to our country.' The remark is applicable with equal force to the general inability of our Rajahs and Zemindars to maintain and encourage Indian arts. How could this nobility be expected to be able to develop the resources of the country in this direction while some have already collapsed, some are collapsing now, and all the rest are liable to collapse sooner or later. As long as the zemindary estates are not protected from ruinous and vexatious litigation by legislative measures, as far as possible, there is no hope of protecting the Rajahs and Zemindars from ultimate ruin and extinction. With them all the patrons of Native arts and industries must cease to exist, as far as their influence goes."

LORD WENLOCK AND THE EURASIANS.

(Statesman.)

The Eurasian community of Madras will find but cold comfort, we fear, in Lord Wenlock's reply to the address of welcome of the local Association. Yet it is difficult to see how it could have been more encouraging. The figures quoted by the new Governor showed that there was little or no ground for the complaint of the Association that fewer Eurasians are employed by the Government than formerly. But even if the case were otherwise, it would not necessarily follow that the Eurasians had been unfairly treated. For the natural result of the spread of education among the native community would be a diminution in the proportion of appointments properly available for them. Before they can fairly establish a grievance in the matter, the Association must be in a position to show, not that fewer Eurasians are employed than in the past, but that the number of appointments conferred bears a smaller proportion to the number of properly qualified persons in the Eurasian than in the native community; and it is altogether unlikely, we think, that they can do this. Of the growing severity of the struggle for existence among the Eurasians of Madras, as of other parts of India, there is unfortunately no doubt; and the fact that the Government is not responsible for it makes it none the less hard to bear. There is something almost like mockery in the hope expressed by Lord Wenlock that they will qualify for competition with other races, not because the hope is out of place, but because its fulfilment pre-supposes so much more than the words seem at first sight to imply, or than the speaker probably intended. Lord Wenlock probably had in his mind merely the knowledge, the skill, and the habits of industry necessary for earning a livelihood, and in these and similar respects the Eurasians, as a class, have no doubt much to learn. But, unfortunately, this is not all. Competition with other races implies the possession not merely of equal, or superior, working capacity, but also of equal or superior frugality and thrift. In order that the Eurasian may compete successfully with the native of India, he must not merely be able to earn as much, and for that purpose to do as much and as good work, as the native, but he must also be prepared to work for the same rate of remuneration, and for that purpose, unless he is endowed with better brain or muscle, to live on as little as the native. In short, before Lord Wenlock's hope can be fulfilled, the Eurasian has not only much to learn, but a good deal more to unlearn. He has to unlearn the habits of life which make it impossible for him to subsist on the same wages as the native of this country, and this, we take it, is far the more difficult part of the problem he has to solve. The task is, indeed, one of such supreme difficulty, that it would be unjust to blame the Eurasian for shrinking from it; and it is immeasurably the more difficult that it demands, at the outset, a heavy sacrifice of pride. We refer not to the false pride which leads some Eurasians to see degradation in honest labour, but to the honourable pride which makes men cling to the status of their fathers. In one respect, it is to be regretted, the Eurasians make the problem more difficult than it need be. In the important particular of marriage, they possess a distinct advantage over the native of India in the struggle for existence, for they are under no sort of obligation, religious or other, to saddle themselves with the burden of a family before they can afford to keep one. But they choose deliberately to throw away this advantage, by imitating, to a great extent, the native custom of early marriage; and until they reform their habits in this respect, they are doomed, as a community, to increasing poverty.

LOCAL AUTONOMY IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.

(Bombay Gazette.)

New reasons against confident generalizations about the success or failure of local self-government are given in the resolution of the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces on the working of the Municipalities under his administration in 1889–90. Some of the Municipalities, we are told, are working well, others are not; and the Chief Commissioner refrains from expressing any opinion as to the general quality of the work done. At the same time there is no evidence that any of the Municipalities are working worse than they did, and as, in the Jubbulpore Division, the Commissioner finds that there was "an all-round improvement in Municipal administration last year," the movement is in the right direction. When things are not going as well as they might do, the cause is not to be found in an inherent incapacity of the members of the Committees to do their duty. Left to themselves, it may generally be said, they become indifferent, and sanitation and public works are neglected. But it is not an essential principle of any scheme of local self-government in India that the Municipal bodies should be left to themselves. In the Punjab, where there were some almost phenomenal instances of neglect on the part of Local and District Boards last year, it was found that wherever the district authorities took an active part in the work of the Boards better results could be shown. A frank acceptance of the general truth that these bodies will not work well if left to themselves would save much trouble and misunderstanding. In the Central Provinces it is the same as elsewhere. The Commissioner of the Nerbudda Division recognizes this when he urges that in some cases the proceedings of the Committees demand constant and close supervision on the part of the Deputy Commissioner and his assistants, especially in matters of sanitation and public works. One paragraph in the resolution seems to suggest that the quality of the work of these bodies is in measure with the interest which the district officers take in their proceedings. Comment is made, we are told, by the Commissioners of the Jubbulpore and Chhatisgarh Divisions on the irregular attendance at Municipal meetings of certain Government officials who are nominated members of Municipal Committees; and these members are reminded that it is their duty to attend and aid in the deliberations. On this view of things it would be difficult to take an entirely unfavourable view of the operations of local self-government in the Central Provinces. Nearly three-fourths of the six hundred and odd members of the Municipal Committees are elected, and these bodies dispense a revenue amounting to about twelve and a half lakhs. The weak point of the Municipalities seems to be conservancy, their failure to deal with which may arise from the need for the development in India of the sense of smell, to which a Bombay practitioner referred the other day, or from the prevailing vice of indifferentism which formed the theme of Sir Auckland Colvin's remarkable address at Lucknow last month. However, the Municipal Committees who fail in this regard are warned that if they do not mend their ways the supervision over this important part of Municipal administration may have to be transferred to the police.

THE EXCHANGE QUESTION.

(Englishman.)

In dealing with the Exchange question, the Finance Committee of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, which has been deputed to consider the Exchange question, and to consult the Government of India regarding a possible remedy for the evils caused by a violent fluctuation of the ratio between the precious metals, will do well to direct their attention to the great mismanagement which is apparent in the weekly sales of Council Bills. Complaints have previously been made of the want of ordinary business tact and discretion which is apparent in the official transaction by which so large a portion of Indian trade is financed, but during the past ten months of unprecedented excitement and uncertainty the bad generalship at the India Office has been more strikingly displayed than before. When Indian commerce had become the plaything of American politicians, and the rupee was rushing up madly, to the wonder and consternation of traders, coolness and discretion at the India Office would have done much to restore confidence, and to check the rapidity of the rise which it could not wholly prevent. Instead of a display of calmness and judgment, however, the tactics persued betrayed as great an amount of bewilderment within the Council as existed among those whose personal interests in the case were vital. Every effort seemed to be put forward to exaggerate the rise and to increase the general excitement. The advertised weekly sales were reduced to fifteen lakhs of rupees, and prices were forced up after each Council Bill day by the grudging issue of additional sums at constantly rising rates. Had the sales been increased largely, the Secretary of State would not only have been the gainer, as events have proved, but would have been also a veritable benefactor to the distracted bankers and merchants whose operations were so largely controlled by his. The evil effects of this miserly policy are now apparent. Having lost the opportunity of making a high average for the Council Bills of the current financial year, when they were saleable in any quantity at moderate rates, the India Council now commits a worse mistake in increasing the quantity offered weekly to forty-five lakhs, throwing them into competition with a metal which is depreciating more rapidly than at any previous period. There can be no doubt that the mismanagement of the sales of Council Bills is responsible to no inconsiderable extent for the present heavy fall in exchange, as well as for much of the extreme excitement which characterized the period when the scramble for silver and its equivalents was at its height. It should not be difficult for the Chamber of Commerce to suggest an improved plan for the disposal of Council Bills; it ought to be possible so to manipulate them as to make the weekly sales assist in preserving the equilibrium of the ratio, instead of, as at present, disturbing it.

THE ROUTE TO MANIPUR.

(Times.)

The nature of the Assam country, and the roads over which troops sent to punish the outbreak at Manipur will have to pass, is a matter of so much importance to the punitive expedition that the following description, given by a resident who knows the province well, will be read with interest. It must be taken as describing a state of things which prevailed five years ago.

Assam is little else than a portion of the valley of the Brahmaputra, which river, flowing east and west, has cut itself a wide channel across hills running north and south. The river is the great highway of the country, and is fully navigable from Calcutta. What is known as the inner frontier line edges the plain of the river to the north, and limits in that direction the area for which we hold ourselves responsible. On the south, the territory of Assam includes a broad belt of continuous hill district, which stretches parallel with the valley of the river, from east to west. All the places of which we have lately been hearing are situated within this hill district. Manipur lies to the extreme south-east of it, Shillong about midway east and west. Silchar and Lakhipur are on a bridle track, connecting Shillong with Manipur, which runs the greater part of the way through dense jungle, composed of the impenetrable beesha bamboo. No provisions are obtainable on the road; it is necessary to move all the way in single file; vision is bounded on either side by the close bamboo wall. So dangerous and so inhospitable is the jungle, that a delay in the march, or a failure to take sufficient provisions, is an incident so serious as to cause the possible death, by starvation and thirst, of the expedition. The usual provision with which the bearers are charged from Manipur to Lakhipur is for seven days. The retreating party from Manipur appear to have accomplished the distance in three or four. It is not, however, a road by which a relieving or punitive expedition could approach in any force. The lie of the hills north and south makes the travelling along this track to Shillong almost impassably severe. Troops sent from Shillong must, therefore, go first due north for 63 miles to Gauhati on the Brahmaputra, whence they would ascend the river in steamers to Nigriting, a journey of about a day and a half, if the stream is not swollen by the rains. From Nigriting they would march due south by Golaghat to Dimapur, another distance of 63 miles, thus describing three sides of a parallelogram, of which the width is 63 miles, and the length about 150; and from Dimapur they would march by Kohima to Manipur. This is the route by which Mr. Quinton's late expedition must have moved. The time required for moving a large party from Shillong to Gauhati is about four days. The time required for shipping troops from Goalunda, the point on the river nearest to Calcutta, from which it is presumable that the troops which are being sent up will start, is also, or may by very good management be made to be, four days. The troops to be employed upon the expedition, whether going from Calcutta or from Shillong, may, therefore, be assumed to meet at Gauhati and to pursue their road together from that point.

It has been said that they will concentrate at Nigriting, but at Nigriting there is only a floating dock bungalow, of which the position is varied by the state of the river to the extent of two miles, and there are no means of giving shelter or food to troops. They will probably pass at once to Golaghat, and it is from this point that their real trouble will begin. The road to Dimapur, which is divided into six stages of something just under 11 miles each, lies through an Assam swamp forest, at about 300 feet above sea level. It is not metalled, and in the rainy season is an absolutely impassable river of liquid mud. In the best season it is a track of dry mud, raised slightly above the bordering swamp, and wide enough to allow two bullocks to pass. On either side it is edged by trees 120 feet high, and dense swamp jungle. Holes large enough to allow of a bullock and his load disappearing into the quagmire beneath are frequent, and the labour for pack animals is so severe that several hundred have sometimes to be condemned midway, as totally unable to pursue their way. It is no uncommon sight to see cart-loads of rice abandoned on the track, and, when carts are used, whole trains have sometimes to be left upon the road. At each eleven mile stage a space in the swamp has been cleared and bungalows have been erected. The only way in which troops could be moved along the road would be company by company, each company occupying one stage, to which provisions had previously been forwarded. The heavy rains do not begin till June. The spring rains usually begin in the month of March, and in April swamp fever and cholera are very prevalent and deadly to Bengal natives. Elephants afford the best means of transport. They suffer less from sickness than mules or bullocks, but they are not always to be obtained.

From Dimapur, south-east to Kohima, the hill country begins again. There is a good hard bridle track with solid bridges, and the travelling becomes comparatively easy. The distance takes about three days. From Kohima to Moa, on the frontier, there is a good mountain path skirting the side of the hills, which rise to 10,000 feet in height, and affording magnificent views of a highly picturesque country. After that come 26 miles of dense jungle, and then fairly good going, along a hard bridle path, through thin jungle and grass, for the remainder of the eight days to Manipur. The jungle and grass unfortunately afford dangerous cover to the Kuki natives. Manipur itself is an overgrown native village, which, among other pleasant peculiarities, is destitute of drinking-water. It is presumable that this was the reason for stationing the detachment of troops of the late expedition at Laogthabal, which possesses a stream and is four miles to the south of Manipur. At Manipur the Rajah's "palace" is a compound of native huts, surrounded by a moat, within which 7,000 persons huddle together. The Residency is simply an open bungalow, surrounded by a garden. There was, therefore, no possibility of maintaining any defence in a case of sudden siege.

The road which has been described is the road which must be taken by troops going from Calcutta or Assam to the scene of the late disaster. The road from Tamu in Burma is less generally known, but much more practicable. It is a hard, single file hill track through jungle, and the distance from Tamu to Manipur is only four days. While troops from Calcutta or Shillong cannot by any calculation arrive at Manipur under a month's time, troops from Tamu might deal with the matter within a week. The natives in revolt are presumably General Johnstone's Kukis, well trained and armed with Enfield rifles. This force, originally raised by Colonel M'Culloch, was developed and trained by General—then Colonel—Johnstone, when, seven years ago, he held the position of Resident at Manipur. The aboriginal Manipuri would be very easily dealt with. He is a creature of no fighting capacity whatever. The Kuki is a more serious opponent, but the number of those who have been trained is limited. They have already spent a good deal of their ammunition, and it is unlikely that they could stand against European troops, although this is not the first time that they have proved themselves a match for the Goorkhas.

There is also another force in Assam, of which no account, apparently, has been taken. This is the so-called Frontier Police, which is really a native regiment, used entirely for military purposes, well drilled, well armed, and first-rate shots. There are four battalions of them, of about 500 strong. One battalion is at present quartered at Dibrovgurh, another at Tura, the capital of the Garo Hills, and the remaining two battalions are employed on blockhouse duty along the Inner Line.

With regard to the provisioning of troops, the valley of the Brahmaputra produces plenty of rice and other grains. Unfortunately the Goorkhas and Bengal troops will not eat Assam rice, alleging that it is poisonous to them. Provisions of rice and atta will, therefore, have to be carried for the whole expedition, and the supply will have to be kept up from head-quarters. The worst dangers to be faced by the expedition are, however, cholera and fever, which at this time of the year will decimate troops from the plains. Native Bengalees suffer more than Europeans. The weather will be insufferably hot, and, when the rains begin in earnest, mountain streams will become impassable. The rainy season continues till November.

NATIVE ORNAMENTS.

(Madras Times.)

Man—genus homo—has been variously defined as an animal that walks erect, a cooking animal, a laughing animal, and so on; but the species Hindu, cannot be better defined than as a jewel-wearing animal. A bit of gold should always be on the person, says a Hindu maxim; and the wisdom of the maxim seems to consist in providing for every Hindu who follows it a reserve, so to speak, on which he may fall at any emergency. The wearing of ornaments with the Hindus may have begun as a matter of policy, not only to beautify the person, but to carry all one's wealth on one's own person in a tangible form and small compass; but the practice has ended in giving a religious and even a mystic significance to most of the jewels worn. An infant has its jewels, the unmarried girl has hers, the married woman possesses her own peculiar ornaments, and even the widow is not denied gold ornaments. The ornaments designed are in most instances peculiar to a certain stage of life or condition, and cannot be exchanged for others. For instance, a widow may wear gold strings and chains round her neck, but she cannot appropriate to herself the nose ring which, huge and circular, adorns a matron on one side of her nose, and waves with sluggish majesty at her every footstep, resembling the fanning motion of an elephant's ears. Various and curious are the Hindu ornaments, and the ways in which and the occasions on which they are to be worn; and Mr. Maclagan has collected a number of exceedingly curious details concerning them in his monograph on the gold and silver works of the Punjab.

No pious Hindu may tread upon gold, for he will then be treading on god Kubera, the giver of gold. No pious Hindu may wear gold below the waist, for gold is a superior product. The boring of the ears for ornaments, as is well known, is a very necessary Hindu religious rite. Even when a person is dead he is not allowed to go away empty-handed, or rather empty-mouthed. A bit of gold is put in the mouth of the corpse, before it is laid out on the pyre. A sure means of salvation, both when living and dead, is to wear gold in the mouth. "A man with gold in his mouth cannot lie," says the Hindu proverb; and "many men, in consequence, prefer to do without it," observes Mr. Maclagan. Parents, who have lost several children, put a ring into the nose of a boy at his birth to protect him against evil influences and diseases, and grown-up men with rings in their noses are not an uncommon sight. Different kinds of ornaments serve to distinguish different grades or sections of Hindu society. In Jullunder, thirty-seven distinct kinds of gold ornaments and thirty-three kinds of silver are commonly known and worn, and each one has its specific meaning. With increased means of railway communication, new kinds of ornaments are coming into use; and such ornaments as Baroda ornaments, and Poona ornaments, are not now unknown in this part of the country. The lending of ornaments, whether by a goldsmith or the actual wearer, is not at all an uncommon thing. Among the women themselves it is a very common practice to borrow jewellery from one's neighbours for special occasions.

PRESIDENCY JOTTINGS.

BENGAL.

(March 18.)

Shooting-parties in Bengal have been fortunate of late. Mr. Bell-Irving and the Nawab Wala Qudr, of Moorshedabad, who were out for a few days in Malda, secured three tigers, a leopard, and a number of deer. Two of the tigers were shot on one day.

The Maharajah of Kuch-Behar's party had two splendid days on the 5th and 9th instant, bagging two tigers on the former date and four buffalces and two magnificent stags on the latter. The horns of the stags, unfortunately, were still in velvet. A fine cow Rhino was bagged on the 8th instant. The Hon. Mr. C. Moore and Colonel Gerrard joined the party a few days ago.

By a curious chance, the newly-appointed Kidderpore Dock Committee were the last to walk over the floor of the tidal basin In the course of their visit on the 10th inst. morning, Messrs. O'Callagahan, J. L. Mackay, G. E. Ormiston, and Horace Bell descended into the basin and examined the dry floor, and the same night the water got through the dam in front of the sixty-foot lock and filled the basin. Had the inspection been deferred for a day, the Committee would have seen nothing but a sheet of water. No damage has been done by the "letting in of waters." In another week the bund would have been cut, and the event has thus only been anticipated by a few days.

At last week's meeting of the Bengal Legislative Council, Mr. T. Allen, Remembrancer in Legal Affairs, in the course of the debate upon the Public Demands Recovery Act Amendment Bill, observed that it has been a not unusual practice for Judges, both here and in England, to carp and gird at the Legislature. "But," said Mr. Allen, "such petty and snapping criticism the Legislature treats with perfect indifference, and stolidly pursues its way, and we are forcibly reminded of the Yorkshireman who, on being pummelled by his wife, sat smiling placidly without shifting his pipe from his mouth, and said, 'It pleases her and don't hurt me.' One most remarkable feature I have observed, in this microscopic criticism to which the Acts are subjected is that it never by any chance is employed in furtherance of the objects of, or as a check to, the mischief against which the Act is levelled. Whenever it comes it operates to paralyse the activity of the law. It is a sort of legal pestilence which is as destructive to Acts as Koch's tuberculosis is to human lungs. We know, sir, from ancient times that those who strained at gnats were the same who swallowed camels, and in my thirty years of Bengal experience I have seen much straining at gnats, and I have seen many camels swallowed. It is not six months ago since my honourable friend, the learned Advocate-General, assisted in the swallowing of a very big camel. I do not mean to say that he aided and abetted—quite the contrary; but with what astonishment we in Calcutta heard that a man who had confessed to stealing twelve lakhs of rupees from a Bank had committed no offence, and the exigencies of law were assigned as ground for this curious result. I daresay the result has as little foundation in law as in common sense. If the law is defective, how is it no steps have been taken to remedy it? It very often happens that it is not the law that needs amending, but some of its administrators."

The Assistant Secretary of the Calcutta Sub-Committee to protest against the Consent Bill telegraphs to us:—"The grandest religious public service and poojah unparalleled in the annals of India was held to-day (16th inst.) in the celebrated shrine or Pitasthan at Kalighat, near Calcutta, against the Consent Bill, organized by the Shovabazaar Standing Committee. Several other local committees also joined. Over a lakh of Hindoos representing all classes, and influential Hindoos of other provinces, i.e. the North-West Pronvinces, the Punjab, Bombay, and Madras, who are in Calcutta, mustered strong. Ladies in most Hindoo homes bathed in the Ganges and fasted the whole day. The poojah and offering commenced in the morning and lasted till dusk. Upwards of 400 learned Brahmins of several Bengal districts, Deccan Brahmins, and several Benares Brahmins conducted the service by chanting Chavdy and Veda, and a lakh of names of Durga Kali Modhusudav, &c. One hundred and eight Shivabugum were worshipped, 10,000 Billa leaves were offered in the Homa ceremony. The present to the goddess Kali and the god Etikulaswar consisted of several maunds of rice, sugar, fruits, Benarasee sarees, valuable gold and silver ornaments and gold and silver coins. Seventy bands of Kirtan of Calcutta and several adjacent districts, consisting of graduates, pleaders, schoolmasters, bankers, and venerable men, with music playing and colours flying, went round and round the temple of Kali. The whole gathering covered a space of over two miles. Shouts of Haribole and Jonkali rent the air. The people were mad with enthusiasm. Several persons swooned away, and many prayed with tears. Hundreds of European gentlemen witnessed the poojah. Order prevailed throughout."

MADRAS.

The Madras Government's review of the administration of the Madras Municipality during 1889-90 will probably be read by few, says the local paper, for another official year is all but ended, and the majority of people will regard it a profitless expenditure of time to study such stale history. It seems likely that a good many of the unfavourable remarks made by Government will have to be repeated in the review of this year's administration.

The Rev. Dr. Miller's warning regarding the dangers ahead in connection with female education in India has made a great impression in Madras. The Hindu in a leading article says by raising timely protest against a possible serious danger, this veteran educationist has placed the cause of female education under an obligation. The educational system in vogue for boys has not produced a revolution in their character, nor produced any very striking moral results. On the other hand, the high pressure that cramming places on the intellectual and physical strength of youths has led to undesirable consequences. "We do not want Hindoo women to be made mere book-worms, literary pedants: we want them to become instruments whereby men's manners and morality may be refined and elevated. If any system of education cannot assuredly produce this result wise men should hesitate before recommending it."

MISCELLANEOUS.

IT is rather remarkable that, since 5th December last, the Government of India have taken no steps to notify the movements of the Leprosy Commissioners. In the notification issued on that date, it was stated that the detailed movements of the Commission, after leaving Calcutta about the 25th January, would be notified hereafter. For some unexplained reason this step has been omitted.

THE Civil and Military Gazette learns from Cabul that the nomination of Sirdar Mahomed Afzal Khan, District Judge of Dera Ismail Khan, to succeed Colonel Atullah Khan, as British Agent with the Ameer, has given satisfaction to the British Indian community in Cabul. It is hoped, however, that the Foreign Office will take this occasion to invest the British Agent with more effective authority for the protection of British subjects in Afghanistan, and the maintenance of his own independence and freedom of action. The British agency has hitherto been very far indeed from being what we have a right to demand that it should be.

FROM Nawagi—the only State of any importance between Chitral, Swat, and Afghanistan which Umra Khan has not annexed—comes the news that the Ameer has betrothed his youngest son to the daughter of the Khan of Nawagi, Safder Khan. As a present to the youthful bride, the Ameer is said to have sent jewellery and clothes worth Rs. 10,000, and to her father a costly khillat, consisting of a horse, a shawl, and a chogha. This is supposed to be a politic move on the part of the Ameer to get a footing in the disputed territory now threatened by Umra Khan. In response to the Khan of Nawagi's request that the Ameer should actively assist him to conquer the whole of Bajaur from Umra Khan, the Ameer is reported to have replied that he would be only too glad to help the Khan in any way, but that he cannot take part in the conquest of Bajaur, as it is written in the treaty between himself and the Government of India that Bajaur and Swat are to remain independent, and that neither Power is to take those regions by force. He, therefore, cannot move in the matter; but if the Khan of Nawagi is determined to fight Umra Khan, he will assist him with money, arms, and stores, on condition that if Bajaur is conquered it shall be divided equally between the Khan of Nawagi and the ex-Khan of Dir.

A PERSISTENT effort is now being made by the Geological Department of the Government of India, in association with the Burma Government, to explore, and, if possible, to exploit the tin resources of Tenasserim. The flourishing condition of the almost adjacent Malay States of Perak and Salangor, which are under British protection, is mainly due to the satisfactory income derived from tin royalties. A year ago an expert was borrowed from the Straits Settlements and placed in Tenasserim under Mr. Hughes of the Geological Department. The party has this year been joined by Dr. Warth, the officer who did very good work for Government in the Punjab salt mines, and Dr. King, the Director of the Department, has left Calcutta this week for an inspection of the survey operations which have been conducted during the last twelve months. It is now two years since the Chief Commissioner of Burma sent a special officer to report on the tin mines of the Straits Settlements, and the present explorations are being conducted in pursuance of the recommendations then made. The tin industry is one which will not perhaps give sensational results such as the investors in gold shares dream of realising, but they may be a little more sure.

THE new Census of India reveals the fact that the population of the Empire is 285,000,000, or thirty millions more than in 1881. Of this increase, 3,000,000 is due to conquest, Upper Burmah coming for the first time into the calculation, and probably aa many more to the gradual dying away of the objection felt in many districts to any enumeration of women in the census-papers. The figure given, however, is prodigious, showing as it does that at least a fifth of the human race resides within the peninsula, and that it increases by 12 per. cent. in every decade; that is, will, if the rate continues, be within fifty years 500,000,000. The rate will probably decline, though statists know little of the law which regulates increase of population; but it seems certain that we shall soon be face to face with the Chinese problem of a population too thick for the means of easy subsistence. In China the corrective is the occurrence of gigantic famines; but in India we shall try to prevent them; and though Indians are not lazy, they have not been drilled by Nature for centuries into abnormal industry. The Chinese have; and though they strike for wages, never protest against hours.

DESULTORY fighting has long been going on in the Swat between the petty Khans of Palai and Sher Khanai, in which some eighteen men are said to have been killed. Fighting also goes on between the Kuki Khel Maliks, Yar Muhammad Khan and Feroze Khan on one side, and Amir Khan and Akber Khan on the other, in which the casualties are about one or two per diem.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 8, 1891.

WISE AFTER THE EVENT.

THE Mannipur "disaster" has, of course, furnished the gentlemen of the press in and out of Fleet Street with a subject for editorial comment which may be spun out or diversified to any extent. Parliament was not sitting when the news was telegraphed from India; it is too early for the gigantic gooseberry, and too cold for the sea-serpent or shower of frogs; and so, in the absence of these phenomena, a tale of defeat of British troops in India formed most handy and acceptable "copy." Several of the scribes who have commented thereon seem to take a great delight in dwelling upon the details of the reported "disaster," because it is one which has happened to British arms and representatives. This feeling amongst English writers is not easy to understand, unless it be that it is founded on the aphorism attributed generally to Rochefoucauld, that in the misfortunes of our friends we can always find something which is pleasing to ourselves. Only upon this possible ground can we understand the apparent rejoicing of some of our Radical contemporaries at the Government of India being now confronted with events involving matters of serious difficulty, not to say of danger. Such comments cannot, of course, hamper the action of that Government, which action will doubtless be swift, sharp, and decisive, but they are a little irritating to readers who know something of India as well as of English press critics. One of these laughs at the Parisian journalist who has discovered that the cause of the attack on Mr. Quinton's force at Mannipur was the passing of the Age of Consent Bill by the Government of India at Calcutta; but his own knowledge of the matter, as displayed in a long column of type, is not much more profound. Not that knowledge of Mannipur, or of India even, is always to be expected in the comments of the home press on Indian matters; but why cannot our brother scribblers, when they know nothing, say nothing, beyond publishing the news that the telegraph or post brings? Why not leave the action of the Government of India and those of the Indian officials, civil and military, "severely" alone? Instead of doing so, however, these censors are eloquent about what they do not understand. Commenting upon the Mannipur affair, one of them writes:—"Whilst waiting for fuller and more trustworthy particulars to apportion the responsibility of the disaster, we cannot too soon protest against the policy that made this disaster possible. Where was the need for English interference in the internal affairs of Manipur? If the Manipuris preferred the kinsman of the deposed Maharajah to their old ruler, it was a matter for them, not for the Government at Calcutta. It is no answer to say that the ex-Maharajah was a staunch friend of the British, and did good service in the Naga war of 1879. The present ruler of Afghanistan is supposed to be loyal to the British connection; but if he were deposed to-morrow the Government of India would not interfere to re-instate him—at least, if they remained true to the policy enunciated by Lord Lytton, accepted by Lord Ripon, and repeatedly endorsed by Lord Dufferin. And yet there would be infinitely more excuse—plausible excuse—for interference in Afghanistan than for meddling in Manipur." This is dogmatically put, and with all that self-sufficiency which adorns so many gentlemen of the press when writing about matters which they do not understand. We quite agree with the remark that if the Ruler of Afghanistan were to be deposed to-morrow, the Government of India would not interfere to re-instate him. We have had quite enough experience of what interfering in Afghanistan affairs means; but Mannipur is not Afghanistan, and in Mannipur matters we must interfere if we desire to have our neighbouring territory kept in peace and order. The Spectator, a journal which gives generally sound and practical views on Indian questions, puts this necessity clearly enough forward: "The work is quite imperative, and its result will be most beneficial to numberless clans both in India and Burma. It seems waste to expend invaluable officers and our best trained native soldiers in subduing, amidst pathless forests, hill men who hardly know what they are fighting for, and from whom we want nothing except that they shall leave our railroads and telegraphs and a few engineers alone. There is, however, in the circumstances of India, no option. The Empire over a sweep of more than three thousand miles is ringed in with fierce hill tribes, accustomed for ages to 'raid' upon the plains—that is, to destroy villages by fire and sword, to kill men, and carry off children; and when they insist on observing these customs, they must, for the preservation of our own subjects, be shot down. It is high police duty, and the necessary expenditure of life, energy, and treasure, must just be borne as policemen bear their risk from burglars."

This is well and sensibly put, and shows a knowledge and experience of facts sadly lacking in the more Radical journalist, who deprecates interference in the affairs of Mannipur, and who dreads "annexation," and hopes that the Opposition will strenuously oppose such a policy—"a policy fostered and encouraged by instructions such as those upon which Mr. Quinton must have acted."

This is not only "begging the question," but misrepresenting it. The Government of India has shown too much forbearance, and for too long a time, to turbulent frontier neighbours, and the sooner it makes its strong hand felt the better it will be for the tribes themselves, and for the security of and peace of all.

THE ORIENTAL CONGRESS.

(To the Editor of ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.)

SIR,—I have only just received the original German of Professor Weber's letter to the Allgemeine Zeitung, of which you publish a translation of three columns in your issue of the 17th ult

Incorrect and malevolent as the letter is, your translation has emphasised both characteristics. For instance, Weber blames Landberg for bringing so "many true Orientals, especially from the countries of Islam." Your translator converts them into "true Orientalists, especially from the land of Islam," which is precisely what Weber does not mean. Weber says that I have "reached an important position in London"; your translator renders this into "a certain recognised status." Weber alleges that "the organizing secretary, himself far from Oriental science, is substantially on a practical ground in relation to it"; your translator makes it "is only on a business footing in relation to it," and so forth.

I might as well deny that Professor Weber was an Orientalist, except in a narrow sense of the term. I am not aware that he speaks a single Oriental language, or has written a book in one. He has been mauled by Indian Pandits, and he and his school dread the presence of "true Orientals" at the congresses of Orientalists, and of all independent inquirers who will not acknowledge either the supremacy of Sanscrit in philology, or him as the greatest authority in it. Like a famous Egyptologist, he would, I dare say, decline to visit the country of his learning, so as not to upset his convictions. I have already done a little, and I will do more, to expose the pretensions of men who know far less of the living East, and through it of its past, than many an Indian administrator that I could name. When Weber can speak a dozen Oriental languages, and write works in six, he will be in a better position to criticise one who in the East and with the East has promoted Oriental learning. His misconception of my speciality, of the Hunga and other Dard languages, of my Oriental work in India and here, is as great as his reference to myself as a German or an Europeaniser of Hindoos is incorrect. I will now proceed to show, as I have done before, that under a rude exterior he hides a diplomatic conscience.

On Sept. 19, 1889, he praised Landberg, whom he now condemns, in the National Zeitung, and approvingly indicated the encroachments then in progress to set aside our original statutes, to establish a permanent oligarchy of Orientalists, to minimise the attendance of Orientals, and to entrust Max Müller with framing conditions as to the admission of members to future congresses.

Our declaration of Oct. 10, now signed by 400 Orientalists in thirty countries, was directed against these and other usurpations on our republic of Oriental letters and against the shortcomings of the Scandinavian Congress, not merely, as he alleges, against the possible choice of Cairo or Constantinople as the next meeting of the Congress. We first forced Weber and thirty of his Orientalists, who included several booksellers and students, to admit the validity of the Paris statutes; we then compelled the Christiania Committee to surrender to Sir Henry Rawlinson, as honorary president for a congress to be held on the basis of the statutes in London in 1891; we broke up the counter-movement by Müller and Landberg for a congress at Oxford in 1892; we have, at all events nominally, induced the seceders from our midst to profess allegiance to the Paris statutes, and to pretend that they have received their powers from the Paris founders. The intended caricature of the French "Institut" in an institute of forty practically self-elected Oriental "immortals" is, at any rate for the present, abandoned; the name of Landberg is no longer openly mentioned in connection with the Christiania Committee, nor as the permanent secretary of all future international congresses, who are to have the King of Sweden as their permanent president; even London has been chosen as the place of their "Ninth Congress." To all appearances we have won all along the line, and now Weber, in his wrath at the complete discomfiture of the Christiania game, turns round on him who has mainly brought this result about, and says that he is not a real Orientalist, except from a practical point of view.

If Weber were to know how much of real public spirit there exists in this country, he would not be astonished at people taking a certain course for what they believe to be the public good, irrespective of favour, prejudice, or emolument. He would learn what little store many Englishmen of merit set on decorations, the non-bestowal of which on my humble self is alleged, together with some supposed slights, to have induced me for more than a year and a half to spend time, money, and influence in furtherance of a cause. Let me tell him that I have no grudge against Landberg; that I was treated with special kindness by the King of Sweden; and that I refused the recommendation to a Swedish decoration because of the circumstances of the Swedish Congress, although I had rendered services to a Swedish ethnographical mission. To Professor Weber, banquets and decorations may be welcome; in an assembly of English Orientalists held on January 15, 1890, and then already representing 157 signatories of the Declaration of Paris in twenty odd countries, we decided "that no special privileges, or distinctions of any kind, be accepted by any member, delegate, or office-holder (as such) of the Congress, except what the Congress itself may confer for services rendered to science, &c."

What is the use of contradicting Weber's other misstatements? I could not be turned out by seceders on Oct. 9, for we had already turned them out six weeks before. I did not rouse the feelings of "English gentlemen" for my "discourtesy" to Professors Dillmann and Kuenen, for I partly drafted the "cordial," but informal, letter of the two presidents, Sir Henry Rawlinson and Sir M. E. Grant Duff; and my formal, and colder, reply to theirs was similarly approved in writing by the presidents and the body of the signatories, then already 300 in number. Max Müller had simply "reculé pour mieux sauter." The Congress of 1892 is still the Max Müller-Landberg Congress, as stated in the Scandinavian papers, with the addition of a few more lies. Nothing is really conceded except that London is to be their next place of meeting.

As for the committee of 1892 representing "real" as against "spurious" Orientalists, "dilettanti, travellers, fellow-officials of Leitner, &c.," I have yet to learn that there is a single Orientalist among their vice-presidents. They certainly have fewer "real" Orientalists to choose from than we, who can select among 400 professional Orientalists or practical promoters of Oriental studies in thirty countries. Anyhow, the Swedish Congress, of which Weber makes so much, was largely composed of tourists, commercial travellers, local tradesmen, &c.

"The snake is scotched, not killed." The monopolists in Oriental learning, with Max Müller, are making a last and desperate stand, which must fail against the combined sense of "practical Orientalists" and of the statesmen and Governments who promote Oriental studies because of their importance to our culture and of their utility to our civilisation. With personal questions or intermural quarrels neither Governments nor the public have anything to do.

Compare the Programmes of the 1891 and 1892 Congresses, and choose for yourselves.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

G. W. LEITNER, Organizing Secretary for the Statutory Ninth International Congress of Orientalists of 1891, and Delegate-General from the Founders and the French National Committee to the English and other Committees.

Woking, March 24, 1891.

[We give insertion to the above letter from Dr. Leitner, but we cannot encroach more upon our own limited space, or upon the patience of our readers, by giving insertion to further correspondence on this matter.—ED. A.I.M.]

THE PROJECTED RAILWAY IN SIAM.

THE telegram announcing that the King of Siam has given a concession to an English merchant at Singapore to construct a railway from Singora to Saiburu and thence to the Kulen tin district in the southern portion of the province of Kedah, or Queddah, is interesting as furnishing some practical evidence that the much-talked-of development of Siam by means of railways may shortly be begun. It is also interesting because the particular scheme referred to attracts attention again to a region which was the scene of English enterprise in the very infancy of its Asiatic career nearly three centuries ago. In 1612 we concluded a treaty with the Queen of Patani and Singora, who was the tributary of Siam, and our merchants declared Singora to possess the advantage of a "good harbour." John Davis, the navigator, spoke of it in 1614 as "a very good place under two islands fast by the maine." In those days Patani was the more important town and the residence of the governing power. But now the position is reversed, and the Siamese Viceroy resides at Singora. Singora, or Songkla, is situated halfway between Ligor on the north and Patani on the south, opposite the island of Tantalam. It is the chief Siamese government on the eastern coast of the Malay peninsula, and one of the three established routes across that peninsula runs from that place to Kedah. The Siamese themselves seem to have come to the same conclusion about the advantages of Singora as was found by the early English traders who, despite the superior size and fame of Patani, declared that it would become "a second Jacatra or Batavia," then the most prosperous European town in Asia. The Dutch were also alive to its advantages, and, claiming a monopoly of trade with these places, opposed us by open force and secret intrigue. The naval engagement in Patani harbour in 1619 secured their object, if it was not creditable to Dutch honour. An attempt was made nearly sixty years later to revive our intercourse with this part of the world, but although temporarily successful it was involved in the general rupture of our relations with Siam which followed the French Embassies and the murder of the Levantine adventurer and Prime Minister, Constantine Phaulkon. The great incentive to these renewed efforts to trade with Siamese Malaya was its reputed wealth in tin. The reports sent to the East India Company in England were to the effect that "tin was to be found in vast quantity and of finer quality than the tin of England." The "tarra" or licence given by the Barkalong of Siam in 1675 specially allowed the export of tin from the country, and of late years there has been a sufficient quantity produced near Kedah to justify the early expectations to which allusion has been made.—Times.

THE HAZARA FIELD FORCE.

(From Bombay Gazette Correspondents.)

DARBAND, MARCH 9.

The last of the regiments composing the force has now arrived in camp. The 23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers, the Guides, and Khyber Rifles marched in this morning. The arrangement of the camp reflects the greatest credit on whoever laid it out, as it must have been hard work to fit such a large force into such a small space, for the ground fit for camping on is very limited, as, in addition to accommodation for the troops, room has also to be provided for the large quantity of transport necessary for our expedition, commissariat stores, field hospitals, and the hundred-and-one et ceteras required by an army in the field. Our Bombay friend, the ubiquitous Parsee, has established himself here, and though one has to pay a famine price for anything purchased yet it is a comfort to know that any article required for a campaign is obtainable at short notice. We are encamped about two miles to the north-east of the village of Darband, on fields between the rivers Unhar and Indus, the former of which has to be crossed just before arriving in camp. On our west lies the Indus, and almost from the water's edge steep hills rise in the territory of the Mada Khel. To the north and north-east lies the Black Mountain, the scene of our operations. The name of Black has been bestowed on it on account of its dark appearance, it being thickly wooded in many parts. Its top is at present covered with snow, which is likely to delay the operations of the hill column. The 4th Sikhs have been here for over a month, and have done much good work in cleaning the camping ground and in constructing roads to the front.

Two roads have been made as far as the first bivouacking grounds of the 1888 column: for the river column, as far as Bela, which is about seven miles distant, and for the Tilli or right column, as far as Chamb. A wing of the 32nd Pioneers is at present working on each of these roads, which will be carried on as the columns advance to facilitate communications. It is said that the enemy has been viewed at Shingri, a village on the Indus, about one mile from Bela. No shots have been fired, although numerous "shaves" were ripe on the Haripur Road that some of our men had been killed and wounded. A certain amount of communication was established, but it was confined, I believe, to that courteous interchange of civilities regarding their female relatives peculiar to people of the East. Whether they intend fighting or not, no one seems to know. The women, children, and cattle of Hassanzais are said to have been sent across the river to Baio, a strongly fortified village, situated at a height of 5,340 feet, while the country of the Trans-Indus Hassanzais marches with that of the Buners. The jirgah of the Buners (the accent is on the last syllable, and not on the first as usually pronounced in the Bombay Presidency) is said to be at Shingri, with an intimation that if Hashmi Ali is allowed to go scot-free they will remain neutral; but if we do not promise him immunity, they will throw in their lot with the Hassanzais. Hashmi Ali himself is said to be at Seri.

The Hindustani fanatics, who during the expedition of 1888 fought us at Kotkai, are reported to be in the Chagarzai country across the river between Kamach and Kabalgram. Whether they will again venture on the same method of self-immolation or not no one can tell; probably not, as their headman, Moulvi Abdula, is said to have been washed away, with a large portion of his village, during the floods of last year. The bridge of boats, which has been brought up from near Attock, under charge of Major Burton, R.E., is now at Durband, and it is rumoured that the Bunerwals have engaged the Mada Khels to prevent its further progress up the river. Much difficulty was experienced in bringing the bridge up so far, on account of the numerous shallows and false channels. Three boats were lost in the passage up.

The field telegraph is being pushed on ahead, and the line for the right column has reached Phuldar, six miles from here. With full working days the telegraph party expect to be able to lay it at the rate of six miles per day. General Elles arrived here yesterday, having ridden round by Abbottabad and Ughi. To-day he has gone out to see how the roads to the front have progressed. The valley of the Indus is already beginning to warm up, though the nights are still cold. To-day it is cloudy and looks as if we were going to have more rain. The hill column will have the advantage in climate, though it may not have the good luck to have the fighting. The health of the troops in camp is good, but the Guides had to leave a Gurkha company at the last camp on account of mumps.

A sad occurrence happened when the 2nd Battalion 5th Gurkhas marched in. A subhedar of the regiment had just reported his company "all correct," when he suddenly dropped down dead. A post mortem disclosed that death had been caused by an abscess of the liver bursting into a vein. He had complained of pain on the march, but for example's sake refused to go to hospital, and, poor fellow, did his duty faithfully to the end. He was buried close to camp near the river, but from all accounts the Gurkha does not consider burial a very solemn ceremony. I have noticed several of the village graveyards near here which are much more tidily kept than down country. At each end of the grave is a slab of stone, on which are carved, and in many cases very well, guns, shields, swords, hukkas, &c. The Seaforths had one rifle stolen on the march at Haripur, and the signallers of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers, who came here in advance of the regiment, lost seven in one night. They are as likely as not now in the hands of the enemy.

THE CHIN COUNTRY.

A Haka telegram of Tuesday says:—On the 3rd instant a small expedition of two mountain guns and 200 rifles, under the command of Colonel Mainwaring, 39th Garhwalis, left here to visit the village of Hranrchn, twelve miles distant. Captain Karnegy, 2-4th Gurkhas, remained behind to command the post, with Lieutenant Mocatto, 39th Garhwalis. Hranrchn, a village of considerable size, had failed to send in its submission, although so closely situated to our posts, but they have never molested us. They had one female Burman captive in their possession. Mr. Ross and Mr. MacNabb both accompanied the column in their political capacities. The first day the column marched to the village of Pai, ten miles, and great difficulties were encountered by the mules of the battery from the badness of the road. Very precipitous places had to be travelled on ground which from its looseness did not permit of having a path cut through it. No grain has been obtainable in Haka of late, and the mules refuse to eat the commissariat Indian corn, so that they are in a much enfeebled condition.

Lieutenant Harrison's 25 Burma Sappers and Miners, says a Haka telegram of March 10th, had hard work to improve the road in many places. Late in the evening three men from the unsubmissive village came into camp, but apparently without powers to submit for the whole of their people. The next day they were made to accompany the column. The two guns of No. 2 Mountain Battery were established by Lieutenant O'Leary on a level space on a spur facing the village, of 1,800 yards. From this point all the men of the village could be seen coming down towards us, wearing arms. They halted about half-way down. Mr. Ross considered it was best that we should go and meet them, so 110 rifles under Lieutenant Ducat, 2-4th Gurkhas, were ordered to accompany him. The guns and the remaining rifles, with the three Chins as hostages, stayed at the top of the ridge. When the foot of the hill was reached Mr. Ross and Mr. MacNabb advanced to meet the Chiefs and a durbar was held. A stream separated the two forces. On one side Lieutenant Ducat had half his men extended up the hill-side, and on the other the Chins were extended in two lines, one above the other. Their attitude during this conference was menacing, and they evinced not only hostility but also contempt. They were all armed with guns, spears, knives, and bows and arrows, and were evidently very distrustful of our intentions. Had they refused the Political Officer's terms, namely, to produce their slaves and give up a cow, their loss from our rifles, all prepared to fire, and from the guns as the enemy retreated over the reverse slope of their hill, would have been enormous. They evidently had no conception of the range and power of our guns and rifles, and a sharp lesson on the spot would have made them less contemptuous and swaggering in the future.

In the evening about 50 Chins, still armed, came into camp, when the cow was shot and the usual ceremony of making peace was carried out. On no previous occasion, after submitting, have the Chins appeared before us carrying arms. The next day a small column of 100 rifles under Lieutenant Evatt, 39th Garhwalis, visited the village of Farone to allow Mr. Ross the opportunity of conversing with the Chiefs. The rest of the column returned to Haka.

On the 5th a column consisting of two mountain-guns and 300 rifles, under the command of Colonel Mainwaring, left for the Tashon country, and a column under Captain Rundall from Fort White will advance to meet it.

Lieutenant Harrison, R.E., moves down to Rawvan with his company of Burma Sappers to construct a permanent post there. Mr. Puck, Assistant Political Officer, came in from the 4th Pioneer camp yesterday, and reports good progress. About 26 miles of the road towards Fort White have been completed. A new trace is in course of construction between Haka and Fort White, under the superintendence of Lieutenant Ainslie, R.E., and from every reliable source seems to be superior to that formerly made.

Surgeon Hoey, I.M.S., has arrived here with a complete field hospital. I regret to state he is at present suffering from fever.

MUNICIPAL PROGRESS IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

The symptoms of municipal progress in India have frequently to be read so to speak, upside down. In other countries we usually find the record of work done by a municipality vary directly with the vigour of municipal life; but it is not so here. In the North-West Provinces and Oudh, for instance, last year the average number of citizens who were sufficiently interested to vote in the seventy-six municipalities in which elections took place, was over 13 per cent. less than in the year preceding. Yet in the words of the official annalist, "the long-felt want of an adequate supply of pure drinking-water was in course of being met in at least (why at least?) four of the most important towns in the united provinces; the conservancy system, where found to be obsolete or otherwise unsuited to existing requirements, was being improved and brought into accord with the teachings of modern sanitary science; taxation was increased in various municipalities, without unduly burdening the people; and steps were taken to ensure the utilization of the revenues to the best advantage for the common good." This last, as Dr. Hutton has observed of Milton's poems, is scarcely more valuable for what it says than for what it suggests. The moral, as we have hinted, would seem to be the preposterous one, that as the municipality accumulates the elector decays. Or, in regard to the greatest work undertaken by the municipalities during the past year, is the illuminating side-light to be found in the paragraph which declares that, "to the untiring zeal and great ability of Mr. Hughes, Supervising Engineer, in the discharge of his onerous duties is to be attributed in a great measure the very satisfactory progress that has been made in carrying out the wishes of the Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Commissioner in regard to bringing to a safe and speedy completion the several waterworks in course of construction"? Yet Mr. Hughes is but the Government, and the Government is not self-government. Well, it is better to be prodded into virtue than to be irreclaimable: so there is still some hope for municipal life in these parts.

THE COST OF UPPER BURMA.

(Rangoon Gazette.)

Two or three years ago we used to hear a good deal of groaning, from Bengal more especially, on the subject of the heavy burden which the annexation of Upper Burma was throwing on the Indian taxpayer. Latterly this lamentation has ceased, partly because the dismal prophecies that Upper Burma would never be remunerative are being proved false, and partly, perhaps, because the energies of the malcontents in Bengal are now absorbed in defending their rights in the matter of their unfortunate child-wives. While the jeremiads about Upper Burma were in full swing, however, it was amusing to observe how completely it was forgotten that every annexation in every part of India had involved a heavy expenditure. The former ones had taken place before there was any public opinion in India at all, and in the case of Upper Burma the croakers seemed to regard the initial cost as quite a new feature in the annexation business, simply because, owing to the greater publicity given to Indian finance now-a-days, the expenditure was more prominently brought before the public. They wrote as if they thought that the great Indian Empire had been gained without any initial outlay at all. Possibly we may have some similar groaning now over the Wuntho expedition, that is, if the Bengali malcontents can forget the Age of Consent Bill for a time and turn their attention to Burmese affairs again.

It is a pity that we cannot give the exact cost of the annexation of each province which has been added to the Indian Empire, that is, the cost of the war by which it was won, and the total amount of the annual deficits until it paid its own way. If this could be done, we feel sure that Burma would be shown to be one of the provinces which cost least to gain, and one of the very earliest to prove remunerative. Though we cannot give this information, we have found a table of statistics showing the revenue and charges of British India from the year 1792–93 down to quite recent years; and from this we learn that in the year 1823–24 that is before the British Government annexed any part of Burma at all, the total debt of India was over twenty-four million pounds sterling. In those days there were no railways and but little expenditure on public works, so this debt of twenty-four millions must represent the cost of wars leading to annexation and of deficits until the annexed provinces paid their way. By 1851–52, the year before the second Burmese war, the debt of India had grown to forty-nine millions sterling; and seeing how very little had been done in the interval for Arracan and Tenasserim, very little of this increased debt can be due to Burma. By 1883–84, the last year for which the same method of classification is retained, and which happens to be just before the third Burmese war, the debt of India had risen to nearly one hundred and sixty-three millions sterling. Seeing that Burma had then been paying a handsome surplus for years into the Indian Treasury, and that she had been starved in the matter of railways and other public works, it cannot be pretended that any considerable share of this debt was incurred on account of Burma.

The expenditure on Upper Burma during the past five years has been necessarily very heavy, more so than was anticipated before it was clearly realised how completely the reins of government had dropped from the weak grasp of King Theebaw, and how completely the country had lapsed into anarchy. It cannot be too often urged that the real cost of the annexation of Upper Burma lay not in overthrowing the nominal Government of the country, but in putting down the anarchy and chaos which had resulted from the weakness of that Government. Had Theebaw been a stronger ruler, keeping his country well in hand, he would not have toppled over at a touch. There would have been a longer and more costly war than there was; but there would have been a far less prolonged and less costly subsequent struggle with anarchy. In spite of this, however, the last Administration Report shows that Burma, as a whole, is again contributing a handsome surplus to the Imperial Treasury. The Imperial receipts from Lower Burma were, in round numbers, £1,903,000, while the Imperial expenditure was £273,000 only, leaving a surplus of £1,630,000. Upper Burma showed a deficit under Imperial receipts and expenditure of about £900,000, and thus the net contribution to the Imperial Treasury from Upper and Lower Burma together is about seven hundred thousand pounds conventional sterling. Had the other provinces of the Empire all done as well as this, the debt of India would never have grown to the enormous dimensions it did, even before public works expenditure came to swell it. The expenditure now being incurred in Upper Burma is not really at the cost of India at all; and even if it were, it would only be an expenditure similar to that which every province has involved in its turn; while it is one which is almost certain to prove remunerative in a very short time, which is more than some of the work of annexation in India has done.

THE INDIAN CENSUS.

(Daily Graphic.)

The total population of India, as ascertained by the census taken in that country last month, is given at about 285 millions, and the result of the counting of the Indian peoples is published on the eve of our taking stock of the inhabitants of these islands. But whereas we have just concluded the preliminaries of our tenth census, that which has just been held in India is only the second of a synchronous and systematic nature held in that country.

The Mahomedan rulers used to number the people for purposes of taxation from time to time by what was called Khana Shumari, but these primitive censuses were very imperfect, and related to only small portions of the Peninsula. When we were able, by the cessation of war, to attend to our administrative duties for the benefit of the people, we found that a great deal of prejudice existed in the popular mind on the subject of a census. The mere enumeration of the people sufficed to arouse an unreasoning but widespread apprehension that we either intended to increase the taxes, or that we had more sinister designs on the customs and the religions of India. Our first attempts to number the population in face of these popular prejudices and fears were of a limited and tentative character. In 1853, and again in 1865, we took a census of the North-West Provinces, and in 1855, and again in 1868, of the Punjab. In 1869 Oude was subjected to the same experiment, and the necessity of fixing the capitation rate gave us tolerably accurate details as to the population of Lower Burma. Encouraged by the success of these measures a fairly comprehensive census was at last taken in 1872. It cost about £82,000, and estimated the population at 241 millions, or rather less. British India contained 186,000,000, the Native States 55,000,000, and although it would be incorrect to say that the natives were not very much exercised in their minds on the subject, it passed off without any serious mishap. In 1881 the preparations were completed for what is officially called the first census held on the same day—February 17th—throughout India. This census cost about £200,000, and the population of British India was returned at 198,790,853, and of the native States at 55,191,742, or a total for the whole of India of 253,982,595; but as Cashmere was not included among the Native States, the total must be raised to about 255½ millions. The second synchronous census, taken the other day, gives a grand total of 285 millions, showing the great increase of about 30 millions. This increase far exceeds anything that was expected. In 1888 the official estimate of the population of India was less than 270 millions, and it is near the truth to say that the growth of population has doubled what was expected.

Moreover, it must be remembered that the tendency in India is to send in short instead of expanded returns, and this would be especially the case in the Native States. We may therefore assume that, although the valley of the Ganges will probably exhibit a proportionally greater increase than any other part, there has been an increase in the number of people in every important province of India during the last decade, and that Madras and Bombay will not exhibit the decline in the former case and the insignificant increase in the latter, is shown by the returns of 1872 and 1881. In 1881 there were said to be six million fewer women than men, and it is possible that a more candid and complete enumeration of the female population may partly explain the large growth of the Indian nation. A little curiosity is permissible as to what the relative numbers of the sexes will be when the details of the census are published. The system of taking the census in India leaves considerable opening for the suppression of important facts, or of numbers, especially with regard to the well-to-do classes, for the papers are filled up by the enumerators themselves some days before the actual date of the census, and only checked on that day as a final test of accuracy. As much of the old feeling of dislike and alarm to the census has worn off in the last ten years, we may fairly assume that some portion of the remarkable growth in the population of India must be set down to more accurate returns. If this is true of British India, it applies with additional force to the Native States.

While there cannot but be a feeling of satisfaction at the increased population of our great dependency as furnishing irrefragable evidence of the benefits we have conferred on India by the maintenance of peace and by the introduction of improved sanitary measures, we cannot close our eyes to the fact that it also constitutes a danger not merely to us, but to India herself. The stagnation of the revenue, the comparatively small progress of trade, show that there has been no corresponding development in the wealth of the country, and we have, therefore, some tangible evidence of the poverty of India. The too rapid growth of the population might bring serious evils in its train, which could only be avoided by an immense addition to the cultivated land, and by a considerable migration of the people from densely populated quarters to those where there is a dearth of inhabitants. Unfortunately the seventy millions of Bengal, and the nearly as many more millions of Oude and the North-West, are either so timid or so attached to their soil that they will not move, and it is from these districts that emigration is desirable and may become absolutely necessary. Regarded from the point of view of the limited resources of the country, the old wars and pestilences from which we have rescued India were not an unqualified evil, and if we are to meet our increased responsibilities towards its people, we shall have to adopt more energetic measures than ever to improve communication by railway, and to develop the resources of the many backward districts of the Peninsula.

DR. JAMES SANDERSON, F.R.S.E., &c., Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals, Madras Army, retired, died on the 28th ult., at the age of 79.

SIR MADHAVA RAO.—The Times Calcutta Correspondent telegraphs that news has been received from Madras announcing the death of Sir Madhava Rao on Saturday morning. Sir Madhava, who was K.C.S.I., was the last surviving representative of the school of great Prime Ministers of native States whose names are identified with the transition period of the feudatory Courts from the India of the Company to the India of the Queen. The three characteristics of his school were a firm conviction that the interests of the native States are bound up in the stability of the British Government, a belief in the necessity of popular reforms, but a fixed determination that such reforms shall be made gradually and upon Indian lines rather than suddenly imported from without. He early recognized the value of the movement represented by the Indian National Congress. But when the Congress, under strong British influences, temporarily departed from its moderate proposals, and presented a paper constitution for all India to its surprised adherents, Sir Madhava Rao at once protested. Sir Madhava Rao was for long identified with the movement for bettering the condition of women in India. He was one of the most powerful advocates for reforming the system of child-marriage and enforced widowhood, and for ameliorating the physical and moral evils to which that system gives rise. But he maintained that any reform, to be effective, must be made from within, and upon Hindoo lines, not forced upon his countrymen from outside. When, therefore, a drastic scheme of domestic legislation was put forward by the more advanced reformers, whether English or Parsee, he firmly took his stand against it. In his opposition to what he believed to be an interference, alike unjustifiable and inefficacious, with the family life of the Hindoos, he went so far as to give the weight of his authority against the moderate proposal of the Indian Government to raise the age of "consent" to 12 years, for the protection of child-brides. In October, November and December he organized a number of meetings in the Madras Presidency with a view to preventing any legislative interference, and all through the controversy took up an attitude of determined opposition to what he regarded as "a preposterous measure."

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain. His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other Service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week, written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

" Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain.

Jeopardy of Life, the Great Danger of Delay.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

HEADACHE AND DISORDERED STOMACH.—"After suffering nearly two and a half years from severe Headache and Disordered Stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your 'FRUIT SALT,' and before I had finished one bottle I found it doing me a great deal of good, and now I am restored to my usual health; and others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, ROBERT HUMPHREYS, Post Office, Barrasford."

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHER SALINES.—"Dear Sir,—Having been in the habit of taking your 'FRUIT SALT' for many years, I think it only right to tell you I consider it a most invaluable medicine, and far superior to all other saline mixtures I have ever tried. I am never without it, as I find it possesses three most desirable qualities—pleasant to the taste, promptly efficacious, and leaves no unpleasant after-effects. I do not wish my name to appear, but you are welcome to make use of this testimonial if it is of service.—A DEVONSHIRE LADY. Jan. 25, 1889.

The Secret of Success.—Sterling Honesty of Purpose. Without it Life is a Sham!—A new invention is brought before the public, and commands success. A score of abominable imitations are immediately introduced by the unscrupulous, who, in copying the original closely enough to deceive the public, and yet not so exactly as to infringe upon legal rights, exercise an ingenuity that, employed in an original channel, could not fail to secure reputation and profit."—ADAMS.

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of Weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storms of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, APRIL 14, 1891.

General Intelligence.

[By Overland Mail.]

The Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 28th March; from N.W.P. and Madras to the 26th March; and from Bengal to the 25th March.

The Viceroy distributed the prizes to the Calcutta Volunteers on March 21, and expressed the hope that every European who did not belong to the regular army, and who was capable of bearing arms, would feel it his duty to shoulder the rifle and take part in the defence of the Indian Empire.

H.E. left Calcutta for Allahabad on March 23, and arrived in Allahabad next afternoon.

Her Excellency Lady Lansdowne, accompanied by the Hon. Mrs. Hope, Lord Frederick Hamilton, and Captain Brasier Creagh, A.D.C., arrived at Simla, March 17.

A Bill to amend the law for the Periodical Inspections and the Management by competent Engineers of Boilers in the Presidency was read a second time at the meeting of the Bombay Legislative Council.

It is estimated that the Zhob Valley Railway, including the section from the Indus Valley system through the Gomal Pass, would cost an average of two lakhs per mile. The bridge over the Indus is one mile in length, with several miles of rivetted embankments leading to it on either side. It would probably cost a crore of rupees.

The Pioneer learns that the Government of India have sent home an astounding report of the effect on the British Army in this country of the abolition of the Contagious Diseases Act.

At the meeting of the Supreme Legislative Council on March 21 last the following Bills were passed:—A Bill to repeal certain obsolete enactments in the Indian Steam Vessels Act; the Amendment Bill of the Oudh Courts Bill; and a small Bill to give effect to the indenture between the Secretary of State and the Nawab of Murshidabad.

Sir Robert Sandeman takes six months' leave in May. He is not proceeding home immediately, as previously stated.

A disastrous fire has occurred at Bhownugger. Seventy houses were destroyed, and damage done to the extent of ten lakhs of rupees.

A despatch has reached India from home advocating more extended resort to local agents and manufacturers for purchases of stores required by Government.

Reports from Cabul state that the Ameer, though practically recovered from his severe attack of gout, is still far from being in strong health.

Sir George Chesney left Calcutta in the Kaiser-i-Hind on March 26 for Madras, making a short tour in that Presidency.

The total population of Upper and Lower Burmah is 7,507,068 as against 5,901,060 estimated ten years ago.

The total population of the whole Madras Presidency is 35,633,206, of which 17,624,379 are males. The total number of houses is 6,706,465.

According to the recent Census, the population of Mahableshwur is 4,334.

The military authorities are now considering rules to regulate the working of the new warrant amalgamating the three Staff Corps into one Indian Staff Corps. Some little time will elapse before these are issued.

The Secretary of State has sanctioned the appointment of an officer to be Director of Records to the Government of India. Professor Forrest has been appointed to the post, with Calcutta as his head-quarters.

The four battalions of native infantry recently formed for local service in Burmah are to be designated the 10th, 12th, 32nd, and 33rd Regiments Madras Infantry, with the subsidiary title of 1st, 2nd, 4th, and 3rd Burmah Battalions, respectively.

The extension of the telegraph to Cutch has been opened.

News has been received from Goa that Admiral Testa is dead.

Mr. T. D. La Touche, Collector of Aligarh, will probably succeed Mr. Harrington as Commissioner, Allahabad Division, when Mr. Harrington goes to Meerut.

The Royal Bombay Yacht Club Regatta will not take place this year.

Extensive preparations were being made at Kolhapore for the marriage of the Maharajah on April 1.

An Arbitration Court has been opened at Madras.

The Hon. Mr. Izat, Agent, Bengal and North-Western and Oudh and Rohilkhund Railways, is laid up at Lucknow with typhoid fever, but is progressing favourably.

Sir Andrew Scoble was to leave Calcutta for Bombay en route for England on March 30.

Colonel Merriman and Major Hildeband, R.E., started for Kurrachee on a tour of inspection.

Mr. L. H. Lovett Thomas, District Superintendent, Moradabad has been selected for the post of Assistant Inspector-General, Government Railway Police, vice Captain Ryves, appointed to officiate as Deputy Inspector-General of Police, N.-W. P.

During his visit to Allahabad Lord Lansdowne was to unveil a portrait of Sir Alfred Lyall in the Muir College, a place where it will stand very fittingly as a memorial of the deep interest the late Lieutenant-Governor took in the educational progress of the United Provinces.

The Government of India have decided themselves to construct the North-West Doab group of lines, projected jointly by the Bengal and North-Western and Rohilkhund and Kumaon Companies, so that Sir Auckland Colvin must resign all hope of seeing them made during his Lieutenant-Governorship, his long and persistent advocacy of their immediate sanction notwithstanding.

As everywhere else, the season in the Gilgit country has been an unusually severe one. A Pioneer correspondent, whose letter has been on the road since February 21st, writes from Boonji:—"The past winter has been an unusually severe one, and for the first time after twenty years snow has fallen at Boonji near Gilgit; one fall of six inches remaining on the ground for several days. The Kashmir post is delivered about once in three weeks. The Indus' floods are in consequence expected to be unusually heavy this year. The very early and heavy snowfall in the country and passes between Kashmir and Gilgit has unfortunately considerably retarded work on the Gilgit Road."

COLONEL PEMBERTON, officiating Public Works Minister, will make a tour before proceeding to Simla. After going over the Bengal Nagpore and Indian Midland systems, he will proceed to Karachi and Quetta.

REAR-ADMIRAL ROBINSON takes over the command of the East Indian naval station from Admiral Fremantle. The command, however, will be restricted, as the East African Coast becomes part of the Cape command.

THE Ameer is trying the experiment of a penal settlement for political offenders similar to the Siberian settlements in Asiatic Russia. Qazi Sad-ud-din Khan, the Governor of Khost has, in accordance with orders, deported a number of Sharimak, Sheikh Ali Hazara, and Taimani families to Girishk and Farrah, where they will have to inhabit, under surveillance, a new settlement called by no less a name than Mouzai Ikharjiani Ameer Abdul Rahman Khan. These people have been in prison at Herat and in Turkistan for a revolt some time ago. Sirdar Mowladad Khan, Governor of Girishk, has the duty of keeping watch upon them.

NOTES.

NEWS connected with the Manipur disaster continues to be wired daily from India, and now the public is in possession of fairly full details concerning the immediate catastrophe. But there is much of no little importance yet to be learnt about matters preceding the advance of Mr. Quinton and the British force on Manipur. Had the Jubraj been duly warned that it was intended to re-instate the deposed Rajah, and was any reply received? If the possibility of any opposition was entertained, why was so small a force sent? And is it true that the cause of the ammunition in the Residency running short was that the ammunition stored there could only be used for Snider rifles, while the majority of Colonel Skene's men were armed with Martini-Henrys?

THESE can hardly be called captious questions, although they may appear so to those who may be looked to for the answers to them. But more searching questions are certain to follow when the full official accounts and explanations arrive by post. Already there has been criticism here hostile to the action of the Government of India in endeavouring to force a ruler upon people who, having with common consent and satisfaction got rid of him, had no desire to see him put back again by force.

WE, without the full information which should follow on this point, are unwilling to believe that the Government of India re-attempted in a small way the old policy which led to the first Afghan disaster to British arms, for if there be any truth in the proverb that history repeats itself, and unfortunately there is some truth in it, the lesson which the attempt to force Shah Sujah on the Afghans taught us, could not have been forgotten. It may have been, however, that the local authorities misled the Supreme Government to believe that a British Commissioner and escort had only to appear in Manipur to ensure a reversion to the previous state of affairs, and a welcoming back of the discarded Rajah. If so, some very serious explanations will have to be called for. The dead Commissioner and Resident are unhappily now beyond the reach of questioning, but a movement which has led to this sad state of things must have been under official consideration for some time, and all information which can be made public without injury to British rule in India will be certainly demanded.

One thing may be taken for granted—that all the tales about our brave little Goorkhas having behaved with cruelty to Manipuri villagers and their families, or burnt huts or desecrated temples, are absolutely and utterly false. The Goorkha, when he gets into a hot fight is apt to get hot-blooded too, and does not perhaps treat his foe with that courtesy and consideration which would find favour at Exeter Hall; but he is no savage pillager and lustful marauder, and his discipline under British officers will stand in favourable contrast with that of any English soldier.

IT is satisfactory to learn that the gallant "Grant," who has kept up the prestige of a family name which has shed much lustre on British arms, survives to earn the gratitude of his country, and to receive, we hope, promotion and honours from the source whence such envied distinctions come to soldiers. There was at first some confusion of names in the earlier telegrams, but the correct name of the young hero is C. J. W. Grant, Lieutenant in the 2nd Burma Regiment, and eldest son of Lieutenant-General Douglas Grant, of the Indian Staff Corps, now retired.

THE 80 men who were so ably led by Lieutenat Grant were Sikh and Punjabi soldiers, enrolled for military police service in Burma in the 2nd Burma Regiment in Thayetmyo, from which place they were in January last ordered up to the eastern border of Manipur along the right bank of the Chindwin river.

THE news regarding the other military expeditions, although not partaking of any disastrous import, shows that further complications are in view, and that further extraordinary military expenditure is certain. The strength of the Miranzai Expeditionary Force has now reached a total of about 7,000 men and 18 guns, and it is reported that transport and commissariat difficulties threaten to delay the advance. Such delay means increased expenditure; more money also to be spent on strategic railways and frontier defences. To add to these troubles, the telegrams say that the Mollahs are preaching a jehad against the British in the hope of inciting the Afridis to rise and throw their lot in with the tribes now in arms against us on that frontier.

IN the face of all this, it is idle to waste time and words to go into any disquisition concerning the pros and cons of Sir David Barbour's Financial Statement. The Indian Budget has fallen flat enough as regards any opinion of its merits in India. The press there "hopes," but "doubts." That was when the present Overland Mail left. By this time all doubts must be resolved into the certainty that the "Estimates" are vain things, and the wished-for surplus a delusion and a snare.

By Telegraph.

(Times Correspondents.)

Calcutta, April 13.

The European fugitives from Manipur have suffered great hardships and have walked the whole way, 120 miles. Before meeting Captain Cowley's detachment they were obliged to avoid the roads and keep to the jungle paths, and to live on roots. Captain Cowley's men, when they met them, had only one day's rations left, on which the whole party lived till they reached the frontier. However, all, including Mrs. Grimwood, arrived in good health.

The Jubraj's statement that the Goorkhas had desecrated the temples, and that this enraged the Manipuris and led to the slaughter of the prisoners, is clearly false. The Goorkhas, being Hindoos, would not desecrate Hindoo temples.

Simla, April 13.

Captain Boileau, who, with Mrs. Grimwood, Lieutenant Gurdon, Captain Butcher, and other officers, made good his escape from Manipur and reached Lakhipur on March 31, has made his report to the Indian Government on the subject of the recent events at Manipur.

His description of the occurrences before and after the abortive durbar summoned by Mr. Quinton only confirms the previous narratives. When the siege on the British Residency began, the Manipuris manned the loop-holed walls of the palace, which were about 60 yards from the Residency, and separated from it by an unfordable moat. At 8 o'clock in the evening of March 24 Mr. Quinton sent a letter to the Regent proposing terms. A reply was soon afterwards received, in which the Regent said that the only terms which he would grant were the unconditional surrender of the whole British force. Colonel Skene advised against any capitulation. Mr. Quinton, however, observed that the Residency would not be tenable if the guns opened fire upon it, and he discussed the question of the abandonment of the place with Mr. Grimwood, the Resident.

Lieutenant Simpson, after a time, went out and spoke with the enemy. He came back and reported that the Jubraj would meet Mr. Quinton if the latter would come to the gateway of the Palace. The Commissioner accordingly went after some time, accompanied by Colonel Skene, Mr. Grimwood, Lieutenant Simpson, and Mr. Cossins; with them went also a bugler, who carried the chairs required for the conference, which it was supposed would be held at the Palace gateway. This bugler, however, was speedily ordered back by the Manipuris, as he was armed with a rifle.

At half-past 10 the Manipuris shouted out to the people in the Residency that Mr. Quinton would not return, and they then opened fire again. Our men, writes Captain Boileau, replied freely. At midnight Lieutenant Gurdon, Lieutenant Woods, Captain Butcher, and Mrs. Grimwood were standing upon the Residency steps among the Sepoys, and shells were bursting in the compound. Captain Boileau consulted his brother officers as to what should be done. He said that he would go with the majority. Ultimately it was resolved to evacuate the Residency, and the retreat was effected in good order. The fugitives made their way across the hills, and finally met Captain Cowley's detachment, with which they proceeded to Lahkipur.

Captain Boileau thinks that the Jubraj is alone responsible for all that happened. The British officers state that no cruelty whatever was practised by our men, nor, indeed, was such a thing possible.

Rangoon, April 13.

Sir F. Roberts has congratulated Lieutenant Grant on his gallant defence of the fort at Thobal, and on his efforts to save the officers who were captured at Manipur. The recall of Lieutenant Grant from Thobal after he had repulsed all attacks made on him is generally considered a grave mistake, especially as Captain Presgrave was sent to reinforce him. There was sufficient time to countermand the instructions sent to Lieutenant Grant to return. He abandoned Thobal unwillingly under a peremptory order of recall. In a letter to Captain Presgrave before the order of recall reached him Lieutenant Grant describes the Manipuris as very cowardly. Lieutenant Grant's retreat will probably encourage the Manipuris to resist. The general opinion of those who know the country is that, had Lieutenant Grant continued to hold Thobal, Manipur would have been re-occupied without firing a shot.

Captain Presgrave and Lieutenant Grant have returned to Patel, about 20 miles beyond Tamu, whither Leslie's column has also moved. Notwithstanding that Sir F. Roberts has sanctioned an immediate advance on Manipur, the troops are delayed, apparently awaiting the leisurely advance of Brigadier-General Graham, who arrives at Tamu to-morrow. Sir A. Mackenzie has throughout strongly favoured an immediate dash being made on Manipur.

We have received the following telegrams from the India Office for publication:—

"From Viceroy, April 12.

"Grant retired from Thobal 9th. Reached Pallel safely 10th, meeting relieving force. He held out splendidly against overwhelming odds ever since 31st. Lost one killed, four wounded."

"From Viceroy, April 12.

"Manipur. Report of Captain Boileau, senior officer surviving, shows Regent's allegations regarding ill-treatment of Manipuris by our troops quite unfounded. Manipuris fired first on them. I infer from report that force divided in attempting to arrest Senaputty; that fighting took place in large walled and moated enclosure, containing his house and Rajah's palace, also in Residency, which was commanded from palace enclosure walls. Our troops evidently fought at great disadvantage."

Rangoon, April 12.

Trustworthy details of the deaths of Mr. Quinton and the other British officers with him have been brought to Tamu from Manipur. These unfortunate gentlemen were put to death under circumstances of revolting barbarity.

After Mr. Quinton's capture, he and two British officers and a bugler were taken before the Regent, who ordered them to be made over to the Kuki levies to be killed. Mr. Quinton was killed with dahs, his head being cut off and his body hacked to pieces. His dismembered limbs were then thrown outside the city walls to be devoured by pariah dogs.

The two officers, whose names are not given, and the bugler were speared by Kukis, and their bodies afterwards mutilated and also thrown to pariah dogs.

Mr. Grimwood, the political agent, and two other officers who were captured alive were shot by orders of Linkanzinglaw, the Minister, and their bodies were also cut to pieces and treated as those of Mr. Quinton and his companions.

The bodies of two British officers who were killed during the fighting were also cut to pieces and thrown outside the city.

Only vague reports of these atrocities had previously reached Tamu through a native source. Large rewards have been offered for the capture of the Regent and the other leaders, including the Senaputty, whose fate appears to be uncertain.

The 12th Burma Regiment and 2nd Battalion of the 4th Goorkhas have advanced from Tamu.

Lieutenant Grant appears to have supported his force with the corn he captured in the Thobal fort. His ammunition was almost exhausted.

April 12.

The messenger despatched by Captain Presgrave on the 3rd inst. to inform Lieutenant Grant that he was advancing to relieve him reached the Lieutenant at Thobal on the 9th inst., three days after the attack in force made on Fort Alongtaing by the Manipuris.

Lieutenant Grant then retreated. His total casualties are reported as one man killed and two wounded. Both Lieutenant Grant and Captain Presgrave are expected to reach Tamu to-morrow. It appears from the above that the rumours of the capture of Lieutenant Grant's force and the fresh advance to relieve him made by Captain Presgrave were unfounded.—Reuter.

Calcutta, April 12.

The news of the past week has unhappily removed all doubt as to the fate of Mr. Quinton and his companions, although the manner and time of their deaths are still uncertain.

Some 50 released prisoners and fugitives arrived on Friday at Kuzamma, a frontier post near Kohima, and among them was a native trader named Tansoh Doss, who affirmed that he had seen the mutilated bodies of British officers, with their heads, hands, and feet cut off. He does not appear to have mentioned when the murders were committed, but it was evidently before the 2nd inst., when the news of the destruction of Mach by the military police reached Manipur and the other captives were released.

It will be remembered that the Bengalee head clerk's report said that the officers were killed in action, and therefore there is room to hope that they were not murdered in cold blood, but were killed while still resisting at, or immediately after, their seizure, and that the mutilation was effected after death. This is the view taken by the Indian Government, and, on the whole, it is the more probable.

The event has caused a deep feeling of sorrow and indignation throughout India, especially in the province of Assam, where the victims were well known and where it was universally believed that no violence would be offered to them. Natives as well as Europeans are calling for prompt retribution, and, whatever may be the fate of Manipur itself, there can be no doubt that effective punishment will be meted out to the treacherous Jubraj.

Digitized by Google

His story that he has executed the Senaputty is almost certainly false, as all probabilities point to the fact that the latter fell in an unsuccessful attack on the mud fort at Alaungtaung, near Thobal, which Lieutenant Grant so gallantly defended.

The three columns are now rapidly concentrating at Kohima, Silchar, and Tamu; and although the Manipuris are said to be fortifying the capital, it is not likely that they will offer any resistance. The difficulties of the roads and of transport will be the only serious obstacles, and these, so far at least as the Cachar column is concerned, are so considerable that it is understood that that route was not selected without opposition on the part of some competent authorities.

PARIS, APRIL 11.

A representative of the journal La France had an interview to-day with M. Bonvalot, the famous explorer, who lately went on an expedition to Tibet, accompanied by Prince Henry of Orleans, on the subject of the outbreaks in Assam and Burmah. M. Bonvalot declared that the disturbances had the appearance of being of a religious character, but that this was simply a cloak for national agitations against England, and that no reliance must be placed in the assertion that religion was the cause of the disorder. If the Manipuris revolted it was not because their religion was attacked, but because they were discontented with British rule.

M. Bonvalot expressed the opinion that the British would have recourse to a sanguinary suppression of the insurrection, and concluded by saying:—

"What the British want is to exterminate the Indians. What they want is to perpetrate massacres which will never be known. They will not stop to consider appearances. Besides, I would guarantee that they have another means of suppression—namely, a pecuniary one. Vain glory is not known in Great Britain's colonial policy."—Reuter.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, APRIL 13.

Orders have been issued to transfer the base of the Black Mountain force from Derband to Oghi, which is 4,000 ft. high. The bridge of boats at Kotkai will be dismantled and the right bank of the Indus evacuated.

The troops of the Miranzai expedition are being organized in three columns. The strength of the expedition is about 7,000 men with 18 guns. Transport and commissariat difficulties threaten to delay the advance. Had the railway been pushed to Kohat and the Indus been bridged at Kushalgarhas, as intended, these difficulties could not have happened.

Two troopers of the 5th Punjab Cavalry were shot on Saturday in British territory, while carrying a message from Hangu.

The troops sent up have made some notable forced marches. The 6th Punjab Infantry covered 80 miles in three days, and many of the corps marched 32 miles in one day. The Mollahs are preaching a Jehad against the British, but it is doubtful whether the Afridis, the most martial race on the frontier, will join.

Sir W. Lockhart leaves Kohat for the front to-morrow. Ten days more should see the Samana ridge in our possession again.

The news of the resolution in the House of Commons on the opium revenue has caused a general feeling of astonishment, almost of consternation. People ask whether the supporters of the resolution realized the fact that its enforcement would infallibly lead to the bankruptcy of India.

CALCUTTA, APRIL 12.

A force numbering 7,000 or 8,000 men, under Sir W. Lockhart, is now assembling at Kohat in connection with the disturbances on the Miranzai frontier. The general impression, which is evidently shared by the Government, is that this outbreak is likely to develop into a very serious affair. Everything, however, depends on the extent of the combination of the tribes—a matter on which as yet there is no very definite information available.

The first attack was made without any warning, and took the pickets on the Samana range by surprise. The 29th Punjab Infantry and a small body of frontier militia made a gallant fight, and eventually fell back in good order after inflicting heavy loss on the enemy.

The Samana heights are now held by a large body of tribesmen, who are reported to be led by a fanatical priest named Syed Mir Basha.

Hostilities in the Black Mountain still continue, but the attitude of the Nyangul of Swat and some of the tribes is still doubtful. The head-quarters are now at Ril.

Prince Christian Victor has left General Elles's staff to rejoin his regiment, which is ordered to Miranzai.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

DURBAND, MARCH 13.

The two columns organized to co-operate against the tribes of the Hazara frontier—the River Column and the Hill Column, which are the titles distinguishing the one from the other—left Durband yesterday, and last night both were in bivouac beyond the border.

The Hill Column reached Pailam, and thence went on to Tilli without encountering any difficulty apart from the difficulties of the ascent and the trying nature of the weather. They consisted of the Welsh Fusiliers, the 2nd-5th Goorkhas, the Khyber Rifles, No. 9 Mountain Battery (English), the whole brigade being under the command of that rising officer, Colonel A. G. Hammond, V.C., A.-D.-C., of the Queen's Own Corps of Guides.

The River Column, consisting of the Seaforth Highlanders, the 4th Sikhs, the 37th Dogras, one-half of No. 1 Mountain Battery (English), and one-half of the Derajat Mountain Battery (native), accompanied also by head-quarters, the Brigade being under the command of Colonel Williamson, of the Welsh Fusiliers, crossing the Frontier at Shingri, found that village abandoned. The heights on the right bank of the Indus, however, were crowned by groups of armed men, who presently descended to a ravine and opened fire from the shelter of some brushwood. The Column was marching about five hundred yards from the bank, and as it was necessary to protect our boats when passing up the river, detachments of the Guides and 4th Sikhs were sent down to dislodge them. Apparently the enemy had a few Martinis among them, but most of their bullets were fired from the Jezail, the long rifle of the country. Presently some of the Guides crossed the river in one of the boats, and, skirmishing up the rocks and the steep grassy slopes beyond, succeeded in driving off the enemy.

Meanwhile the 4th Sikhs under Col. Gaselee, the 37th Dogras under Col. Rivaz, and three Derajat guns having been halted for the night at the spot already attained, the rest of the force pushed on to a village named Towara, which is situated among corn-fields half a mile this side of Kotkai. Both Towara and Kotkai were found to be deserted. Chased by the Guides the enemy were moving parallel to us on the opposite bank, and some of them fired a shot or two at our advanced Highlanders, who had drawn up in skirmishing order under Kotkai; and well the Highlanders looked. The rocks, the cliffs, the mountain peaks, the deep flowing river, the savage nature of the scenery, the men in their kilts, disposed in loose order among the boulders, or hidden by clumps of sanatha, all made a picture not easily forgotten. Towards evening some of the Guides, many of whom are themselves Pathans, again crossed over and cleared the ground, while at Towara the main force bivouacked on wholesome sandy soil left by some ancient flood of the Indus, and dominated to our left by precipices and heights of the grandest description. It is a curious fact that the camp of the Highlanders, who were also in the former expedition, lay across the very ravine down which came the band of Ghazis two years ago when Captain Beley was killed. Their cooking-fires were lighted probably over the very spot under which a hundred and eighty of those misguided Hindoostani fanatics had bravely met their deaths.

During the night it was expected that the camps would be troubled by a dropping fire from the hills above, and every commanding post therefore was occupied by a strong piquet. But the enemy were scarcely likely to have lingered in the narrow tract which separates the line of the two columns, and in point of fact no alarm of any kind occurred, though occasional shots from the other side of the river ever and anon broke the pervading stillness.

This morning (March 13) some Seaforth Highlanders and some Guides again crossed the river, and we could distinctly see them skirmishing upwards past a burning village, the enemy, who were few in number, moving off to the mountains above.

Durband for the present remains the base for both the columns. There are collected our commissariat and transport. It is garrisoned by about 300 men, thirty having been left behind by each regiment, and the whole place is under the command of Major Dempster, of the 4th Sikhs.

Durband lies between the Indus and a rapid stream, which rises in the heart of the Black Mountain. Occupying the tongue of land formed by the junction of both, it was anciently a place of some importance. Close to the Indus stands the Sikh fort built by Sardar Maha Singh, in the days of the Sikh dominion, while close at hand are the remains of some excellent masonry similar to that of the Stupas, which in the travels of the old Chinese pilgrims were ascribed to the age of Asoka (B.C. 260), though in point of fact this style was followed also by that other great Buddhist king, Kanishka, whose Stupas and Viharas, dating from the first century of our era, once covered the whole of Northern India from Bactria on the one side to Patna on the other. On the higher slopes of Durband other remains of antiquity abound on all sides, not the least interesting of which consist in the beautifully formed cup-marks with which many of the granite boulders are adorned. These cup-marks, precisely similar to many others which were discovered some years ago lower down the Indus in the Attock district, are also precisely similar to the rock-markings of Norway and Brittany which have exercised the ingenuity of antiquaries. The size of the cup-marks in these parts never exceeds that of a large tea-cup. Though occasionally they are found of much smaller dimensions, they are nearly always arranged in diamond fashion.

Close to Towara stands by the road-side an immense granite boulder, weighing possibly some hundreds of tons. It is crowned by walls of the Buddhist period, and I made there an excavation. It revealed other walls equally beautiful, the basis probably of tombs, which, however, had long ago been rifled of their contents. Kotkai is another most ancient site. As it is now occupied by a Hassanzai hamlet it is difficult to decide on its original condition. Two fine bastions, however, of granite still crown the lofty rock on which it stands, while portions of Buddhist walls peep out here and there from the wretched more modern masonry of the Mahomedan period. This spot, rising abruptly from the dark waters of the Indus, and situated close to what I take to have been an ancient crossing, might repay examination, knowing, as we do, that the whole of their regions were covered with Buddhist Stupas, towers, and veharas, all famous in their day, and all richly adorned with the seven precious substances.

The view from Kotkai is simply charming. Away to the left on the opposite side rises the snow-capped peak of Mahaban, the hill of the "Great Forest," 7,800 ft., on the other side of which lies the pass by which Alexander led his conquering army into the Peshawur Valley, that is, into India. It was considered a sacred mountain by the Buddhists, though often troubled by the blighting influences of dragons fierce and fell who used to overwhelm travellers by sudden storms of wind, hail, and rain, such as those which have been driving us all frantic during the past week. It looks very lovely and very peaceful just now in the beautiful yellow sunlight, and one can only regret that the savage character of its present possessors forbid any approach to it. Just opposite Kotkai rises the hill of Baio (5,300 ft.). Close to the summit stands what appears to be a walled village with towers at the corners. It is said to harbour the women and children of the tribes, and it is evidently held by a considerable body of men. But of course the great feature, physically and historically, is the Indus itself. At this spot it is some eighty or a hundred yards across, and its depth about forty feet. Excepting in rapids it moves down with majestic flow, and in deep silence, between its high restraining banks of dark schist, through which breaks occasionally more recent seams of black trap or grey granite. Along its banks and over all these hills flourish various species of Acacia, as the phalai (Acacia modesta), the kikar (Acacia arabica). Number of banyans are to be found also in various special places. And it is curious to note that these trees, native to the moist plains of Hindoostan, and there evergreen, in these bleak regions have adapted themselves to their surroundings and become deciduous. Just now their branches are for the most part bare. They were not introduced by the present Mahomedan population, who never introduce anything anywhere but crime and violence. I imagine them to be the descendants of trees introduced centuries ago, when every peak and valley on this border were owned by Hindoos.

PALOSI, MARCH 23.

The river column with the head-quarters is at Palosi, and the 4th Sikhs at Bakrai with the boats. The 37th Dogras are guarding the bridge-head at Kotkai. There is a large gathering on the hills to the west of the bivouac, with several standards. Beyond occasional shots all is quiet. The 4th Sikhs have just skirmished over the Diliari hill. The camp is strongly entrenched. The health of all the troops is excellent.

MARCH 24.

Colonel Gaselee, whilst returning down the Diliari hill, was followed up by the enemy. Four companies of Guides were sent across the river from the camp to assist Colonel Gaselee, and the enemy were shelled from the camp by Colonel Morgan's Battery. Colonel Gaselee, not wishing to leave the high ground to the enemy, again ascended to the top of the hill, and a brisk skirmish took place, lasting about one hour. About 6.30 P.M. the Battery again shelled the enemy, and Colonel Gaselee rushed their stronghold with the bayonet, the enemy clearing out. Several of the enemy were killed and wounded. Our casualties were Lieutenant Harman, two cuts over left side (doing well), and four sepoys with gunshot wounds.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.'s TROOPSHIP MALABAR.

H.M.'s troopship Malabar, Captain J. G. Jones, which arrived in harbour on March 21, left Portsmouth on February 19, Queenstown on the 28th, Malta on March 1, Port Said on the 9th, and Suez on March 10. The Malabar left Malta on the 2nd instant, and after going about 13 miles some trouble was caused by something going wrong with the low-pressure crank and stopping the ship. After a delay of 22 hours the vessel went on for a little, but the engines not working properly, the Malabar put back to Malta, arriving on March 4, at 7 A.M., to make the necessary repairs. The repairs were undertaken by the dockyard authorities at Malta, after which she resumed her voyage at 5 P.M. on March 5, and since then the engines have worked satisfactorily. She brought 66 officers, 16 ladies, 8 officers' children, 1,153 European rank and file, 29 women, and 25 children. The Malabar passed her Majesty's steamers Serapis in the Red Sea on March 13, and the Himalaya in the Gulf of Aden on March 15, both homeward bound. The Malabar experienced fine weather throughout the voyage. The following are the names of the officers and their families:—

COLONEL GARDNER.

WILLIAM LINNÆUS GARDNER, a nephew of the first Irish peer of that name, came to India in the King's service about the year 1790. What circumstances led to the resignation of his commission—for he was a captain in the King's Army—is not known, but he had only been a short time in this country when he betook himself to General De Boigne, and sought service in the trained battalions of Holkar's army. During the ten years or so which followed, his adventurous spirit found employment on the many battle-fields where the Mahratta Prince reached the height of supremacy in Northern India, and he also varied these rough experiences with others of an equally exciting but gentler nature. For instance, he overcame the jealously guarded seclusion of a Mussulman zenana. Whether his services and the influence of his master Holkar were sufficient to secure him a bride, or whether his audacity alone aided him in penetrating behind the purdah, is not recorded, but during his service under Holkar he obtained in marriage—some say by force—the daughter of the Nawab of Cambay. According to one authority, Gardner continued in the army of Holkar until the outbreak of the Mahratta War in 1803, and then escaped to the English camp, after having been threatened with death if he refused to fight against his countrymen. All the British officers in Holkar's service were, however, summarily dismissed at the commencement of the war; many of them—James Skinner, for instance—against their will. The story of Gardner's escape may therefore, in all probability, be transferred from Holkar's Court to that of the Rajah of Jeypore, with whom he was residing when the war began. Of his summary departure from Holkar's service we have an account in his own words, as related by him to a friend. Previous to the commencement of hostilities, the Prince employed Colonel Gardner as an emissary, and endeavoured, through him, to negotiate advantageous terms for himself. The Colonel was delayed long on the business, and on his return he was received with marks of displeasure by Holkar, who accused him of treachery, and ended by saying that, had he not returned that day, the kanats of his tents would have been thrown down and the sanctity of his seraglio violated. Such a charge and such a threat were too much for Gardner's hot Irish blood to bear unanswered. "Drawing my sword," he said, in narrating the incident, "I attempted to cut Holkar down, but was prevented by those around him, and ere they had time to recover from their amazement, I rushed from the tent, sprang upon my horse, and was soon beyond reach of my pursuers." What became of his wife and children, or how they escaped the vengeance of Holkar, smarting from such an outrage, no one seems to know. It appears, however, that the Colonel took refuge, as stated above, with the Rajah of Jeypore, for it was from that state that he went over to the English about the middle of 1804.

The circumstances of his escape to his own countrymen are exciting. He was kept a close prisoner, and when allowed to walk abroad, was always carefully guarded. One day, however, while walking on the high banks of a river, he determined to make a bold bid for freedom, and, at a place where the bank fell perpendicularly to the water, he leapt suddenly over the edge before his guards could anticipate his design, and plunged into the river, some forty feet below. As he had anticipated, no one followed him, and the only immediate danger he ran was from the muskets of those above; but, considering the nature of the firearms of those days, this was not a very eminent peril. The alarm was, however, soon given in the town, and parties started in search of the fugitive. After swimming some distance Gardner concealed himself amongst the reeds by the river-bank, and, with only his head above water, waited until the sounds of his pursuers had died away. He then issued from his hiding-place, and with the timely aid of a friendly villager, he at length reached the British lines.

Colonel Gardner, though older than James Skinner, and having a longer experience with native armies, does not seem to have had that officer's gift of inspiring confidence and affection in those under his command. He was a bold soldier and a skilful diplomatist, but not such a natural leader of men as Skinner. Thus it was, probably, that his services remained for five years unemployed by his countrymen after his return to their midst. In the meanwhile he was treated with liberality, and received a pension of Rs. 900 a month from Government, or Rs. 400 more than was granted to Skinner. In May 1809 he was appointed to the command of a Corps of Irregular Horse, which he was to raise for local duties in the Ceded Districts. For this command he received a salary of Rs. 300, besides the many allowances and perquisites which then appertained to the charge of an irregular regiment. The regiment, called the 2nd Local Horse, was raised without difficulty, and was early employed in the Nepal, Mahratta, and first Burmese wars; since which time it has gained distinction in many campaigns, formerly as the 2nd Irregular Cavalry, and in latter years as the 2nd Bengal Cavalry, while last year it was honoured by being selected to become a Lancer regiment. After some few years more of the active life of a soldier, Colonel Gardner retired into private life at Khasganj, where he lived as a native. On the rare occasions when he re-appeared in public he resumed the costume of his countrymen, and he is described as having a tall, commanding figure, a soldier-like countenance and military air, presenting a very striking appearance, while he dressed in a blue surtout, resembling the undress uniform of the British army, but profusely ornamented with silk lace. His son married a niece of the last Emperor of Delhi, and the strange announcement may still be read in old numbers of the Delhi Gazette, that "Mr Gardner and the Princess have arrived at Delhi, and are staying in the Palace." At one time it was announced that Colonel Gardner's daughters were also to be allied to the house of Timur by marrying the nephews of the Emperor. We have not been able to ascertain if this alliance ever took place. Colonel Gardner's descendants in the male line have not retained much trace of their noble and princely lineage. The direct line became extinct a few years since, and the eldest of the Colonel's grandsons claimed the title and estates. His claim, however, was not allowed, and the Barony of Gardner remains in abeyance, but readers of the peerage will find amongst the claimants the name of Alan Hyde Gardner, some time in a native police force, residing at the village of Munowta, near Etah.—Madras Mail.

THE INDIAN FACTORIES ACTS.

LANCASHIRE seldom agitates without meeting with at least partial success, and she rarely rests content until she gets all that she wanted, if not all that was asked for originally. In the matter of the regulation of labour in Indian factories she has asked for a good deal. So far there has not been much result; but the game is not yet played out, and the future appears likely to be more agreeable to Lancashire than the past. The Commission that studied the question reported, on the whole, fairly. The manner in which evidence was taken was called in question occasionally, and it appeared sometimes as if too great attention had been paid to the statements of almost irresponsible witnesses. It may be said that the general tendency of the evidence of the workpeople themselves was in favour of a continuance of a system little changed from that now in force. But although the Commission might, without any show of injustice, have said that things had better remain unchanged, and free from any fresh legislation, it was decided that some proposals must be put forward. This was, perhaps, a concession to the strength of Lancashire feeling on the subject. But if it was thought likely to satisfy the cotton-spinners at home and to keep them quiet, it was a false move. While it did not appease them, it might have irritated their rivals in this country. Among Indian cotton-spinners, however, the report was at first received with general approval. There was a feeling of relief: matters might have been so much worse. And just for a time it was thought that the Lancastrian agitation would be stayed, and that Indian factory proprietors would get off with but slight modifications of the existing law. This idea lasted but a short time. It was soon made clear that the battle had not been fought out. And, perhaps, the small concessions made did more harm than good. They may have just whetted the English spinner's appetite for interference. He had at least gained a point or two, and by continuing his agitation he might gain a few more advantages. Consequently, he set about trying a fall with the Indian spinner once again, and although Lord Cross has lately made a show of not listening to the Lancashire men any more in regard to Indian factory legislation, there can be little doubt that great influence is again being brought to bear upon the Government.

The report of the Select Committee appointed to consider the new Bill has been presented to the Legislative Council, and published. To judge from the terms of the report, the Committee has not been uninfluenced by external forces. At any rate, it has gone rather beyond the recommendations and suggestions of the Commission of Inquiry. Certainly, these have not been exceeded to any great extent, but a straw sometimes serves to show which way the wind blows, and it is tolerably clear that since the Bill was first placed on the legislative anvil it has been considerably knocked about, though the majority of members of the Select Committee appear to think otherwise, for they say in their report: "Having regard to the fact that the report of the Indian Factory Commission of 1890, in which the questions dealt with by the Bill are raised, has been considered by local governments and the mercantile bodies concerned, we do not think that the Bill requires re-publication, and we recommend it to be passed as now amended." In this manner Sir Andrew Scoble, Mr. Hutchins, and Mr. K. L. Nulkar express the opinion that the Bill is much the same as it was, or, at any rate, that it marks no important deviation from the report of the Factory Commission. Mr. Mackay concurs in the report. Mr. Bliss is unable to agree that the Bill has not been so altered as to require re-publication. Mr. Nugent declares emphatically that "the Bill, as placed before this Select Committee on Monday last and as now submitted with certain alterations to the Council with the Report, is not the Bill sent thirteen months ago to the Local Governments for opinion and referred to a Select Committee of this Council." "It includes," observes Mr. Nugent, "certain provisions not mentioned in the original Bill, and in some respects it goes beyond any recommendations made by the Indian Factory Commission appointed in September last." And so say we. The Committee has gone beyond the Commission, which went rather beyond what the facts of the case called for; and although it is unnecessary to attach very great importance to the difference thus shown between the Commission's report and the Committee's amended Bill, re-publication ought to be insisted on if only for the purpose of maintaining a sound principle. If the public is to have a chance of expressing an opinion, it should be asked to speak upon the Bill actually before the Council, not upon that which was first thought of.

The details of the amendments proposed and of the Bill as it now stands are of special interest only to a few people, comparatively, in Southern India. To employers only are they important in themselves; yet they have an interest for the general public in that they show how much influence Lancashire has, and how greatly Indian legislation is controlled by more than those considerations of the needs and rights of the people that should be the chief guides of her statesmen. No man can be blamed if he draws from this sundry conclusions in regard to Indian legislation in general not complimentary to those who have the administration of affairs in this country. When the natives of India form the Opposition, the Viceregal Council has a back-bone; when the Anglo-Indian opposes measures suggested by the Government, the Council proves itself to be a fitting representative of a stiff-necked generation. But as soon as the Secretary of State, or the Lancashire cotton-world, or even a travelling M.P., appears on the scene to criticise and condemn the Council, it becomes invertebrate, climbs down not even gracefully, and holds its hands up in supplication, as if to say that if forgiven this time it will sin no more against the mighty lords who are so easily able to teach it the pains and penalties of disobedience or independence. From beginning to end Lancashire has been encouraged. A pretence has been made of settling the question of labour in Indian mills on its merits, but we can now only regard this as a pretence. Concessions have been made to such an extent that Lancashire is certain to ask for "More." She has already declared her intention to do so; and, as we warned factory owners a short time ago, she is likely to get it. The Berlin Conference is being utilized, although its suggestions cannot by any stretch of reason be taken as intended to apply to India and to native workmen with their peculiar methods of work. The Conference will serve Lancashire as a mask, and philanthropy will again be the guise in which trade will endeavour to get the better of trade. Fair competition is now shunned, and the Government of India, while boasting of its Free Trade principles, is likely to condemn India to what is little less than a Protection, a subsidizing, of Lancashire at India's expense. And this sort of thing must continue until all India's forces are rallied together to fight in a body as the Lancashire cotton-spinners do when their hand is raised against industries in this country.—Madras Times.

ASSAULTING A BARN-DOOR FOWL.

THE Miranzai Expedition of 1891 has come and gone, and another example has been furnished of the want of appreciation of the requirements of frontier disturbances, which has so often before been shown by the military authorities at Simla and by the Government of India. When vigorous measures and prompt action have been needed expeditionary forces have been cut down and their action hampered, until to call their object a punitive one has been no more than a jest. On the other hand, when, as in the present case, the work to be done was such as could have been easily accomplished by a couple of regiments, lakhs of rupees have been spent on assembling an army almost big enough for the invasion of Afghanistan. The Miranzai Expedition was not, as was stated by one of the north country journals, directed against the Miranzais, for the excellent reason that no such people exist. Its object was to punish the several sections of the great Urakzai tribe, whose territory borders on the Miranzai Valley. The Urakzais, one of the largest of the independent tribes on our North-West frontier, are divided into six main clans, numbering in all some twenty-five thousand fighting men. Each of these clans is sub-divided into several sections, and it was to avenge a series of outrages committed by some of these latter that the Expedition was despatched. The sections in question are the Rubia Khel and Akhel of the Ismailzai clan, and the Skaikhan and Mishti sections of the Hamsaya clan. These sections are settled on either side of a narrow and lofty walled valley, which is divided by the Samanoghar range of hills from the Miranzai Valley. The four sections together number about 7,300 fighting men, but the Rubia Khel, against whom in particular the Expedition was directed, are but some 790 strong.

The Urakzais are as hardy and wiry as any of the hill tribes on the North-West frontier, but they cannot compare in physique with many of their neighbours, nor is their courage by any means above suspicion. Possibly on this account they have given the Punjab Government but little serious trouble since the annexation of the province. A small expedition was, indeed, despatched against the Rubia Khel in 1855, but it met with but slight resistance, and the rôle of the Urakzais seems on the whole to be rather the covert abetting of petty and cowardly outrages than the open and bold resistance of the punishment which must follow. For some years past the sections on our immediate frontier had distinguished themselves by committing a succession of outrages after the nature of the Pathan. Men were murdered, women and cattle carried off, crops destroyed, and other annoyances inflicted on our dependent villages of the Miranzai Valley. Two years ago, when the Lieutenant-Governor visited the frontier, the advisability of an expedition was discussed. The Political Officer on the spot, however, strongly opposed the idea. The villagers who had been outraged were themselves strong enough, he asserted, to obtain reprisals from a handful of tribesmen, who were not only few in numbers but of no reputation for valour; in any case, the troops in the neighbourhood were sufficient. However, the outrages did not cease, and the counsels of some of the highest military authorities were so decidedly in favour of an expedition that every arrangement was made for the purpose early in January 1890; and some regiments had actually been warned for service, when at the last moment proceedings were stayed by the payment of all outstanding fines (some Rs. 22,000) accompanied by profuse professions of future good conduct by Mozaffar Khan, a neighbouring chief of note, who thus conclusively proved his influence for good or ill over the sections in question. In consideration of this old gentleman's past services—he displayed marked good-will and loyalty during the trying times of 1857—the Expedition was abandoned for the moment, only to be resorted to again at the close of last year, when the promises of good conduct were found to be but empty words.

When the idea of an expedition was first mooted, the Commander-in-Chief is said to have been in favour of entrusting the operations to the troops of the Kohat garrison alone. Others of the military authorities, however, urged that much more extensive preparations were necessary. Unfortunately for the military budget these latter counsels prevailed, the result being that a force including eight regiments of Infantry, two batteries of Artillery, and two squadrons of Cavalry—altogether about 5,600 men—were assembled at Kohat early in January. The force was to advance in three separate columns, which were to arrive simultaneously at Gwadam, the stronghold of Makhmudin, a petty chieftain who has been responsible for the late misdoings of the clans, especially of the Rubia Khel. One form of opposition, however, had not been reckoned on, namely that of the elements. One of the severest winters which has been known on the frontier for many years prevented the Expedition from moving for several days, and throughout the operations the troops have had to endure the most intense cold under the slight shelter of single-fly tents. On one occasion the 4th Sikhs spent a whole night on the hill-tops, in deep snow and with no protection but their great-coats; and the fact that not a single man went into hospital on the following day speaks well for the hardiness of our troops. Day by day as the Expedition advanced up the narrow valley on either side of which the recalcitrant tribesmen are located, reports were received that the next section of the clans intended to make a stand, and each day showed how far was the idea of resistance from the minds of the so-called enemy. The defensive towers of the villages were destroyed, and the only protest made by the inhabitants was to send their jirgahs and pay the fines imposed on them. One well-known member of the Geographical Survey pursued his investigations alone, many miles from the camp, quite forgetting that he was in a hostile country! At length the rendezvous—Makhmudin's stronghold—was approached; a simultaneous advance was carried out by the three columns with much preparation of advanced guards, skirmishers, &c.; the moment for the assault arrived; the troops rushed gallantly to the attack; entered the tower, and found it occupied by—one barn-door fowl, which fled cackling from the noisy intruders! A few days afterwards Makhmudin surrendered himself; the troops marched back to Kohat, and this glorious campaign was at an end.

Thus were lakhs of rupees squandered on a trifling business, which might have been more than accomplished by the troops on the spot. One regiment—nay, one company—could have marched through the country and exacted penalties for the misdemeanours of the Urakzais. From the very first the best authorities on the spot declared that no resistance would be experienced, and that the display of force was ridiculously in excess of what was necessary. There is every sign that a similar absence of fighting will characterize the Black Mountain Expedition, which has already, up to the date of starting, cost several lakhs. There, however, thanks to the extraordinary policy pursued last year, adequate preparations have to be made in case of opposition. The Lahore paper reported that the Bonerwals would probably join in the struggle, but, as they would have to walk some 150 miles to the scene of action, this seems hardly likely. Meanwhile the tribesmen of the Black Mountain—"the enemy"—are laying in stores of fodder, which they will sell to our troops at a handsome profit. Truly this reduces a punitive expedition to the very depths of absurdity!—Madras Mail.

COTTON SPINNING AND WEAVING IN INDIA.

LANCASHIRE is already agitating for a change in the laws affecting the cotton industry in this country, and she has succeeded in arranging for some alterations to be made at an early date. Lancashire's ostensible motive is philanthropy, of course: the purest philanthropy. She recks nothing, we are sometimes told, of the expansion of the Indian industry so long as it is brought about on fair terms of competition; but it cannot be allowed when it is the results of "sweating" the poor native, grinding him down to the dust, and making man, woman, and child work for many more hours per week than the law allows in Great Britain. But the Anglo-Indian is suspicious of this philanthropy. Something else appears to lurk beneath the mask, and Lancashire herself wears this mask without sufficient care, taking it off rashly at odd moments and showing that beneath the smiles of philanthropy is the angry countenance of jealousy. Within the last few weeks a technical paper has referred to some statistics supplied to the India Office from Indian officials, respecting cotton spinning and weaving in this country. These figures "are not pleasant reading for Lancashire manufacturers," observes our contemporary. Here the truth is spoken. They are far from pleasant reading. They confirm officially what the Lancashire spinner has for a long time known by the general course of trade, and they are specially unpleasing to him when taken in connection with the official returns of the Board of Trade respecting the annual exports from the United Kingdom to India of cotton yarn and twist. Such a comparison as is here suggested causes our Manchester contemporary to remark that it is natural that the rapid development of the Indian textile industries should excite alarm in England. The increasing competition is referred to in language that admits of no two interpretations, and an honest confession is made that, "how this competition is to be met is fast becoming an important question in Lancashire." This is how British competitors ought to treat the matter. So long as competition is fair and open it is no disgrace to either party to admit that the advantage cannot all rest on one side; but disgrace does attach to tactics which seek to bring political influence to the rescue where fair rivalry fails.

The rapid advance of the cotton industry in India is read in Lancashire as meaning that local manufactures are driving English imports out of Indian markets. From 400,000 spindles in India in 1870, and in 1887 103 cotton-mills containing 2,500,000 spindles, matters have advanced until statistics show that in 1890 there were 137 mills with 3,274,196 spindles. And the end is not yet. A great deal of this extra production has not been utilized for the Indian market. Exports of twist and yarn from India increased from a value of £7,800,000 in 1880–84 to £18,230,000 in 1885-89. And thus Lancashire has suffered in three ways. The Indian factories have sent forth three columns against their competitors, and have scored a victory with each. In the first place they have secured a better share of the Home Trade; then they have developed their export trade to China, Java, East Africa, &c. and finally they have taken over large quantities of raw cotton, thus cutting off supplies from their competitors to an extent that is far from unimportant. As regards the Home Trade, statistics necessarily tell us but little; and although each man who visited the bazaars a few years ago and goes again now can judge for himself, we lay no stress upon the deeds of this column, because we have not figures at hand to substantiate the remarks that we should be disposed to make. Yet it may be observed that British exports of yarn and twist to Bombay, Madras, Bengal, and Burma, as well as those to China and those to Japan have declined of late. From this, coupled with India's enlarged industry and expanded exports, we may gather that Lancashire is feeling the effects of the operations of both column No. 1 and column No. 2. That No. 3 has not been ineffective may be gathered from a comparison of cotton crop statistics with the figures relating to exports of cotton to Great Britain. India has an increasing use for the cotton that she herself grows; she is turning it to better account year after year; and thus she is causing Lancashire to be a little anxious about future supplies of certain classes of cotton which have the merit of cheapness, however unfavourably their staples may compare with those of the cottons of other lands.

All this shows that Lancashire has cause for jealousy; and that we are not wrong in suspecting her recent movements to have been instigated by the green-eyed monster, is admitted by the Manchester contemporary to whose remarks we have already alluded. "Some persons," it is remarked, "desire to hinder competition by legal enactments, ostensibly suggested for the welfare of Indian operatives, but the real object, when plainly and truthfully stated, is the desire to handicap unwelcome competitors." This is candid, and it is such an admission as might be expected from the pick of the Lancashire spinners, and manufacturers, and merchants. It is certainly no use mincing matters. Facts should be faced by both sides, and Indian traders will agree with the most reliable English spinners when it is said that "no one can contradict the assertion that the" (Lancastrian) "movement for the amelioration of the physical condition of the men and women employed in Indian mills originates in a desire to increase the cost of labour to the Indian spinner and manufacturer." Time was when the contradiction was uttered, but, speaking generally, there is none to repeat it now, for the Lancastrian mask has been lifted sufficiently to prove that the early suspicions of Indian spinners and merchants were not unfounded. If Lancashire recognizes one fact, the end is near. From this side it has been repeatedly pointed out that competition such as is here referred to is not fair, especially to fellow-subjects all working for the benefit of the Empire. Now that this is partially admitted at home, we may hope to see nobler principles making progress. We may hope to see Lancashire relying as of old on her strong arm and her shrewd brains, in fair rivalry. If British workmen can persuade Indian workmen that they ought to have shorter hours, well and good: Indian employers will then take the matter in hand. But to bring political pressure to bear upon the home Government and through it on the Indian Government, in order to get laws altered against which Indian workmen, as a body, have not a word to say, is to run the risk of attaching to the name of the Lancashire cotton-spinner a stigma of cowardice and unfairness that can never be effaced.—Madras Times.

THE GAINS OF LEARNING BILL.

A Bill has, we see, been introduced into the Madras Council by the Hon. V. Bhashyam Aiyangar, for the purpose of removing the doubts which, owing to the conflict of authorities on the subject, have hitherto prevailed, regarding the rights of members of undivided Hindu families to property acquired by means of their learning, and of getting rid of impracticable distinctions between the kinds of learning to which such acquisitions are due. The authorities are clear and unanimous as to the impartibility of such acquisitions when the learning by means of which they have been made has been gained without the use of the patrimony, but they differ as to the rule that should be followed where it has been acquired at the expense of the family, or one of its members. The tendency of the latest decisions would seem to be towards the principle that the gains of the learning are private property, even though the learning has been acquired at the cost of the family, unless it is of a special and scientific kind, and is the immediate source of the gains. But as Mr. Aiyangar points out, such a rule would give rise in practice to a distressing amount of uncertainty. The Bill proposes to get rid of all difficulty in a very simple way, by providing that the gains of learning made by a member of a Hindu family shall be his exclusive and separate property, whatever the character of learning may be, and in what way soever, or at whose cost soever, it may have been acquired, and however the member in question may have been maintained while acquiring it, provided the gains have been made substantially by means of the learning. This is cutting the Gordian knot rather than untying it, and it can hardly be said to meet all the requirements of abstract justice. But, in the existing state of Hindu society it is probably the best way of fulfilling the needs of practical justice. It is a little hard, however, on the other members of an undivided family that they should have no claim on a member for money out of the common stock expended on his education, however disproportionate it may be to his individual claims; and it seems questionable whether it might not equitably and unobjectionably be made a condition precedent to his acquiring an exclusive right to the gains of learning so paid for, that he should first reimburse the common stock for the amount actually so expended.—Statesman.

THE CENSUS OF BENGAL.

The general results of the Census of Bengal have now been sufficiently ascertained to permit of an estimate of the total population being made. There is no doubt but that there has been an increase during the past ten years of about four and a half millions, raising the population of the Lower Provinces to 74,000,000 of people. The increase is most marked in the neighbourhood of Calcutta, in the Tea Districts, and in Eastern Bengal, as will be seen from the percentages given elsewhere. Taking the province as a whole there is an increase of 6½ per cent. Probably the most noticeable feature is the great growth of the town of Howrah, exclusive of Bali, from a population of 90,813 in 1881 to one of 113,094, or an increase of 24·5 per cent. The small increase in the Behar districts south of the Ganges is also a matter that will attract attention, and is probably due to increased emigration. The decrease in Central Bengal is possibly attributable to the unhealthiness arising from frequent floods in recent years and the silting up of the western distributaries of the Ganges. A very important fact in connection with the Census just concluded is that it has cost less than half as much as the similar statistical inquiry of 1881 did. The Deputy Commissioner of Census, Mr. O'Donnell, deserves the greatest credit for capable and frugal administration. District magistrates have worked hard and successfully. A debt of gratitude is also due to the 300,000 enumerators, who with admirable good feeling lent their services gratuitously, and thereby placed the Government under a heavy obligation. It is pleasant, therefore, to know that the 8,000 compiling clerkships, worth about Rs. 50 each, for the three and a half months census abstraction and tabulations to be carried on in districts, will be distributed among these deserving officers.—Englishman.

Capt. S. F. Case, according to a contemporary, twenty-one years ago, had his name struck off the list of pilots on the Rangoon River by General Fytche, the then Chief Commissioner of British Burma, on a charge which Capt. Case declared to be utterly false. Since that time he has appealed to each Chief Commissioner, and at least once to the Viceroy, but up to the present without success. In December last he sought and obtained an interview with Sir Alexander Mackenzie, who then forwarded the matter to the Government of India. Instructions have, it appears, now been sent to the Port Commissioners that Capt. Case is to have the first vacancy in the pilot service. If all this is true, Capt. Case is a man who is entitled to have a grievance.

REVIEWS.

Banga-Vijetâ; or, the Conqueror of Bengal. By Gadadhar Singh, Sarishtadâr, Mirzapore.

This is a translation into Hindî of a Bengali novel of some repute, by Râmesh Chandra Datt; and the translator has taken much pains to make his book worthy of attention. There can be no doubt that the great vernacular of the North-West Provinces is greatly in want of books in general literature, of a more intellectual and instructive character than the average dramas hitherto produced. Only one writer of original novels has, as yet, clothed his thoughts in his native Hindî—the late Srî Niwâs Dâs, of Dehli. Until another such man arises, it is well that careful writers, such as Gadâdhar Singh, should introduce some of the recent excellent novels of Bengal into the North-West. The present work is very well done, and is tolerably free from affectation in style, and any affectation in purity of language. The writer uses words which are fairly well known, whatever may be the source from which they are derived; and by so doing he is really strengthening and improving his beloved vernacular.

A Scientific Frontier. By John Dacosta. W. H. Allen & Co., London.

Mr. John Dacosta, who has frequently written on Indian subjects, brings out a volume entitled A Scientific Frontier (W. H. Allen & Co.), in which the arguments for and against the Indian Frontier Policy, known by that name, are reviewed in the light of the principal events of the last fifty years. The writer premises that those events have not received from the general public the careful attention which they deserve. He, therefore, quotes largely from books and official documents in which they are recorded, and urges that the time has come when the important question as to the best way of protecting India against a Russian invasion should be withdrawn from the sphere of party politics, and settled upon the safer basis of acknowledged principles and experience.

A MODEST MEZZORAMIAN.

To the Editor of Allen's Indian Mail.

Sir,

With reference to the following letter, signed "Mezzoramian," which appeared in the St. James's Gazette, can any of your readers—some of whom are doubtless familiar with Eastern dialects—say who is the "greatest living linguist; in fact, a second Mezzofanti," who "speaks, reads, and writes twenty-five languages"? Is the language of self-assertion one of these latter?—I am, &c.,

"WOMEN OF THE DAY; BY THEMSELVES."

To the Editor of the St. James's Gazette.

Sir,

Having read most of the biographical notices of ladies in the thirteenth edition, just published, of Men and Women of the Time, I feel compelled to protest that the article in the St. James's Gazette of the 2nd inst. headed "Women of the Day, by Themselves" is a bit rough on them. Sufficient allowance is not made for this being their first appearance in Mr. Washington Moon's useful volume; and a little disorderly flutter on their part was, therefore, to be expected. But, this apart, an impartial survey of its pages will show that for gushing conceit of themselves, and unblushing effrontery in the expression of it, the men of "the Time" are more than a match for the women—that is to say, if these notices of contemporary celebrities are autobiographical. I will not multiply quotations, for the one I give is of itself more than sufficient to prove my point. Not of an excitable woman, but of a sedate man with nearly a dozen letters after his name, do I read that he is "probably the greatest living linguist; in fact, a second Mezzofanti—speaks, reads, and writes twenty-five languages."

Turning to an earlier page I find the name of a still greater linguist, of whom it is recorded that "he is well known as . . . having acquired the knowledge of a hundred languages." But this distinguished linguist and philologist lays no claim, or allows none to be advanced for him, as "the greatest living linguist—in fact, a second Mezzofanti." Surely it would be difficult for the most "unlesson'd girl, unschool'd, unpractis'd," to outgush this—"in fact, a second Mezzofanti"!—I am, Sir, your obedient Servant,

April 6. Mezzoramian.

THE MURDERS AT MANIPUR.

THE confirmation of the rumour that Mr. Quinton and his comrades had been murdered at Manipur is a sad blow to the hope which has been current throughout England, that the captives would be kept as prisoners only, to enable the Manipur ruler who instigated their arrest to make better terms with the British, whom he knew would be certain to return in force to the scene of the disaster. There were good grounds for such hope, for the ruler and his Kuki irregulars are not savages altogether ignorant of British power or of British ways of following up an insult or an attack. Besides the lesson of the Mutiny, which every native on plains or hills of the Indian continent to its extremest frontier knew, the turbulent tribes at all points have since then been taught other important lessons, and so it was only natural to think that the British captives at Manipur would be held simply as hostages for ransom or favourable arrangement. The telegraphic reports received in London to-day leave little doubt concerning the fate of the British party. Mr. Quinton and his comrades have been butchered in cold blood, and the foulest atrocities have been wreaked on their mangled remains. According to one statement, their limbs were torn from their bodies and thrown to the pariah dogs without the city gates. Only two officers were slain in action with the enemy, and their corpses were also mutilated. Of course, this wreaking of vengeance on the insensate dead reads terribly shocking to Englishmen who have had no experience of savage ways of battle; but British officers and soldiers who have had any acquaintance with Oriental warfare will not be surprised at the tale of atrocity. It is not this which will shock them so much as the treachery which led to the crime. We have yet to learn full details of how the "parleying" of Mr. Quinton with the enemy came about without the military officers taking precautions against a surprise, for when "parleying" with an Oriental savage foe treachery may always be suspected. The Times says that "the lives of all the instigators and of all the chief actors in the tragedy are justly forfeited, and that the countrymen of the murdered men will see that the forfeit is rigidly exacted. Large rewards have been offered for the arrest of the Jubraj, his brother, and their chief accomplices, and there is every hope that they will very soon be called upon to answer for their acts." Certainly this should be so; but then it is added: "They will have a fair trial and every possible opportunity of disproving the charges against them; and if the charges are brought home, assuredly an exemplary vengeance will be taken." It is difficult to understand why these persons should have the benefit of the doubt which the word "if" implies, for, so far as the published telegrams go, their treachery and guilt are clearly enough made out for the condign punishment to be awarded by a court summoned together when the troops now converging on Manipur arrive and have the culprits in their power. If the course is taken of sending the accused for a formal trial at Rangoon or Calcutta, where they would be defended by trained lawyers, directing a mixed jury, and using all the arts and quibbles of English forensic knowledge to secure acquittal, the effect will not certainly be a help to British prestige and power in any future dealings with similar foes. It may seem an unpleasing paradox to many purists at home to say that in India it is sometimes wrong to be "over just." There are times when it is not expedient, or for the good of certain classes, to be so, and those Englishmen who have been in India and can read between these lines, will have no difficulty in comprehending our meaning. Those who may feel shocked at the paradox may be reminded of a very similar one put forward by King Solomon when he condemned "over-righteousness." In India it does not do to show hesitancy, even under the seeming guise of justice, to an enemy, who is certain to mistake the honourable feeling for one of weakness. To the Oriental foe, who commits a crime such as those enacted at Manipur, punishment should come quickly, sharply and decisively.

As to the future destiny of the Manipur State itself, which the Times considers a wider question, to be judged dispassionately and not decided under the guidance of strong feeling, the matter may be left with the Government of India to settle. If the feelings of the planters and other British subjects near that State be allowed to have any weight in the matter, it is not difficult to guess what the verdict would be. Of course the cry of "annexation" would be raised for condemnation in certain quarters here. But if we are to have an end in India of these constant frontier troubles, which have cost not only millions of money but heavy losses in valuable lives of our fellow-countrymen, sacrificed in the inglorious "little" wars they have entailed upon the Governments of India, some more satisfactory policy of dealing with frontier tribes ought to be instituted than that which has hitherto found favour with the local and supreme Governments.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY, APRIL 10.

THE OPIUM TRAFFIC DEBATE.

At the evening sitting, on the order for Supply,

Sir JOSEPH PEASE moved an amendment condemning the opium traffic which is carried on between India and China. Earlier in the sitting he and a number of his friends had anticipated their annual "field night" by presenting petitions from various quarters against the opium trade, one of them being signed by 4,000 persons of thirty nationalities in India and Burma. Sir Joseph Pease asked the House to declare its opinion that the system by which the Indian opium revenue is raised is morally indefensible. Furthermore, he urged upon the Government of India not only to cease the granting of licences for the cultivation of the poppy and the sale of opium in British India, except for legitimate medical purposes, but to take measures to arrest the transit of Malwa opium through British territory. The traffic, he argued in a long speech, is far more injurious than that of the most ardent spirits, and he even went the length of declaring that for greed of gain the Indian Government, with the sanction of the authorities at home, has sacrificed every principle of political economy, morality, and Christianity.

Mr. MARK STEWART, speaking in support of the resolution, was in favour of the sale of opium in India being regulated by provisions similar to those in force in the United Kingdom under the Pharmacy Acts.

Dr. FARQUHARSON, on the other hand, made an amusing but forcible and closely reasoned speech against the resolution. He expressed his belief that the statements upon which Sir Joseph Pease relied were founded to a considerable extent on misapprehension. There was no greater delusion than to suppose that opium had been forced by this country upon China. Successive Viceroys of India, among them Lord Ripon, and other high officials, had placed it on record that India would be bankrupt if the opium revenue was withdrawn. As to the medical aspect of the question, he maintained that opium, taken in small doses, as was the case in tropical countries, was in a high degree a tonic and a restorative.

Sir JAMES FERGUSSON, replying for the Government, put a few "posers" to Sir Joseph Pease. The gross revenue from opium in India, he pointed out, is Rs. 8,300,000—that is to say, about one-fifth of the gross revenue of the country. How, he asked, was it proposed to replace it? It was difficult to find a new item of taxation in India without seriously interfering with the prosperity of the people. How could they hope to reduce the salt tax if they were suddenly to deprive the Government of India of such a large amount of revenue?

In the course of subsequent discussion Mr. SAMUEL SMITH spoke in favour of the amendment, which was sharply criticised by Sir RICHARD TEMPLE and Mr. M. CAMERON.

Mr. W. H. SMITH, briefly winding up the debate, reiterated Sir James Fergusson's statement that the desire of the Government is to diminish the cultivation and consumption of opium. This policy, he said, it has pursued for some years, and intends to persevere with; but it is impossible to accept a resolution couched in such language unless the House of Commons is prepared to make good to the revenues of India the enormous sum of which they would be suddenly deprived.

A division was taken, when, amid loud Opposition cheering and a cry of "Resign!" from Mr. Conybeare, the Government motion for Supply was defeated by 160 votes against 130.

MONDAY, APRIL 13.

Mr. M. CAMERON asked the First Lord of the Treasury the following question:—"Whether, in view of the result of the vote of last Friday night on the opium traffic in India, and the strong feeling which that vote manifested against the traffic, both in the House and the country, he is prepared to give effect to my proposal for the appointment of a Royal Commission to inquire into the whole subject, and thereby furnish to this House authentic data which will guide its legislative action."

Mr. W. H. SMITH said, from his point of view, the debate was incomplete. The hon. baronet, the member for the Barnard Castle Division, had, he understood, expressed his willingness to accept the proposed addition to his resolution, but on that proposed addendum the debate stood adjourned. He hardly knew whether it was practicable now to take a decision on the whole question in the form in which it would stand if the addendum were made to the resolution. Certainly the Government felt that the House had not expressed its opinion on the whole question, and it would be premature for the Government to make any communication of their intentions until the question was disposed of in its entirety.

The MARQUIS of HARTINGTON said he desired to ask the Speaker what was the exact position in which the question stood. He said that the motion with the proposed addendum still remained on the paper attached to the 16th Order of the Day, but he presumed that if that order were reached to-night the debate could not be continued. Would the motion remain on the Order Book, and if so, in what form and in what manner would it be possible for the House, if it desired to do so, to resume the discussion on the motion and the proposed amendment?

The SPEAKER.—In reply to the noble lord I will state the exact position in which the matter stands. Upon the question that I now leave the chair which was submitted to the House last Friday, the hon. baronet the member for the Barnard Castle Division, moved an amendment. On a division all the words of the motion that I now leave the chair were negatived, except the first word, "that"; the words of the motion of the hon. baronet were added, and his motion then became the substantive question. To that motion an amendment was moved by the right hon. baronet the member for the City, and by the lapse of time the debate on the addition to the motion became an adjourned debate. It will therefore be observed that the House passed no definite decision either on the first amendment as a substantive question, or upon the amendment which was moved as an addition to the substantive question, in consequence of the lapse of time. On coming to the order I shall have again to propose the question—the substantive resolution and the amendment that has been moved to it—and, if the amendment be carried, I shall have to put the whole resolution with the addendum attached to it; and then the House will express its opinion upon the substantive motion amended by the addendum, or, if the addition of the words be negatived, on the motion alone. If Supply is taken on Monday or on Thursday I am obliged to leave the chair without question put, and therefore I should not be able to propose the question on the resolution of the hon. baronet the member for Barnard Castle. If I am asked what I should do on Friday next I must reply that I should then have to put, not the question of the hon. member for Barnard Castle, but the question that I do now leave the chair, upon which the amendments on the paper specially put down for Friday would take precedence of any other amendment. Therefore I know not what would become of the amendment to the motion of the hon. member for Barnard Castle on Friday next. But it would, of course, be open to the Government to offer facilities for treating the subject on motion by giving that motion a place among the orders of the day on a Government night. That lies altogether in the discretion of the Government. I do not think any other question arises which I am called upon to answer.

Sir J. PEASE asked the First Lord of the Treasury whether he proposed to make the resolution an order of the day. He was quite prepared to accept the amendment of his hon. friend and relative the member for the City, but not his exact words. He read the words he was willing to accept as an addition to his resolution.

Mr. J. MACLEAN begged to ask whether the Government intended to take the amendment of the hon. member for the City, and to place this unjust and impossible burden on India.

Mr. W. H. SMITH.—The question has now assumed an altogether new character, and I am not prepared to state to the House whether the Government are prepared to adopt the motion of the hon. member as an order of the day. But I may state generally our view—that the question does require much further consideration before it is accepted by this House. On a future day I will state whether we can offer facilities to the hon. member for bringing the question on.

THE Khan of Dir seems unable to collect another force to again attack Umra Khan; but he is hospitably entertained in Swat apparently, where the people, it is said, intend to allow him a tenth part of the revenues of the country. How this arrangement will be regarded by Umra Khan remains to be seen, writes the Lahore paper, for that zabardast person has more than once warned the men of Swat that they will give shelter to the refugee Khan of Dir at their peril.

THE connection of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway with the Jubbulpore extension of the East Indian line has resulted, the Pioneer says, in an extraordinary development of trade between the Central Provinces and the North-West Provinces and Oudh. It appears that there is a good demand in the north for certain kinds of rice grown in the once land-locked districts about Raipore and Bilaspore, and now that the latter have been tapped the grain is already being exported in very large quantities. The traffic revenue on the Bilaspore-Kutni line is said to have reached a lakh a week, and this at a time when there is no scarcity of food in Upper India. If unhappily, there should ever be a famine in these Provinces and Oudh, the Chhattisgarh plain will be able to furnish by a direct route ample supplies for all the people affected. With this new source of supply opened out scarcity should be kept at arm's length, even in the most densely populated districts under Sir Auckland Colvin's rule. Similar results should also follow in Behar, as Chhattisgarh is linked direct with the East India Railway at Assensole, whence the waggons containing food-grain can be run in a few hours to Mokameh, Patna, and Bankipore. The new line, which the Viceroy opened last week, will undoubtedly prove of the first importance as an agency for the distribution of the produce of the country, apart from its claims to attention as a great commercial project promoted by private enterprise.

THE BENGAL-NAGPUR RAILWAY.

THE account of the inauguration of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway concludes a chapter in railway history of which we have presented instalments at intervals for some years past. The Viceroy's definition of the attitude of the Government towards railway undertakings was apparently meant to clear up a misunderstanding. The resolution was come to long since not to form any new guaranteed companies, and it is possible that the fact of the East Coast Railway being constructed as a State undertaking, coupled with certain vague rumours as to the policy of Sir Charles Elliott when he was Public Works Member of Council, has led to the belief that Government are inimical to the employment of companies for the purpose of railway construction. It is satisfactory to receive from the Viceroy an emphatic repudiation of that idea. We cannot argue from the view of the Government in regard to the working of railways, what their view is in regard to the means of constructing them. But if they had been so hostile to the intervention of companies for the one purpose they would scarcely have favoured it as systematically as they have done for the other. When the East Indian was bought by Government, it was left to the company to work, and the same course was followed the other day when the Government of India, having become tired of paying their guarantee on the South Indian line, bought the undertaking on the understanding that a company should be formed to work it. A similar trust in company management was shown when six years ago the Rajputana line was handed over to the control of the Baroda Railway Company, with results which have not led Government to repent of their bargain. The prospects of private enterprise in railway construction are not to be estimated solely by the fact that the railway undertakings of India do not as a whole pay the interest that is guaranteed on them. The deficit last year was in round numbers a crore and thirteen lakhs, but of this nearly a crore was lost on military railways, which private companies would, of course, never be asked to construct. Even including the unproductive outlay on these lines the railways earned last year over four and three-quarter per cent. upon their capital, so that if the whole of the Government guarantee had been at current rates of interest the railway venture of the State in India would have been a source of profit rather than of loss. Lord Lansdowne's repudiation of the misconception that has prevailed concerning the place of private companies in railway enterprise will do good, as there should be some reason to hope that after the money market at home has had a full experience of the "African Circus" and of "Argentines" a disposition will show itself to try whether India will not provide a sufficiently tempting return to English capital.—Bombay Gazette.

W. H. ALLEN & CO.'S LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY.

Demy 8vo. With Illustrations and Maps. 12s. 6d.

REPORT ON THE OLD RECORDS OF THE INDIA OFFICE.

WITH SUPPLEMENTARY NOTES AND APPENDICES.

By SIR GEORGE BIRDWOOD, M.D., K.C.I.E., C.S.I., LL.D. SECOND REPRINT.

Medium 8vo. With numerous full page and other Illustrations by J. E. Rogers. 12s 6d.

IN TROUBADOUR LAND: a Ramble in Provence and Languedoc. By S. Baring-Gould, M.A., Author of "Mehalah," "John Herring," &c.

"The title of Mr. Baring-Gould's book only indicates one of the many points of interest which will attract the intelligent traveller during a tour in Provence and Languedoc. Besides troubadours, there are reminiscences of Greek colonization and Roman Empire, of the Middle Ages, and of the Revolution. . . . The illustrations which adorn the pages of this very readable volume are decidedly above the average. The arm-chair traveller will not easily find a pleasanter compagnon de voyage."—St. James's Gazette.

"A most charming book, brightly written, and profusely illustrated with exquisite engravings."—Glasgow Herald.

"Mr. Baring-Gould is a genuine humourist, a keen observer, and an acute reader of character. The book he has produced has much of the 'Mark Twain' spirit, and more than a touch of Thackerayan satire. . . . There is hardly a dull page in the book, and Mr. Rogers's pictures will make the places described very real to those who have not yet visited them."—Manchester Examiner.

"A charming book, full of wit and fancy and information, and worthy of its subject."—Scotsman.

Two vols. Crown 8vo. With Portrait. 12s.

MEMOIRS OF ALEXANDRE DUMAS (Pere). Being Selections from the First Five Volumes of "Mes Memoires." Selected and Translated by A. F. Davidson.

"The reader turns over page after page, as if he were perusing for the first time 'The Three Musketeers' or 'Monte Cristo.'"—Globe.

"No one could write 'about it and about it' better than the author of 'Monte Cristo' and 'Le Vicomte Bragelonne'; and he has perhaps never done it so well as in 'Mes Memoires.' There was no great difficulty, then, in making such judicious selections from these two volumes as would have all the seeming of a continuous narrative. This Mr. Davidson has done, and done very skilfully, and his translation is fluent and natural."—World.

"Nobody taking up these volumes will have a single dull page to skip from beginning to end."—Glasgow Herald.

"A book of decided charm."—Guardian.

"Absorbingly interesting, full of Dumas' ebullient enjoyment of life. . . . Mr. Davidson has made his extracts with skill and judgment, and he has translated them fluently and idiomatically."—St. James's Gazette.

Medium 8vo. With numerous Illustrations from Sketches by the Author. 18s.

BY TRACK AND TRAIL: a Journey through Canada. By Edward Roper, F.R.G.S.

"Unassumingly instructive, written in a cheerful spirit, and uniformly readable. There is a sprinkling of sport, a good deal of interesting information about Indian aborigines and Chinese colonists."—Daily Telegraph.

"The book is written in a light picturesque style, and is one of the most entertaining records of travel recently published."—Glasgow Herald.

Demy 8vo. With Portrait and Preface by Sir Monier Monier-Williams. 15s.

FIFTY YEARS IN CEYLON: an Autobiography. By Major Thomas Skinner, C.M.G., Commissioner of Public Works, Ceylon. Edited by his Daughter, Annie Skinner.

"The colony of Ceylon never had a more faithful servant than Major Skinner. The memory of his sterling character and of the benefits which he conferred upon the colony is still green among both natives and Europeans. On the road, in barracks, or at the dinner-table, camping on Adam's Peak, or hunting wild elephants in the Ceylon forests, he is a capital companion, and full of good feeling and information. . . . The most expressive memorial of the man, however, is this autobiography, written with refreshing vigour, candour, and geniality."—Scotsman.

"To all lovers of genuine manhood, to all who delight in the record of how work worth doing was ably done, to the many who are true sportsmen, and to those who take pleasure in reading the records of a life lived to a noble end, we can recommend this book."—Dublin Evening Mail.

"We can confidently recommend this book, not only to those who are acquainted with our lovely Indian island, but also to the general reader, as an interesting record of an honourable life."—Broad Arrow.

Demy 8vo. With Illustrations drawn and engraved by Japanese Artists. 5s.

JAPANESE PLAYS (Versified). By the late Thomas R. H. McClatchie. Edited by his Brother, Ernest S. McClatchie.

"There is certainly freshness and novelty in these Japanese plays. The text is amusingly illustrated with drawings by Japanese artists."—Graphic.

"The illustrations, with which the letterpress is relieved, are by native draughtsmen, and add largely to the undoubted attractions of the book, which, from the first page to the last, has a delightfully Oriental flavour, and is full of vivacity and freshness."—Pictorial World.

"Praise without stint can be bestowed upon the printing, paper, pictures, and general 'get-up' of the dainty volume which Messrs. Allen have laid before the public; and it may be added that the late Mr. McClatchie, in showing to the benighted Western world the kind of dramatic work which wrings 'tears, cheers, and laughter' from Japanese audiences, has performed a meritorious act."—Vanity Fair.

One vol. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d. SECOND EDITION.

THE

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other Service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week, written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

The Calcutta Review.

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storms of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, APRIL 21, 1891.

General Intelligence.

[By Overland Mail.]

The Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 4th April; from N.W.P. and Madras to the 2nd April; and from Bengal to the 1st April.

The Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne arrived at Simla March 31. The arrival was private, but the usual salute was fired.

H.E. the Viceroy on the 26th ult. unveiled a portrait of Sir Alfred Lyall in the Muir College, Allahabad. The Viceroy, in reply to the address, dwelt at large on Sir Alfred's conspicuous success as an administrator, student, and literary genius.

H.E. the Viceroy opened the Allahabad Water Works on the 26th ult., in the presence of an exceedingly large assemblage of all classes of the community. In a short and well-delivered speech His Excellency dwelt on the great advantages of water-supply as connected with sanitation, and dealt out praise to those who had taken part in promoting the construction of the particular works which he was about to open.

The Viceroy opened the new section of the Rohilkhund-Kumaon Railway between Gola Gokarnath and Pilibhit on March 28. The section is fifty-five miles in length, and secures through communication between Lucknow and Bareilly.

In his speech at the inaugural ceremony, Lord Lansdowne pointed out the advantages the new section would confer in bringing the sub-Himalayan tracts into direct railway communication with the rest of the united provinces as a region capable both of greatly extended cultivation and of yielding large timber supplies.

The Commander-in-Chief of India, with Lady Roberts and family, arrived at Simla from Bombay on the 26th ultimo.

Lord Harris is now on a tour in the Southern Mahratta country.

The "preliminary" complete returns of the recent Census operations show that the population in British territory is 220,400,000, as against 198,655,600 in the former Census—an increase of nearly 22,000,000.

The Feudatory States, omitting incomplete returns, which may be taken at about four and a half millions, have a population of 61,410,000, making a total of 281,900,000, as against 250,700,000 for the same areas at the last Census.

The Census returns give Bombay 806,000, Madras 449,000, Calcutta Municipal area and port 674,000, including the Suburbs, Howrah, and Bally, 969,000. At the last Census the total for the same area was 847,000. Calcutta Municipal area shows an increase of 92,000, and Howrah and Bally an increase of 24,000.

The Census Returns from Burma show that the population of the whole country, excluding the Shan States, is 7,507,063, or 48·8 persons to the square mile. The population of Lower Burma alone is 4,526,432, or an increase of about 790,000 since 1881.

The experiment of the payment of Land Revenue by money-orders, which was begun on a small scale in the Division of Burdwan in 1886, and extended to the Rajshahye Presidency and Dacca Divisions last year, has proved a complete success. The system is now ordered to be extended to all parts of Bengal in which the Tenancy Act of 1885 is in force, from July 1.

The trial of the prisoners charged with being concerned in the dacoity committed at Nagaria, a village in the Muttra district bordering on Bhurtpore territory, has at last ended. The Judge of Agra passed sentence upon them on Tuesday while holding sessions at Muttra. Out of twenty-one prisoners three only were acquitted; the remainder, including one woman, were sentenced to transportation and various terms of imprisonment. One of the ringleaders turned Queen's evidence, and thus brought about the conviction of the gang.

The Municipal Committee of Lucknow are busily engaged in discussing the introduction of a system of water-works similar to that at Agra, Allahabad and Benares. The artesian well experiment, after a cost of nearly a lakh of rupees, is to be given up.

After a long delay, the civil suit brought by Captain Hearsey against the Pioneer for libel has been settled out of Court, the defendants paying a solatium of Rs. 10,000, and Rs. 1,000 for costs.

332,191 cwt. of wheat, worth Rs. 13,65,174, were shipped from ports in Sindh during last month.

NOTES.

ALL the important news from India by Overland Mail has already been forestalled by the telegrams from the Times correspondents and Reuter's agency. Although accounts of the Manipur outbreak are in all the Indian papers, the details are not so full or so correct as those which have already been received here by wire. The sad fate of Mr. Quinton and the other prisoners was not known for certain when the mail of April 4 left Bombay, and naturally the hope and belief generally expressed throughout the press were to the effect that their lives would not be sacrificed. This belief was strengthened by a report which had reached Calcutta that the prisoners were being treated with every consideration by the Rajah of Manipur, but that he demanded a heavy ransom for their release.

COMMENTING on the information it then possessed, the Times of India says:—"Although the first apprehensions of disaster appear to have been exaggerated, Mr. Quinton and his officers appear by all accounts to be held as hostages by the Rajah, who seems to be under the impression that he can hold them to ransom, and make his own terms. As a matter of fact, that is, of course, exactly what he can do. The Expedition has been caught in a cleft stick, and the usurping Rajah is master of the situation. It is tolerably certain in the circumstances that he will not offer the party any violence. He knows perfectly well that if he did vengeance would be speedy and sure, while, on the other hand, he has everything to gain by treating his prisoners well. The great mystery of the matter is how Mr. Quinton's party came to be taken at all. The Manipur 'army' has degenerated into an almost untrained body of badly-armed men, commanded by still worse officers, and Mr. Quinton had with him 450 Goorkhas and a body of frontier police."

IT certainly has yet to be explained how the British force suffered itself to be so ignominiously defeated, and this has evidently been a matter of surprise to the press in India as to the press here. The Englishman says that the Goorkha regiment which Mr. Quinton had with him was one of the best in the Province. "The mystery that will have to be explained is how they were allowed to run out of ammunition. A force of 450 armed and efficient troops is by no means insignificant. Each man probably carried forty rounds of ammunition, and before that amount could be expended the power of resistance of a Manipuri force ought to have been severely tried.

ANOTHER contemporary explains the composition and condition of the Manipuri troops:—"The present Manipur army had its origin in the old Manipur levy, a body of 500 men raised by Raja Gambir Singh in 1824, during the Burmese war. It was armed and paid by the British Government, and did good service in 1825. Since that time the efficiency of the troops has considerably deteriorated. Service may be said to be hereditary, descending from father to son, so that the army increases with the population, and in 1884 it numbered about 7,000, including 700 irregulars. They are all infantry, except about 500 artillerymen, who have charge of eight 3-pounder brass field-guns, which are quite useless. The once-celebrated Manipur cavalry, who served brilliantly in the first Burmese war, has practically disappeared, though a body of 400 still nominally exists. The infantry are of good physique, and capable of bearing great fatigue, patient, willing, and obedient. They are always ready to march, carrying their own provisions, building their huts, and, if necessary, entrenching themselves. About half the infantry is armed with smooth-bore muskets, and the officers are, as might be supposed, very incompetent."

No calm-minded Englishman in the face of a disaster, however great, shrieks out for "vengeance," and it is to be hoped that an English Government can keep itself as much under restraint as an individual Englishman. But a London daily contemporary does not appear to be of this opinion. The Chronicle, commenting on Sir John Gorst's replies in the House to Colonel Nolan's questions about the news from Manipur, thinks that the gallant Colonel should have moved the adjournment of the House in order that some kind of warning should have been sent to the Government of India as to how it is to deal with the treacherous Manipuri murderers. "The Government" (i.e. the Government here) "will be wise if it promptly lets the rulers at Simla know that the eye of England is very much on them and their expeditions at present, and that any unduly vindictive proceedings will arouse indignation throughout the realm." Nobody in India wants "vindictive" proceedings; and this "cant of clemency" is uncalled for here.

THE same journal takes, however, a very gloomy view of the situation in India generally:—"As regards India herself, the news deepens in gravity. A famine is looming large in the Madras Presidency, which has an evil repute for such visitations. In the district of North Arcot, the population of which considerably exceeds two millions of souls, of whom ninety-four per cent. are Hindus, and the average agricultural holding in which does not exceed fifty shillings a year in value, starvation already stares the people in the face. The Administration must move, and that rapidly, if there are not to be repetitions of the truly terrible scenes when the drought struck the land in 1866, and again ten years later."

As regards this question of famine, an Indian paper, better informed than the London one, justly says:—"It is the hard fate of the British Government in this country to have its good work made the ground of railing accusation. Every effort is made to prevent pestilence and protect life, and when in consequence the mouths to be fed increase so rapidly that the total food available is insufficient, the Government is maligned. There is an immense population living on the margin of starvation, raised, it may be, slightly above it in seasons of plenty and depressed beneath it in seasons of scarcity; but they have always found an easy and congenial explanation in attributing the deplorable fact to the iniquities of British rule. Would it not be more reasonable to find the cause in the fatal proneness of Eastern peoples to breed up to the very limit of subsistence; a habit the evil effects of which must become more and more visible in proportion as the administration improves, and the natural checks on population are minimised?"

COMPARISONS are always "odious" things, and the Standard surely might have remembered this when it went out of its way the other morning to compare the capture of Thobal with the defence of Rorke's Drift. Major-General Swanson did not make matters better by expressing his opinion that the action of Lieutenant Grant deserved more praise than that of Chard and Bromhead, because the latter were fighting with English troops, and

Lieutenant Grant had no Europeans with him. This is neither wise as an opinion nor in the best of taste. Both actions were good and gallant deeds, and they can stand together in fame's record without argument as to their respective merits.

The Civil and Military Gazette is informed that when the Government informed the Ameer of the retirement of the British Agent, Colonel Atta-ullah Khan, and of the appointment of Sirdar Muhammad Afzal Khan in his place, as also of the intention of Government to retain the services of some of the existing staff of the Agency, the Ameer told the British Agent to take away with him to Peshawur the entire personnel of his Agency, and ask the new Agent to bring an entirely new staff! If this is correct, the Ameer has a very queer opinion of his position. The announcement to him of the intention of Government with regard to the Agency staff was a purely formal proceeding; and if the facts are as stated, the Ameer's reply savours of arrogance not far removed from hostility. The subject-matter is not one of great importance, but even in small matters the Foreign Office will not likely submit to be brow-beaten by an "ally" who is in receipt of a yearly subsidy from the Government.

As a commentary on the passing of the Factories Bill, the Englishman hears that land is being taken up within the limits of the French settlement of Chandernagore for a jute or cotton mill. This will lead to an entirely fresh and unforeseen development of the situation. Mills on the Hoogly, within British territory, which will have to work under the cramping conditions of the new Act, will be confronted with the opposition of the Chandernagore mill, about two miles distant—a mill absolutely free alike from Factory Act and Income Tax. Moreover, the manufactures of a French colony are doubtless free from import duty in France, so that the projected enterprise ought to have no difficulty in securing a monopoly of the French trade. It would thus seem that one effect of recent Indian legislation will be to drive capital out of British territory, and to call into existence a new and formidable danger to our trade, the full extent of which it is as yet impossible to foresee. If the Chandernagore enterprise is successfully established, a probable result may be to force other mills to migrate into French territory.

THE DISASTER IN MANIPUR.

Calcutta, April 19.

The advance of the Kohima column, originally fixed for the 17th, has been postponed to the 20th, to enable the three columns to reach Manipur simultaneously. The fate of the prisoners being unhappily beyond a doubt, there is no longer any urgent reason for haste, and it is deemed advisable that the three forces should close round Manipur together, so as the more effectually to cut off all chance of retreat.

Some further accounts of the events of March 24 have been published. Captain Boileau's official report states that the object of the march was kept a profound secret from the military officers. On the 22nd the Jubraj met the party a few miles from Manipur, and appeared to be friendly. He failed, however, to attend the durbar as ordered on the 23rd, and that evening Manipuri troops marched into the Palace. Colonel Skene expressed the opinion that, although his force was insufficient to hold the Residency against a strong attack, there was a good chance of the success of bold offensive measures. Accordingly a detachment was sent next morning to surround the Jubraj's Palace. About midday the Manipuris attacked the Residency, and the detachments then were recalled. The high wall of the Palace, surrounded by a deep moat, made it impossible to rush the guns, which were playing with deadly effect, and Mr. Quinton, finding the place not tenable, made an effort to open negotiations, which resulted in his treacherous seizure.

The narrative of another survivor corresponds in the main with Captain Boileau's, adding some details, as that Lieutenant Brackenbury received six bullet wounds, and that the Manipuri officer sent to invite Mr. Quinton to meet the Maharajah swore that no harm should befall, saying, "Are you not our God?"

The party of seven British officers, with Mrs. Grimwood and 150 men, had several exciting adventures after leaving the Residency. On the 25th they met and were threatened by some armed parties, but were eventually allowed to pass, and suffered only from fatigue and want of food. On the morning of the 26th they surprised a picket of ten Manipuris, whose food they seized. A little later they came to an empty stockade, which turned out to be intended for the reception of Captain Cowley's men. There they waited till Captain Cowley's arrival. The remainder of the retreat was less eventful.

Mr. Williams, the telegraphic signaller, the only European who escaped after being captured, gives an interesting account of his adventures. He had been left at Sengmai, and when he heard of the events in the capital he attempted to make his way to Kohima. After several hairbreadth escapes he was seized and taken to Manipur, flung into prison, and ironed. On the 3rd the Jubraj sent for him, said that he himself had not known of his being in prison till that day, ordered the irons to be removed, and sent him, with a sepoy and bugler, prisoners like Williams, to negotiate with Colonel Howlett, who was holding the fort at Thobal. Colonel Howlett refused to withdraw unless the Manipuris released all prisoners and gave hostages. The negotiations were then broken off, and on the following day Williams with the other prisoners were released and sent to Kohima. He adds that the Jubraj said to him before going:—

"The British Government will get my corpse, perhaps, but never me alive."

There is some confusion of names in this narrative, as Colonel Howlett, commanding the 12th Burmah Regiment, never advanced beyond Tamu. The explanation accepted by the military department is that Lieutenant Grant, while making his gallant defence with his little body of 80 men at Thobal, tried to intimidate the enemy by representing himself as a colonel with a regiment at his back.

There is no definite news as yet of the time and manner of the death of Mr. Quinton and his companions, but it is believed they fell on the night of the 24th, while resisting capture. It is ascertained, however, that Mr. Melville and the signaller, Mr. O'Brien, of the telegraphic department, were seized some miles from Manipur and beheaded.

A rumour was current early last week that the Nagas were showing signs of excitement. This is not confirmed, but seems probable. Prompt steps have been taken by the Kohima authorities, and the force now collected there will check any disposition to rise, if it ever existed.

Rangoon, April 19.

Sir C. Leslie's force is still at Palel.

Mr. Ward will leave Rangoon on May 2 to assume the Chief Commissionership of Assam. Lord Lansdowne's selection of Mr. Ward for this post, which he has already twice successfully filled, and which at present involves an unusual responsibility, is an excellent one.

While a full measure of just retribution ought to be dealt out to all concerned in the atrocities and massacre at Manipur, it is of great importance that exceptional and indiscriminate punishments should not be inflicted on the Manipuris. Mr. Ward throughout his career has shown that, while he possessed great firmness, he was always anxious to act in a merciful spirit.

"From Viceroy, April 18, 1891.

"Report received from Gurdon, Assistant Commissioner, who was with Quinton in Manipur. Quinton was received with all honour in Manipur territory, but Regent's brothers all failed to attend Durbar at noon on March 22, under the plea of illness, though Senapatti had met Quinton the same morning. A second Durbar was fixed for 9 a.m. on 23rd, but no one came. Grimwood visited the palace without result, and Quinton then sent a written ultimatum to the Regent, warning him that unless the Senapatti was surrendered he would be arrested. Grimwood delivered this in the afternoon of the 23rd, and told the Regent that his recognition as Maharaja depended on the Senapatti's surrender. The Regent was apparently afraid of Senapatti and would not agree. Shortly before daybreak on the 24th a force was sent to arrest Senapatti in his house. They were received with a heavy fire, and obtained possession of the house after a severe struggle, but found the Senapatti had left. At 10 the Residency was attacked. In the evening, during a truce, while Quinton was negotiating with the Regent, Senapatti sent a messenger inviting Quinton to meet him. After some hesitation Quinton, on the advice of Grimwood, went to the main gate. The party had no escort or arms. After a parley on bridge, they entered the gate. The officers in the Residency knew no more until suddenly attacked about midnight. Till then all was quiet. As rescue was impossible, owing to the number and position of the enemy, and as our ammunition was running short, it was decided to retire towards Cachar."

CALCUTTA, APRIL 15.

A column about one thousand strong leaves Kohima on Friday, and is expected to reach Manipur on the 24th inst.

It is stated that the Manipuris are fortifying Kaitimabi and Sengmai, and are preparing for resistance under the Senaputty, the report of whose death is still unconfirmed.

In various parts of Assam numerous meetings of natives and Europeans have been held, at which resolutions were passed of regret for the death of Mr. Quinton and sympathy with his family.

After the three columns have met at Manipur a court of inquiry will be held for the trial of the Jubraj and others who were concerned in the recent outrage. All those who are convicted will be hanged, and the villages which resist will be fired. Rewards will be offered for any ringleaders who may escape, and generally the course will be similar to that taken at Cabul after the murder of Major Cavagnari.

It is believed that either Sir John Ware Edgar, Chief Secretary to the Bengal Government, or Mr. Ward, Judicial Commissioner of Burmah, will succeed Mr. Quinton, but the appointment will not be made till after the inquiry.

CALCUTTA, APRIL 15.

A telegram from Kohima states that the Goorkha prisoners released by the Rajah seem to be agreed in asserting that in the attack on the Palace some women and children, relatives of the Jubraj, were killed, probably accidentally. This may possibly account for the subsequent atrocities committed by the Manipuris.

The Maharajah of Kapurthala has made an offer of 1,000 troops for service on the Manipur frontier. Cholera has broken out in the 3rd Bengal Regiment, which will be placed for a time in quarantine before being permitted to move forward.—Reuter.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, APRIL 19.

The Miranzai field force under Sir William Lockhart advanced on Friday, and after a sharp fight captured some outposts, and cleared the Samana ridge as far as Sangar. Colonel Cramer, of the 60th Rifles, and Major Egerton, Assistant Adjutant-General, were severely wounded, one Sepoy was killed, five men of the Rifles and two Sepoys were wounded. Fighting was resumed yesterday. The Akhels and Narnozais have joined the Miranzais.

The riot at Benares last week, which threatened to become serious, appears to be effectually put down. It seems that religious feelings were not the sole cause. It is true that a Hindoo temple has been acquired by the municipality for the purpose of erecting on its site a pumping station for new waterworks, and that the more bigoted Hindoos strongly objected to its destruction. But they were joined by a large number of Mahomedan weavers and others, whose grievance was a more practical one—namely, the present dearness of provisions, for which they held the municipality responsible, and the houses of two prominent Hindoo members were attacked. Telegraphic communication is now restored, 500 rioters have been arrested, and the city is reported quiet. But the incident is significant, and shows the need of unceasing watchfulness on the part of local authorities in India.

General Sir George Chesney left Simla for home yesterday. Before his departure he was entertained at a public dinner, at which Sir Frederick Roberts, G.C.B., presided. General Chesney, in replying to the toast of his health, delivered an important speech. After alluding to the little wars now proceeding on the north-west and north-east frontiers, and comparing Lieutenant Grant's defence of Thobal to Clive's defence of Arcot, he went on to say that in India nothing was to be looked for but the unexpected, that, disguise it under what platitudes we might, we held India by the sword, and could find peace and safety only in being always prepared for war. The army was strained to meet the demands made on it at this moment; yet what were they compared with those which would be made when the great day came of whose advent we already had warning, as the deep shadow already cast upon the frontier grew even broader?

Is it too much to hope that this solemn warning, coming from the experienced officer who has been charged with the administration of the Indian War Department for the last five years, will have some effect on the group of enthusiasts who would sweep away the opium revenue, and thereby force upon the Indian Government the alternative of either leaving the country defenceless or creating internal discontent by doubling the income tax and largely increasing the already heavy salt duty?

The India Office has received the following telegram from the Viceroy, dated Simla, April 18, 1891:—

"Lockhart attacked Samana ridge successfully yesterday in three columns.

"First column advanced by Lakka to Tsalai, where considerable opposition was encountered, and thence to Gogra and Sangar, which were carried without loss.

"Second column advanced from Darband, joined first on ridge and then descended to Gwada, in Khanki Valley.

"Third column ascended ridge by pat (path?) Darband further westwards, and reached Sangar simultaneously with first column, after some opposition.

"Enemy's loss not yet known.

"Troops behaved admirably. Advance along crest will be continued westward to-day. Enemy said to be in some numbers at highest point.

"Casualties.—Wounded severely, Colonel C. P. Cramer, King's Royal Rifle Corps, 1st Battalion, in wrist; Major C. C. Egerton, Assistant Adjutant-General, in hand; No. 4,870, Private R. Forriest, wounded dangerously; No. 5,452, Private J. Broughton, wounded slightly; No. 5,109, Colour-Sergeant W. G. Wire; No. 4,551, Private J. Gardiner—all King's Royal Rifle Corps, 1st Battalion. Natives, one killed, two wounded."

CALCUTTA, APRIL 16.

A general attack will be made on the Miranzais to-morrow for the purpose of recapturing the outposts on the Samana Range. Severe fighting is expected.

The Maharajah of Kapurthala has offered a contingent of 700 infantry and 150 Cavalry for frontier service.

CALCUTTA, APRIL 15.

The Indian Government does not appear to view the resolution of the House of Commons with respect to opium with much alarm, though it may cause considerable trouble and annoyance, as in the case of the resolution on Excise passed on Mr. Caine's motion two years ago. It may be noted that if the opium revenue be abolished, one result will assuredly be the re-imposition of the cotton duties.

BURMA.

RANGOON, APRIL 19.

Renewed attention has been attracted to Momeik, owing to a telegraphic report which has been received of a question recently asked in the House of Commons by Sir J. Pope Hennessy, in reference to the alleged rights of China to this petty State. If the telegram is correct Sir J. Pope Hennessy appears to have confounded Momein, a Chinese province bordering on Burma, with the Momeik State.

The allegation that Momeik is tributary to China is erroneous. None of the Burmese Shan States have paid tribute to China. The Bhamo district intervenes to the north, and the powerful Burmese Shan State of North Theinni separates it from Chinese territory on the north-east. After our annexation, China advanced a shadowy claim to a suzerainty over the whole of Burma, but did not claim tribute from the Shan States specially.

The Chinese alleged that the Kings of Burma had sent, as a sign of homage, decennial presents to Pekin. This assertion is vigorously denied by the Burmese.

By the convention of July 24, 1886, the Chinese Government agreed absolutely to recognise British rule and supremacy in Burma. After this convention it is difficult to understand how China could claim the right to interfere in arrangements connected with the administration of any district in Burma. Even if the Chinese claim to suzerainty over Burma had been unreservedly admitted, China would not be interested in any way in the question whether Momeik is administered through the Shan Tsawbwa appointed by the local government or through a deputy commissioner.

The proposed annexation involves no greater change, and while greatly assisting in the pacification of Upper Burma, it will relieve the people of Momeik from the tyranny and misgovernment from which they now suffer.

Captain Bray, D.A.Q.M.G., with Brigadier-General Wolseley's force, died of sunstroke at Endowgyee.

Captain Presgrave had an engagement with 300 Manipuris near Palel on the 14th inst.

The enemy were driven back and pursued by the Mounted Infantry, who killed 50 of their number.

There was no loss on the British side.

RANGOON, APRIL 14.

General Graham will not arrive at Tamu until the 17th. No advance will be made upon Manipur until after his arrival.

The latest report from Tamu is that the Regent has now decided to defend Manipur.

The proclamation of the local Government, offering rewards of Rs. 5,000 for the capture of the Regent and the Senaputty, and lesser sums for four other persons, states that troops are now being sent to Manipur to capture and punish the Regent and those of his Councillors, Generals, and followers who were concerned in the treacherous murder of a number of British officers. It declares that it is probable that these persons will flee on the approach of the British troops. The proclamation has been extensively circulated in the Chin country and on the Burmah frontier.

RANGOON, APRIL 13.

It is ascertained that the Wuntho Tsawbwa is in hiding about 12 miles north of the jade mines. Three columns have marched on the jade mines, and are expected to arrive there to-morrow. Brigadier-General Wolseley accompanied one column. The road from the jade mines to China is carefully blocked.

SIMLA, APRIL 16.

A Gazette extraordinary is issued to-day deploring the loss of Mr. Quinton, Colonel Skene, Mr. Grimwood, Lieutenant Simpson, Mr. Cossins, and Mr. Melville in the Manipur massacre, and stating that the necessary steps have been taken to exact full and signal retribution for the atrocious outrage.—Reuter.

PRESIDENCY JOTTINGS.

(April 1.)

AT the Calcutta Corporation meeting on Monday, the question of increasing the Chairman's salary from Rs. 2,500 to Rs. 3,000 a month came up, on the Lieutenant-Governor's letter refusing to sanction the increase unless the proposal were supported by 38 Commissioners, with the approval of their constituents. The result of a long discussion was that, on the motion of Mr. Apear, the question was postponed for a year, until the Budget for 1891-92 comes up for consideration. The voting was 26 for and 17 against this resolution, several members abstaining from voting.

THE Eurasian and Anglo-India Association has addressed a memorial to Sir Charles Elliott, pointing out that there are some 35,000 Europeans and Eurasians in Calcutta, and that about 10 per cent., or between 3,000 to 4,000 persons among them, are in a state of abject poverty. The memorial continues:—"Among the many causes which have produced this sad state of things, your memorialists would refer to a few facts which, perhaps, more than others, have operated to increase poverty among the Christian population. Foremost among these, they would draw attention to the fact that, whereas half a century ago the majority of Government clerks were composed of domiciled Europeans and Eurasians, the class is now much in the minority in nearly all the public offices. The same remark would apply in the case of bank and mercantile firms. Another cause is that while competition has reduced salaries, the cost of living has considerably increased. House-rent and the wages of servants are now more than doubled, and the municipal taxes payable by tenants, unknown half a century ago, added to the income-tax, make up an appreciable item, which reduces the small salaries drawn by the majority of the community. Your memorialists respectfully ask that your Honour will be pleased to appoint a Commission to collect information and submit a report on the points enumerated below:—(a) The extent and nature of poverty among the European and Eurasian poor of Calcutta; (b) the names and number of the charitable institutions already existing, and their means for affording relief; (c) the means that may be devised for the reduction of destitution, and finding employment for persons able and willing to work."

ON Sunday evening Babu Ashootash Bose, who had been recently speculating in gold shares, committed suicide at his residence in Amherst Street Calcutta. The deceased had been for some time past suffering from a complication of diseases. Lately he had been speculating very largely in gold shares, principally with borrowed capital. He had frequently informed his wife that if the gold shares did not go up shortly, he would be placed in a very awkward position, and it might lead to his taking his life. A few days ago he obtained two bottles of hydrocyanic acid and quinine from the dispensary of Nursing Pertab Dutt in Burra Bazaar. On Sunday evening he asked his wife to go down-stairs and prepare the evening meal. On her return to the room she found him lying dead, with an empty prussic-acid phial at his feet.

Besides being one of the oldest officers in the Department, he is one of the hardest working members of the Staff. Since his arrival in Pondicherry he has won golden opinions from all with whom he has come into contact.

IT is rumoured that the Government of Madras is averse to a direct line of railway from Madras to Bezwada to join the East Coast Railway at the latter place, and that it is inclined to favour an extension of the Renigunta-Nellore line to Bezwada instead. Such an extension is in no case desirable, and if it is to be on the same metre gauge as the rest of the present line, it will behove the Madras public to protest vigorously against it.

MR. C. STOLBERG writes to the Bangalore Daily Post:—On Tuesday last Sequah offered a reward of two thousand gold sovereigns to anyone who would cure a case of paralysis with "Stolberg's Ointment." I shall only be too glad to accept the challenge. I hope Sequah will not back out of this, but like a good Christian he will deposit 2,000 gold sovereigns in one of the banks in Bangalore. As soon as this is done, I am at Sequah's service. I am prepared to take a case of paralysis on hand, provided that there are two straws of life left in the man or woman who may be selected as my patient, and that the case must be seen by the best of medical men in Bangalore before I begin my treatment. And again, when I pronounce the case cured, I shall attend the patient in his or her residence or in one of the hospitals. I hope Sequah will keep to his word, as 2,000 gold sovereigns are a great deal to a poor man like myself, whereas this amount would be only like a "Misquito Bite" to Sequah, who has got 300,000 gold sovereigns at his command at any time.

THE conversion of a Brahmin lad to Christianity at Coimbatore has been the subject of considerable excitement among the Hindus, and protracted judicial proceedings have resulted in the Rev. Mr. Bird, a European missionary, being sentenced by a native district Munsiff to six months' imprisonment. The sentence has been confirmed by the District Court, execution being stayed for one week to enable Mr. Bird to induce the lad to return to Coimbatore. The facts are that, last February, the lad sought and was promised baptism by Mr. Bird. Thereupon the lad's grandfather, after interviewing him and hearing his refusal to leave Mr. Bird's care, obtained an injunction from the Munsiff to restrain Mr. Bird from taking the lad beyond the Court's jurisdiction. It does not appear whether Mr. Bird baptised the lad or removed him beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, but the boy has since been living among the missionaries in Godavery. This the Munsiff considers a violation of the injunction, for which the above penalty has been inflicted. In his application for an injunction the grandfather stated the lad's age to be thirteen years. The Madras Times asserts that in the last middle-school examination the same lad's age was entered as sixteen, while in the last Census returns the grandfather gave the lad's age as fifteen. The town register of births shows that he is at least eighteen. The case will doubtless come before the High Court.

THE late Governor-General of Portuguese-India, His Excellency Vasco Guedes de Carvalho de Menezes, left Bombay for Genoa by the Florio-Rubattino steamer from Prince's Dock on Wednesday afternoon. His Excellency was accompanied by his wife and son.

HIS EXCELLENCY LORD HARRIS paid a visit to the Wilson College on Saturday afternoon and was shown over the building by the Rev. Dr. Mackichan and the professor of the institution, by whom he was received. He saw the various classes, and a student, Mr. M. V. Barve, recited a Marathi song to His Excellency, specially composed in honour of his visit. His Excellency expressed himself as very well pleased with what he saw, and, before leaving, Miss Heerabai Parukh, a student of the First B.A. Class, put a garland of flowers round his neck. As he left, three cheers were given for His Excellency and Lady Harris.

A FRENCH Commercial traveller, named Leon Leberbier, aged 33, died suddenly at the offices of Messrs. Lawrence & Mayo, Forbes Street, at noon, on Monday. Deceased had been staying at the Esplanade Hotel for the past fortnight, and had suffered slightly from dysentry. Whilst waiting in Messrs. Lawrence & Mayo's office he fell dead on the floor, and on medical aid being called, it was found he had died of heart disease. At an inquest on the body a verdict to that effect was returned.

A CORPORAL in the Royal Artillery, named William Henry McWilliam, came to an untimely end at the Colaba Depôt on Sunday, from the effects of an overdose of opium, self-administered. From the evidence given at the inquest it appeared that deceased had only arrived in Bombay from England five days previous, and was depressed owing to leaving home. His wife, Annie McWilliam, stated that he had been drinking heavily since his arrival, and on Saturday night was unable to sleep. At about 11 o'clock on Sunday morning deceased's wife found him in a drowsy condition and summoned assistance. Dr. C. R. Kilkelly attended, and found McWilliam unconscious and exhibiting symptoms of morphia poisoning. Restoratives were applied, but deceased died about nine in the evening. McWilliam had previously suffered severely from neuralgia, and had been under treatment for it, and morphia was one of the medicines prescribed. A verdict of death from an overdose of morphia, administered not with intention of taking life, was returned.

INDIAN AFFAIRS.

THE fate of the Manipur victims is now, unhappily, beyond doubt, and the time has come when a brief account of the principal personage in the catastrophe may, without impropriety, be given. Mr. Quinton, the murdered Chief Commissioner of Assam, was a Bengal civilian essentially of the district officer type—of that type which bears the heat and burden of Indian administration, and receives so few of its honours or rewards. A thorough but quiet worker, he had never swum in the troubled waters of the secretariat, nor snatched at special appointments as they flew past. One of the not many heads of districts who are uniformly contented with their onerous lot, he had given more than a quarter of a century's unconspicuous labour to his own province before his face was known in the higher circles of Government at Simla or Calcutta. When, by the upward path of Seniority, he reached the Viceroy's Legislative Council, his performance exactly justified the promise held out by his previous career. Not one of those brilliant or masterful men on whose strong arm governor-generals and lieutenant-governors learn to lean, he brought to the Indian Legislature a minute experience of the practical work of administration, a clear head, calm judgment, and a most valuable acquaintance with the condition, the feelings, and the wants of the people.

Throughout his whole career Mr. Quinton was known not only as a first-class district officer, but also as one very easy to work with. Of a most amiable disposition and genial manners, he made friends wherever he went, and enjoyed in an especial degree the confidence and good-will of the natives. Not seeking distinction, but doing with quiet efficiency every part of his duty, he passed through his long and varied service, the type, as we have said, of that invaluable class who are the backbone of the British administration in India—the district officer, hard-working, hospitable, thoroughly trustworthy in an emergency, popular alike with soldiers and civilians of his own race, knowing the natives well, and respected or even beloved by them.

Mr. Quinton came too late into the Government of India, as a member of the Viceroy's Council, to have much chance of the highest rewards of the India Civil Service. Lieutenant-governorships and chief-commissionerships go, as a rule, to men who have early distinguished themselves, and who, after getting a grasp of the details of district administration, pass through a careful training in the secretariat or in high and special appointments. In all countries there is a difference in the personal qualifications and in the official experience required for the administrator and for the governor. But in India especially, unless promotion comes early, it often comes too late. Advancement in the regular line in his own province is almost a matter of statutory right with an Indian civilian, but the more conspicuous appointments under the Supreme Government of India must be made by selection. The incessant vexatious demands of district duty, with its monotony of overwork, do not always develop that combination of élan and aplomb without which an Indian civilian seldom goes far. It was, therefore, no slight testimony to the solid qualities of Mr. Quinton's character, and to the value of the work, when in 1889 he was selected by the Government of India, in the thirty-third year of his service, as Chief Commissioner of Assam.

We have tried to faithfully show what manner of officer Mr. Quinton was, and the kind of experience which he brought to his task, for it seems likely that the motives which regulated his action during the last scenes of his life will remain a subject of inference. The first story brought by the two Goorkha fugitives, that Mr. Quinton had ordered a sauve qui peut, was opposed to every antecedent of the man—to his calm judgment in emergencies, his solid capacity for taking in the whole bearings of a situation, and to the habitual presence of mind which had never failed him during nearly 35 years of public life. That story is now ascertained to be false. We know that the retreat of the force was decided on by the junior officers after both the civil and military leaders had been treacherously captured and probably slain. The considerations which led Mr. Quinton and the military officer commanding the force to go out to parley with the enemy will perhaps never be fully disclosed; for unfortunately the two civil officers who were best acquainted with those considerations met their fate together with the senior military officers who were admitted to their deliberations. Whatever the arguments were, it is clear that they prevailed alike with the civil and military heads of the expedition, and no one who knew Mr. Quinton's character can doubt that his action was well weighed and taken after a calm review of the necessities of the case.

What those necessities were we may never know. If the ammunition was exhausted through some confusion of the cartridges required for the Snider and Martini rifles, the man responsible for the fatal blunder (whoever he may be) was certainly not the civilian Chief Commissioner of Assam. Unless some such blunder had rendered the escort defenceless, it is difficult to understand how a British force of 450 men could have retired by night after a slight loss of one British officer and some 13 or 14 Sepoys killed, even although deprived of the seniors in command. A strict account will be taken of that retreat by the proper authorities, and it would be ungenerous by any single word to prejudge the result.

As to the future of Manipur, it may be pointed out that the treacherous murder of Mr. Quinton forms no better ground for turning Assam into a military chief-commissionership than the treacherous murder of Major Cavagnari would have formed for employing only civilian envoys at transfrontier Courts, or than the joint massacre of the young civilian Vans Agnew and the young soldier Anderson at Mooltan formed an argument on either side. The Government of India has acted calmly and wisely in appointing as Mr. Quinton's successor an officer who has already had a long acquaintance with Assam, and who officiated for a considerable period as chief commissioner. Mr. Ward would probably have succeeded Mr. Quinton on the retirement of the latter at the close of his 35 years' service next November.

The larger question of annexing Manipur is one which the Government of India can alone decide, and which it must decide on considerations of permanent policy as well as with regard to the circumstances of the individual case. Retired Indian officers who only attained to secondary positions in the administration have each his own ready remedy whenever a frontier mishap occurs, such as that to Major Cavagnari's party in Afghanistan, and to Mr. Quinton's party in Manipur. There is always the charm of perfect certainty in ex post facto counsels of this sort. But as the Arabian sage, Abu Hashim, observes, "The first step in knowledge is doubt." It should, moreover, be borne in mind that these officers, whether as deputy-commissioners or as political agents, have had ample opportunity of placing their views, in regard to the districts of which they have special information, before the higher authorities during the period of their active service. The frontier policy of the Government of India is to a very large extent regulated by the advice of the local officers, but by that advice as tested and checked by the often conflicting opinions of other local officers equally competent to advise. Annexation may indeed be necessary, but it is not to be entered upon with a light heart, for it means an addition to the already sufficiently heavy burden of the frontier defences of India.—Times.

THE INDIAN ARMY.

THE condition of the army in India is not satisfactory. Some will think that this is a statement that requires to be supported by proof. It is not so. Columns on columns of correspondence published in the Indian and Anglo-Indian Press and in the leading military periodicals at home, as well as in journals and periodicals that are less intimately associated with Indian and military matters, have already proved its truth. It is not a subject that now for the first time comes before the public: it has been mooted and discussed ever since the days when India was transferred to the Crown, and the Queen's Service took the place of that of the East India Company. The welfare and efficiency of the Indian Army is a matter that now so intimately concerns the entire British Empire, that it is more than surprising that the most influential section of the British press, viz. the London daily papers, headed by the Times, should have ignored—nay, more, should have declined to notice this subject. A scandalous divorce case, a bye-election, a party speech by a third-rate politician, a strike, are allowed to fill any number of columns, while the main source of defence of a British dependency that yields a revenue of seventy to eighty millions, is one of the chief fields of British commercial enterprise, and furnishes employment and a livelihood to the best of England's manhood, cannot even gain for itself a single line. Nay, more, the responsible Government officials, the Secretaries of State for War and for India, are seemingly determined to turn a deaf ear to the claims that have recently been put forward for the reorganization of the army in India. This being so, the Indian Army is bound in self-defence to try and, so to speak, work out its own salvation. For it is a question of salvation. In every way the officers of the Indian army have been given the go by. Not only has the Government not held itself responsible in any way for the heavy loss to Indian officers occasioned by the depreciation of the rupee, but the Secretary of State for India (who in this matter represents the British Government) has authorized the Government of India to levy an income-tax on officers, in order to indemnify itself at their expense for its own losses by exchange. Let the officers of the Indian Army, then, remember that the organization of their army is not merely a matter that concerns the welfare of the Empire, but is actually a matter of life and death to themselves. If, with this serious consideration before them, they are content to sit still and see the best patronage of the Indian Army monopolized by the home authorities, and see themselves superseded in promotion, in brevet rank, in pay, and in most of the best appointments by officers of the British Army—then the world will think that they must have very little spirit.

The last suggestion about continuing the Trans-Caspian Railway to Sarakhs, so as to be within striking distance of Herat, is only another hint that the Russian Empire is drawing nearer and nearer to India. It is the Indian Army to which the Nation looks for the protection of India. The time is approaching—rapidly, perhaps, perhaps slowly, but at all events inevitably—when it must be decided whether it is England or Russia that is to have the predominating power in Asia. It is the Indian Army that must in a great measure contribute to England's success in this struggle, if success it is to be. The Indian Empire grows daily in area, wealth, and importance, and it is the Indian Army and its officers that are working out these results; and, notwithstanding all this, the interests of the officers of the Indian Army, and of the Indian Army itself, are entirely subordinated to the lust of patronage that animates the authorities in England. We see certainly some efforts made to conciliate and flatter the native ranks. After the Egyptian campaign of 1882 native officers and men were taken to England and made much of. Native officers went to England for Her Majesty's Jubilee, and were honoured as no ordinary British officer of the Indian Army can hope to be. This is policy. But all this "bunkum" is of no solid benefit to the Indian Army. What our army wants is to be absolutely on a par in point of all advantages with the sister service at home. It is not so now, and therefore an effort must be made to make it so. What is needed is the reorganization of the Indian Army, having in view, firstly, the efficiency of that army, and, secondly, its general interests and the interests in particular of its British officers. There are two methods of attaining this. The first is the formation of an entirely separate army for India; separate in appointment, pay, promotion, leave, pension, in everything. But when we consider that India is a dependency of England, and that it is necessary that the Imperial Government should exercise a due control over that dependency, it is clear that a separate army is not to be advocated. The second method is to have an army so constituted that its efficiency shall not be impaired in order to gratify the love of patronage that animates the Horse Guards and the India Office, and that the interests of the officers of the Indian Army shall not be subordinated to those of the British Army. But unfortunately it is the present tendency of the military authorities at home not to relax but to strengthen their hold on the patronage of the Indian Army. We have a proof of this in the appointment of Sir James Dormer to Madras, and of General Brackenbury to be Military Member of Council.

By the Royal Warrant of 30th January 1891, the Staff Corps of the three Presidencies are amalgamated in one, under the title of "The Indian Staff Corps." So far the change has scarcely been welcomed in Madras and Bombay, but it, at all events, facilitates the transfer of officers from one Presidency to another, and should enable the District commands and Staff appointments throughout India to be held by officers of any Presidency. If the scheme is only fairly worked, the Bengal Army should not in future have a monopoly of the best military appointments. Further, it is not difficult to see how the amalgamation might be made a stepping-stone towards the abolition of the Commanders-in-Chief in Madras and Bombay, the union of the whole army in India under one Commander-in-Chief, and the distribution of the army into six Provincial commands—viz. (1) Bengal and Assam; (2) the North-West Provinces and the Cis-Sutlej, Punjab; (3) the North-West Frontier, viz. the Trans-Sutlej, Punjab, Beluchistan and Sind; (4) Bombay, Rajpootana, Central India, and the Central Provinces; (5) Madras; and (6) Burma and the Shan States. The amalgamation scheme has its opponents, and we are among them, as we think that Bombay and Madras would both suffer. The English opposition is, however, purely selfish, for it is, in fact, the undue interference of the military authorities at home, and the undue preponderance of officers of the British Army in all the best commands and appointments in India that are marring the prospects of the officers of the real Indian Army. Until this is remedied, real progress cannot be made. At the present moment half the District commands and half the Staff appointments in India are held by officers of the British Army. Every officer of the Indian Army must feel that this proportion is an unfair one. One-third is ample for the British Army. We have no sympathy with the cry of "India for the Indians," but we have every reason to cry "India for the Indian Army." India is all that the Indian Army has. The British Army has the whole world open to it, why then should it encroach upon the perquisites of the Indian Army? This, however, is a big question, to which we shall return hereafter.—Times of India.

ITALIAN AS A CIVIL SERVICE SUBJECT.

A VERITABLE storm in a teapot appears to have arisen in England in consequence of the decision of the Civil Service Commissioners to exclude the Italian language from the subjects in which candidates for the Indian Civil Service are liable to examination. There are a number of learned and literary men in England with sufficient leisure to plunge into any controversy in which they see anything that is opposed to their own cherished fads. The Commissioners have excluded the Italian language from the examination curriculum, on the ground that it is too easily acquired. It would have been well for the Commissioners if they had followed the well-known precedent of giving no reason for their decision. At any rate, it might have been supposed that they held that Italian was not likely to be of much use to a member of the Civil Service during the term of his servitude in India. But, unfortunately for them, they said that Italian was too easily acquired. This is undoubtedly true in a certain sense, as anyone who has a competent knowledge of Latin will find, if he takes up such a work as the Secolo or the Capitan Fracassa, or even books of higher celebrity in the Italian language. He will find that he can pick out the words and translate the sense of the passage before him, and probably little more than this was required in the Civil Service examination from the very few candidates who took up the subject. But, of course, it is a very different thing if the student is required to show a full and complete knowledge of the language. It hardly needed the assertions of Mr. Churton Collins, or the evidence of Mr. Gladstone, or Cardinal Manning, or Dr. William Smith, and a host of others, to prove that a thorough mastery of Italian can only be acquired with much toil and assiduity. Italian bears to Latin a position very similar to that which the Bengali language bears to Sanskrit. A man who has learned Sanskrit can pick up the rudiments of Bengali with much facility. But Bengali resembles Italian in another way, for it will take a life-time to obtain a complete mastery of it in all its written and colloquial forms. After all, the Civil Service Commissioners should have taken their stand on the cui bono of Italian in India, if the biographer of the late Judge Unokool Chunder Mookerjee will permit that phrase to be borrowed. What practical use can Italian be to an Indian Civilian? Cardinal Manning is reported to have said that it is a wide-spread commercial language in the East. This is hardly true of Calcutta, where most of the Italian residents can speak English well.—Englishman.

THE ROYAL ENGINEERS.

HITHERTO it has been the part of civilians to complain of the partiality shown to Royal Engineer officers in the matter of appointments and pay in the Public Works and other Civil Departments; but it would appear, from a casual glance at the Indian Army List, that just at the present military men have some grounds for remarking upon the seemingly undue preference shown to the scientific corps. A certain number of appointments are, of course, always reserved for Royal Engineer officers in the Public and Military Works Departments, the Survey and Telegraph Departments, the Forest Department, in the Mints, and at Engineering Colleges, &c., and of such appointments we have now nothing to say. But it is peculiar to note that the following appointments in India, which are open to all branches of the service, and even in some cases to either British or Indian services, are at present held by officers of the corps of Royal Engineers. These appointments are:—Military Member of Council; Private Secretary to Viceroy; Military Secretary to Commander-in-Chief in India; Military Secretary to Commander-in-Chief, Bombay; Quartermaster-General in India; Director of Military Education; Deputy Quartermaster-General, Intelligence Branch; Oudh District Command; Rangoon District Command; Deputy Secretary, Military Department; Assistant Secretary, Military Department; Agent, Governor-General, Baroda; Resident, Mysore; and Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General for Instruction. When we consider that the corps of Royal Engineers is small, that special Departments are reserved for its officers, and that the majority of its officers have little regimental training, the above fourteen appointments appear to be more than their fair share of the appointments open to all branches. It is greatly to the credit of the scientific corps that as Royal Engineers they have so successfully engineered a royal road to promotion.—Civil and Military Gazette.

THE SETTLEMENT OF THE FACTORY QUESTION.

WITH the submission of the Report of the Select Committee of the Legislative Council the last stage in the discussion of the Indian Factory Acts, so far at least as India is concerned, has been reached. There is no doubt that the amendments in the original draft suggested by the Committee will be accepted, and the Bill thus modified will shortly become law. The result is a compromise, which will please extremists on neither side, but which disinterested friends alike of the Indian mill-owner and the Indian mill-operative may nevertheless regard as the only wise, just and practicable solution of the question. No one can doubt, especially after the exceedingly judicial Report of the recent Commission, that certain evils exist which it is desirable to remove, and that where the word "evil" would perhaps be too strong, there are yet certain directions where a change in the present arrangements would be for the convenience and benefit of all concerned. On the other hand, it was clear from the first that the India Office and the Government of India would be subjected to the strongest pressure by the manufacturers of Lancashire, to introduce radical changes in conformity with a theory of factory labour which is no doubt suited to the requirements of European countries, but is wholly unsuited to India, and would be disastrous not less to the mill-hand than to his employer. In determining whether the Government of India have done their duty in the matter, the chief consideration must be whether they have been swayed solely by the facts of the case, the actual circumstances and conditions of factory labour in the country, or whether they have aimed rather at stopping the mouths of the Parliamentary wire-pullers who draw their inspiration from Manchester and Oldham. It is one of the most satisfactory reflections on the settlement which has now been reached, that it enables us to choose the alternative favourable to the Government's good sense and resolution.—Pioneer.

PRIVATE RAILWAY ENTERPRISE IN INDIA.

THE Viceroy's speech at the opening of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway last Tuesday was important as containing a direct reference to the vexed question of private enterprise in India. The history of railway enterprise during the last twenty years has been one long story of official delay and obstruction. Behind the Government of India is the India Office with its circumlocution and indecision, its distrust of promoters of every kind, and its inability to distinguish between sound financial projects and those which should be rejected at sight. What the public complain of is the want of a settled railway policy on the part of the Government and Secretary of State. It is the blowing of hot and cold upon private enterprise which has checked the development of the Indian railway system. The Bengal-Nagpore line, for example, could have been built years ago had the views of the promoters been accepted when they were first put forward. But even after the surveys had been completed and fairly accurate estimates formed of the trade which the line would attract to itself, no final official reply could be obtained. But for the pertinacity of Mr. Robert Miller the scheme would have been abandoned, owing to the spirit of obstruction in which all the proposals were met. No sooner did it seem likely that terms satisfactory to each party had been arranged than new objections were raised officially, and these had to be met and disposed of before the project reached smooth water again. Even in the final stages of the negotiations between the Company and the Secretary of State there were objectless delays. The actual work of constructing the line has taken less than four years, but it is fourteen years since the project was first broached. Ten years for negotiations and four years for construction; that is the history of the line which now gives direct communication between the two most important ports in India. With Viceroys, Secretaries of State, and Public Works Ministers changing every few years there are of necessity frequent breaks in the continuity of railway policy in India, and the effect of these upon private enterprise is more or less severe. A little more of the sympathy expressed by Lord Lansdowne and a good deal less of obstruction shown at the India Office would be welcome, particularly when projects are concerned of which the soundness is indisputable.—Pioneer.

MR. CAINE AGAIN.

IT is not astonishing that there should be a good deal of indignation in the ranks of the Leinsters at Mr. Caine's scandalous insinuations against the men of the regiment in his account of the Dum-Dum murder case. Nevertheless, if our correspondents will believe us, no good would be served by keeping alive the memory of a shocking incident, more especially after the complexion which Mr. Caine has laboured to put upon it of being an ebullition of race animosity. One might with just as much reason treat the equally horrible occurrence that has lately taken place at Fort Stedman as an outbreak of hatred against the English; and what would be thought of the honesty of an Anglo-Indian journalist who endeavoured to inflame the feelings of his countrymen against the natives by representations of that kind? Mr. Caine's attempt, however, may be safely ignored, not because it is not shameful, but because it is contemptible. From his first word—"one night last May"—to his last, that the acquittal of the Chartered Bank cashier was intended by the jury as a set-off to the result of the Dum-Dum case, he has not managed to be correct in a single assertion. It is quite clear that he cannot have read the proceedings in either trial; and when he makes the naïve announcement that he was told many times by natives that the jury—who acquitted the cashier, by the direction of the Judge, on a point of law—regarded their verdict as a reprisal for Dum-Dum, the source of his information and its character is sufficiently explained. When, however, Mr. Caine is good enough to select the open ground of these two criminal cases, whose facts are in the minds of all, as the field for the display of his powers of inaccurate statement, he will give the hundreds who have no inclination for following him into the jungle of excise statistics a means of appreciating how much his facts and figures about the drink question are likely to be worth. The gradual effect of a long course of temperance lecturing seems to be just as fatal to the virtue of truth as dram-drinking is to the virtue of self-control.—Pioneer.

SALT AND LEPROSY.

WE should be glad to know the grounds on which a noble lord interrogated the Secretary of State as to the alleged connection between an inadequate supply of salt to the poor of India and the prevalence of leprosy in this country. Lord Cross made the cautious reply that the question will no doubt be studied by the Government of India. Medical opinion does not ascribe leprosy to a deficiency of salt amongst the poor in India. and for one good reason amongst others—leprosy is by no means confined to the indigent; it attacks the members of wealthy families who have never known the want of salt in their diet. No one has ever ascribed the survival of leprosy in Norway to a deficiency of salt; in that country sea-salt is of easy access and salt fish is abundant. In the Sandwich Islands, where leprosy is so rife, there is no scarcity of salt, which can be procured, in untold quantities, from the edges of lagoons and pools. In Mediæval Europe, when leprosy was more common than it is now in India, salt meat and salt fish were the main constituents of diet throughout half the year. This state of things of course made scurvy fearfully prevalent, and it did not in any way tend to check the progress of leprosy, which was only stamped out by the rigorous isolation of the leprous. A theory long held the field in India that leprosy owed its origin not to any deficiency of salt but to the free use of sun-dried fish as an article of diet. Surgeon-General Moore pointed out that leprosy widely prevailed in parts of the peninsula so remote from the sea that fish never found its way thither, and the theory fell into discredit. It would be well if surgeons and administrative officers instituted—within such areas as can be conveniently placed under supervision—inquiries as to the existence or non-existence of a connection between an inadequate supply of salt and the presence of leprosy amongst the population. What is the effect of decrease or increase in the allowance of salt on the progress of the disease amongst leprous patients under medical observation? This is a question to which authoritative answers can be easily supplied.—Bombay Gazette.

THE MEDICAL SERVICES.

It requires not only an unusually sanguine temperament, but an uncommon shortness of memory, to expect that the paltry concessions to the medical services of the Army extorted at last from Mr. Stanhope's military advisers will extinguish the regrettable, though certainly not unwarrantable, agitation of the last three years. It ought to be needless to reiterate that the Medical Department is composed of officers who are professionally severable from the Army, and are capable any day of entering on an independent career. This is what makes their position so strong, and ought to make the treatment of it conciliatory, for the Army from the very first has to compete with the attractions of civil practice. It must then be apparent that, unless the prospects held out by a military career are of a high order, it is vain to expect competitors for medical commissions from among a high order of men. Looking above the smaller strifes of mere departments to the great interests involved in the health of the Army, the public will be pardoned for considering it neither congruous nor logical, but detrimental in the extreme, that these impassioned jealousies, kept burning too often by acrimonious gibes and sneers, should be for ever obstructing any reform that elevates the status or gratifies the rational sentiment of the medical officers. Such a policy is repugnant to efficiency. It can have but a single result—namely, a deterioration in the stamp of men who present themselves at the Burlington examinations. Young medical men who have been the ornaments of their schools, endowed with special attainments or exceptional culture, are naturally those with the keenest regard for the prestige of their profession, and will hardly rush towards a career which places them in an invidious position relatively to their brother officers in the other ranks. Soldiers, of all people in the world, after a moment's introspection, will be the last to consider that professional susceptibilities are despicable qualities. Yet the very circle at the Horse Guards who are reputed to be most hostile to the claims of military surgeons are among the first to profess that the medical officers of the Army should be not only professionally competent, but be drawn from a desirable class. To reconcile a positive grudge with this poetic declaration of lofty purpose is a conundrum of inconsistence which they have been long setting themselves in vain to solve.—Times of India.

A DIRECTOR OF RECORDS.

The appointment of a Director of Records to the Government of India, which the Secretary of State has just sanctioned, will be hailed joyfully by all who are desirous of learning more about the past history of India than has hitherto been published. Curiously enough, although the Government of India by the British has always, as Burke pointed out, been a government of writing, a government of record, only the very barest use has ever been made by its historians of the treasures contained in the record rooms of Calcutta, Bombay, Madras. It has been constantly pointed out within recent years that the ancient muniments of the Government of India now scattered among different offices, contain the materials for a most accurate history of the British Empire in India. "In musty records fast falling into decay are chronicled the deeds of valour by which the Empire was won, and the acts of statesmanship by which it has been maintained. In them are preserved the lessons of wisdom which the times past afford the present." Such are the words with which Professor Forrest introduced his three volumes of Selections from the Letters, Despatches, and other State Papers preserved in the Foreign Department of the Government of India, 1772-1785," which were published quite recently. The Professor's words, coupled no doubt with the success which attended the publication of these "Selections," have had their desired effect. Professor Forrest will now be enabled to devote his whole time to a work which he loves so well, and in which no other person in India is so well qualified to succeed. He has a grand field for research before him, and if the results of his future labours are as satisfactory as those of his past, the clouds of doubt and uncertainty which at present overhang even the most important events of British rule in India will be wafted away, and a purview will be gained, whereby we shall be able to gauge more accurately the experiences of the past and perceive more clearly the problems of the future. It is greatly to be hoped that Professor Forrest's labours will not be entirely confined to Calcutta. There are treasures to be found in the record rooms of Fort St. George, the oldest seat of the British Government in India, which must be quite, if not more, interesting than those contained in the record rooms of what is now the metropolis. The researches of Talboys Wheeler, though entitled to the highest place as being the first of their kind and containing a vast deal of interesting details, are not complete, and there still remain vast stores of information practically undeveloped. It will be some time perhaps before Professor Forrest can direct his attention to them; but meanwhile much might be done in arranging the records ready for his perusal. It is rumoured that the Government of Madras has already recognized the need of this, and is prepared to depute Mr. H. A. Sim on this special duty as soon as Mr. M. Hammick returns from leave.—Madras Mail.

THE INCREASE OF MILITARY EXPENDITURE.

There is a consideration which any intelligent man reading between the lines of Sir David Barbour's statement can plainly see. How is it possible for a Finance Minister to frame a Budget which will show an equilibrium accompanied by such adjustments of taxation as a prudent and far-seeing Minister would desire to make of his own accord, without waiting for suggestion or invitation, when he is called upon year after year to provide resources from which to meet an ever-growing military expenditure? It is manifest from Sir David Barbour's pointed, though guarded, references to the growth of military charges throughout his statement that he feels acutely the danger to the finances involved in the increase of such expenditure. When he refers to all that has been done to provide equilibrium, and says, "All this has been done although none of the reduction in special military expenditure for which I at least hoped in March 1889 has as yet been secured," it may be inferred that he is strongly impressed with the need of insisting on confining such reduction within more reasonable limits if the financial condition is not to be endangered. The plain truth is that military expenditure has reached a point where it should be peremptorily stopped. The Army cost just under 17,000,000 rx. in 1884–85, having come to that point by successive reductions after the termination of the Afghan campaign. In 1885–86 the cost was suddenly raised to no leas than 20,000,000 rx. as a consequence of the war scare of that year, which cost the country in futile expenditure as much as three crores. There was a small reduction in the following year, but it went up again in 1887–88. It is useful to look at the exact cost of the Army since 1884–85, which has been as follows:—

1886–87	...	19,525,042
1887–88	...	20,417,934
1888–89	...	20,301,841
1889–90	...	20,667,814
1890–91	...	20,897,500
1891–92	...	21,051,200

And in addition there is a total sum of 5,000,000 rx. for special defence works, of which 3,768,830 rx. will have been spent to the end of the year 1891–92, leaving 1,231,170 rx. still to be met, "unless," as Sir David Barbour pithily puts it, "other expenditure of a similar character should take its place." And judging from past experience this is very probable, unfortunately. It would seem to be time to consider whether the maintenance of such a scale of expenditure on military purposes may not tend to bring us face to face with more serious internal dangers than the external dangers against which the expenditure is designed to guard us.—Englishman.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THE OPIUM DEBATE.

WE can well believe that, as telegraphed to the Times by its Calcutta correspondent on Monday last, "the news of the Resolution in the House of Commons on the opium revenue has caused a general feeling of astonishment, almost of consternation. People ask whether the supporters of the resolution realised the fact that its enforcement would infallibly lead to the bankruptcy of India." The free and easy way in which 160 honourable members managed to win the House to their opinion, that it was necessary for righteousness sake, however bad for revenue, that the Government of India should at once cease to grant licenses for the cultivation of the poppy and sale of opium in India, except to supply the demand for medical purposes, must have been a surprise also to many here. It is difficult to understand why the Government whips did not make arrangements for an attendance which would have prevented the House from coming to a conclusion alike foolish, mischievous and inoperative, it having been well known beforehand that Sir J. Pease and his friends were doing all in their power to get their phalanx of faddists together to carry the Resolution.

Happily the telegram of consternation from Calcutta on Monday has been followed by a more soothing one, which the Times published on Thursday:—

"The Indian Government does not appear to view the resolution of the House of Commons with much alarm, though it may cause considerable trouble and annoyance, as in the case of the resolution on Excise passed on Mr. Caine's motion two years ago. It may be noted that if the opium revenue be abolished one result will assuredly be the re-imposition of the cotton duties."

This is merely, we imagine, a surmise on the part of the correspondent. Lancashire need be under no apprehension; the cotton duties are not likely to be re-imposed, for the opium revenue is not likely to be abolished. And herein lies the mischievous farce of the House of Commons lending itself to a measure which it knows it cannot, dare not carry out. The Resolution may find a place on the Records of the House, but surely it is confusion worse confounded to pass a measure which is, and must be, altogether inoperative. It shows with what little wisdom India would be governed were its government wholly in the hands of the House of Commons. The Resolution was not forced upon the House by the agitation of the outside British public, in one of those periodical fits of morality referred to by Macaulay as occurring once in six or seven years, when "our virtue becomes outrageous." The British public just now is wholly indifferent to the effects of opium on Chinaman or Christian, and Sir Joseph Pease and his fellow faddists, notwithstanding pamphlets, leaflets, prize essays, and platform oratory, had failed to get up any outside agitation on the subject. But more fortunate inside the House, they managed to secure the presence of 160 supporters on a division in a House of 290, and so carried a Resolution which their party declare to be a great victory. Fortunately the common sense of the people of England is not to be gauged by the want of sense of the 160 honourable gentlemen whom Sir Lepel Griffin, more characteristically than politely, places on a level with the animal which prefers thistles to hay. The "victory" is a very barren one so far as results are likely to reward the victors, but this does not mean that no mischief has been done by an attempt to throw fresh difficulty in the way of the Government of India, which Government has at present so many difficulties to meet.

In our columns there is no necessity to plead a word on behalf of the opium policy of that Government. Every unprejudiced Anglo-Indian who has made any study of the subject, or given any attention to the questions of Indian revenue and taxation, knows that Sir Richard Temple spoke nothing but the simple straightforward truth when he declared in the House, speaking against Sir Joseph Pease's motion, that the opium trade so condemned by that pure-minded baronet was just as defensible as the excise system of this or any other country. Sir Richard's speech was a most able one, and nothing could have been better put than the statement he made showing that the result of abandoning five and a half millions of revenue for a sentiment would be to enable the consumers of opium in China to get opium cheaper, because it would be untaxed, and we should thus be helping to increase instead of to check the consumption of the drug. The faddists determinedly ignore the fact that if China is being poisoned by opium she is poisoning herself, for she can tax Indian opium as she chooses. Indian opium is, as Sir Richard Temple said, at the mercy of China.

But the righteous-minded anti-opium agitators claim "a great moral victory," and one of their organs in the press has been rejoicing with an exceeding great joy over it. "We call ourselves a Christian country," it says, "and Sir Richard Temple appears on missionary platforms!"

"But, thank God, the Christianity of Christ is beginning to appear even in the House of Commons, and of that most hopeful fact last Friday night was a glorious proof. All the special pleading of Sir J. Fergusson, Sir R. Temple, and, we much regret to add, Mr. W. H. Smith, was swept aside, and by a decisive majority of thirty the House accepted the strong resolution of Sir Joseph Pease, who in this, as in other Christian enterprises, has rendered high service to the human race. The Standard, in bitter and angry terms, urges the Government to take no notice of the resolution of the House of Commons. They may possibly act upon the suicidal advice of their leading organ. It is quite certain now that as soon as the Liberal party returns to power, the Opium Trade will follow the Contagious Diseases Acts to an unhallowed grave. If the Conservatives are foolish enough to leave that great moral achievement to their opponents, they will do themselves immense moral injury. They cannot possibly prevent the Indian Opium Trade from being abolished."

The simple reply to this last assertion is that contained in the telegram of the Times Calcutta correspondent, which we have already quoted: "The Indian Government does not appear to view the resolution of the House of Commons with respect to opium with much alarm." Q. E. D.

MANIPORE HILL-MEN.

FEW persons in England know much about the Hill-men of Manipore. For example, half the names of tribes which are now being bandied about are unknown to those who are said to bear them. When Rajahs of Assam ruled the country, they divided it into districts, which they named according to pleasure. The Hill-men ignored these, continuing to designate themselves by the names of their respective villages. Hence the population bears as many appellations as does a Welshman of long descent. These villages are not readily accessible, being usually situated upon the sides of mountains, which, rising above the foot-hills of tea-bearing Assam, swell into a succession of ridges running north-east and south-west, averaging 2,000 feet in height, until they are surmounted by the line of peaks overlooking Burmah, one of which, Saramethi, towers to an altitude of nearly 13,000 feet. The ridges are narrow, with steep heavily-wooded sides; while the lower ranges and foot-hills are densely covered with long grass and jungle. Many of these Hill-men resemble our own Highlanders in wearing the kilt, and also in their desperate courage. The proof of manhood among them is the taking of the head of an enemy. When a man has taken heads he acquires the right to adorn his kilt with three rows of cowries. This is not universally so. In the neighbourhood of Mao, near the "Jewel City" of Manipore, the cowries are worn even when heads have not been taken. The vendetta is general, and is as ruthlessly practised as it was formerly in Corsica. Blood feuds are sacred, and never die. The Hill-men, when upon the war-path, wear a coronet of bear's-hair, surmounted with long waving feathers, which imparts to them a formidable appearance.

The weapons which are indigenous to the country are such as are usually found among savage races. In proof of their savagery it may be mentioned that in certain villages the people are absolutely naked. They take great care of their spears, never by any chance leaving one in an inclined position, lest it should lose its straightness. The spear is of iron, having a shaft from four to five and a half feet in length. This is picturesquely adorned with red and black hair, or with patterns worked in red and yellow cane. Each fighting man carries two of these; one to be used as a javelin, the other for strife at close quarters. The shields, large and cumbrous, are formed of bamboo matting, covered with skin or scarlet cloth, profusely decorated with hair and feathers, and rendered spear-proof by a thin plank on the inside. The most formidable weapon, one which inspires the Hill-men with desperate courage, as they can only use it at close quarters, is the dâo. This is a kind of bill-hook, with a very heavy one-edged blade some eighteen inches in length. This is invariably worn at the back, in a rough wooden sheath.

The villages, which will have to be either stormed or knocked to pieces by means of mountain guns before these fierce and vindictive tribes can be brought to their senses, are all built on commanding positions, and are usually strongly fortified. Only one path leads to the stronghold. This runs through a long tortuous lane, only wide enough to allow one man to pass at a time. This is further studded with fire-hardened spikes of bamboo panjies, which are capable of inflicting a nasty wound. Deep pit-falls, artfully concealed by thin layers of earth and leaves, also line the path. When these have been passed, stockades, ditches lined with panjies, and massive stone walls, pierced for arrows, or even musketry, further bar the progress of an enemy. In the bachelors' quarters the big drum is kept—a huge hollowed tree, which is beaten with double-headed clubs. The inhabitants are summoned either to war or to festivity by means of this drum. When an attack is feared, it is beaten at intervals through the night to show that the villagers are on the alert. Of their domestic manners and customs one cannot write here; this is not the place for such. It is well, however, to know with whom we have to deal.—Globe.

INDIA AND THE LONDON HYGIENIC CONGRESS.

THE sanitary inspectors of Great Britain are now a well-recognized and influential body of officials. Upon their activity depends the successful working of the numerous Acts which have of late years been passed with a view to the improvement of the public health in England, and of which the area of operation is constantly becoming wider, as legislation gradually embraces new departments of social life and interferes more boldly with individual independence. Public opinion in England tends considerably in this direction. The obligation of householders to notify the occurrence of infectious disease, which but a few years ago was stoutly repudiated, as involving a breach of the time-honoured maxim that the Englishman's home is his castle, is now recognized as an obvious precaution against the spread of epidemics, with which no reasonable community would be willing to dispense. The landlord's duty to keep the tenant's house in decent repair, and to provide for its adequate drainage and water-supply, is another branch of sanitation which the English law is every year enforcing with increased strictness, and with more careful scrutiny of individual conduct. All this throws heavier duties on the sanitary inspector, and makes him a more important member of the community. He is looked upon no longer as the troublesome representative of "faddy" legislation, but as the instrument for enforcing rules which contribute enormously to the well-being of society. The degree to which preventable disease is a pecuniary drain on the public wealth, even in such a country as England, where the death rate is about half that of India, was very impressively enforced by Dr. W. Richardson, the well-known sanitarian, at the annual dinner of the Sanitary Inspectors of Great Britain, recently held in London. It is computed, he said, that 125,000 preventable deaths occur annually in Great Britain, and that for every death there are 39 cases of preventable illness. Taking such illnesses to average 18½ days, this represents a total loss of 78¼ millions of days of labour in the year. Putting the value of these days of labour at the low rate of two shillings per day, we get a loss of 7¾ millions sterling per annum. In addition to this there must be reckoned a further enormous loss of working days owing to exhaustion, a misfortune to which the bad housing of the working classes so largely contributes.

If we apply these figures to India, where cases of preventable deaths are probably not less than five millions, and where, following the same ratio as is accepted in England, we must infer that the cases of preventable disease are nearly two hundred millions, we are landed in totals so vast that the imagination almost falters in the attempt to realise the scale of human suffering involved. It is enough to say that no other of the projects for "the bettering of man's estate," which figure in the programme of benevolent despotisms or charitable individuals, can pretend to so comprehensive a scope of action, or can promise the same huge aggregate as it is practically certain might be added to the well-being and happiness of the human race, by the realization of the principles which sanitarians enforce. Of the truth of this fact there is happily no longer any doubt in any circles but those whose ignorance and prejudice will stand fast against absolute demonstration. The Hygienic Conference to be held this summer in London will deal largely with the evidence which India supplies as to results of sanitation, in reducing the frightful totals of mortality which prevail wherever crowds of human beings live closely packed under conditions repugnant to every recognized rule of health. We are happy to see that Sir Douglas Galton, one of the foremost sanitarians in England, and a leading member of the late Sanitary Board for India, which was allowed to expire a year or two ago, is taking the matter up, and has summoned a meeting of gentlemen especially interested in the subject. The India Office is scarcely likely to let the subject rest without contributing some of its own experience, and it is probable that Miss Nightingale, who still, from the chamber of illness, watches the course of Indian sanitation with the interest alike of the philanthropist and the scientific observer, will, before the Congress meets, have organized some arrangement for securing for India a proper share of time and attention. The main causes of the maladies of India, however, require no scientific exposition. They lie on the surface. Certain well-known rules of health as to the removal of filth and the purity of air, food and water, are systematically defied by vast populations. The vicissitudes of climate—intense damp at times, intense heat or cold at others—intensify the ill results of these unhealthy surroundings; the unknown and mysterious conditions of epidemic disease add another great cause of mortality in quarters where all previous circumstances favour its advent.

The great remedy required is an increased determination of the inhabitants not to endure conditions of existence so fatal in its continuance and enjoyment. The "low standard of comfort" on which Sir Auckland Colvin insisted a few weeks ago as one of India's principal misfortunes, is the real explanation of the sanitary level at which rich Indian communities have been, and in many cases still are, content to live. In Calcutta, in every great Indian city in fact, there are numbers of rich native's houses, the arrangements of which are, from a sanitary point of view, detestable and revolting. They stand surrounded by scenes of horror which must necessarily endanger, and do, no doubt, seriously impair the health of all who come within their influence. It is to be hoped that the native gentlemen will, in course of time, come to realize the real luxuries and enjoyments of civilization. At present he has but few pleasures, and these not of the highest order. He has but few means of social intercourse: his domestic surroundings leave much to be desired in the way of enlightenment, intelligence and refined recreation. The nâtch is a dreary entertainment, of which the educated is justly tired and ashamed. If he attempts to enjoy life, he finds himself almost necessarily degrading it. If he launches out into new pleasures, they betray him into profligacy. If he tries to live handsomely, he is lured to a profitless and pleasureless profusion. In the midst of all his expenditure, he probably tolerates in the midst of his home arrangements which every doctor would pronounce to involve serious risk of health and life, the doubtful well, the impure tank, the fœtid drain, the hidden receptacle of filth. He has been accustomed to these inconveniences, which a European would find uncomfortable. His standard of comfort does not rise above them. He never dreams of revolt. But education will do its work here as well as in England, and we believe the time not to be distant at which the native as well as the European community will recognize that it is in the increased comfort of their homes, in the improvement of all the appliances by which a home can be rendered pure, healthy and enjoyable, that the first great practical advance of social life in India will have to be secured.—Pioneer.

CORRESPONDENCE.

SIR, (To the Editor of ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.)

By a reference to page 549 of Men and Women of the Time it will be seen that it is to Dr. Gottleib William Leitner, who is therein said to have been born October 14, 1840, at Pesth in Hungary, that is applied the praise of being "the greatest living linguist, in fact a second Mezzofanti." From the Esquisse historique sur le Cardinal Mezzofanti we learn that the latter spoke, with fluency and correctness, even in their dialectal peculiarities, over fifty distinct languages, so widely separated from each other as Lithuanian and Chinese. But his peculiar talent was analogous to that of the prodigies known as "calculating boys," and "was not associated with any exceptional measure of intellectual power, and accordingly produced nothing that has not perished with him." He was completely innocent of a scientific knowledge of languages. I know nothing of the learned Dr. Leitner's philological attainments, but it is a doubtful compliment to any philologist to label him as "a second Mezzofanti." There is many a polyglot mongrel of the gutters of Istambul to whom this high-sounding, but entirely empty, phrase might be vaguely applied. So it ever is that the true estimate of the deeds and reputations of men is to be found only in the

MR. JAS. L. WALKER, C.I.E.

A CIRCULAR letter which has fallen into our hands addressed by the Directors of the Alliance Bank of Simla, Limited, to its shareholders, announces the retirement from the Chief Managership, from March 31, of a man too well and widely known in connection with several other local institutions, to be allowed to escape from among us without the observance of that form of "obituary notice" reserved for those of her citizens who have deserved well of the republic. Mr. James L. Walker's services to the prosperous institution referred to are best appreciated by those for whom he has worked so well, though, as we are glad to learn, the severance will be tempered in his case by the knowledge that those services are not to be forgotten. The proposal to make him a life Director, and to confer a pension on him, is creditable to all concerned, and not the less so if it secure the advantage to the Bank of his advice and experience in the decision of all large questions of concern to it hereafter, whether at home or again in India. These mofussil banks—banks of which our immediate neighbour, the Allahabad Bank, and the Alliance may be taken as favourable types—are, of their present dimensions, things of comparatively recent growth in Upper India, their wealth and influence being the measure of their value to the community. The Alliance, for instance, which started under Mr. Walker's management with a working capital of 3¼ lakhs in 1874, now employs over a hundred lakhs. But outside the sphere of his professional duties Mr. Walker busied himself in the affairs of the Simla Municipality, of which he was three years President; whilst twenty years a Volunteer, he eventually became Colonel Commandant of the 2nd Punjab Rifles, and received a C.I.E. It is not very much the fashion in this country to notice either the coming or the going of a non-official Englishman; but a man who concerns himself in the welfare of all sorts of public institutions, and earns universal respect for his high personal character and generous and hospitable ways, cannot fail to be missed. Mr. Walker is one of these.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

ABOUT 120 young soldiers will be sent from Bellary to Ramandrug for a change during the hot weather.

IT is most probable that the wing of the 4th Madras Pioneers, which was sent over some time last year, will remain in Burma.

THE 2nd-4th Gurkhas will be returning to India shortly, after doing excellent service in Burma. The regiment will probably embark at Rangoon on the 23rd inst., for Calcutta.

THE question of the cost of moving a regiment from one Presidency to another in course of relief has been decided by the Government of India. The charge will in future be taken by the Presidency from which the regiment is moved.

THE attention of officers commanding corps has been directed to the advisability of 2nd-Lieutenants qualifying for promotion to the rank of Lieutenant with as little delay as possible, as those who have not passed will be liable to supersession when vacancies occur in the higher rank.

DURING the reliefs of 1891–92, the 21st Hussars will be moved from Bangalore to Secunderabad. It has been over three years in Bangalore, and has been most popular at that station. It arrived from England about the end of December 1887. The 7th Hussars, now stationed at Secunderabad, will probably be moved to Umballa, in the place of the 7th (Princess Royal's) Dragoon Guards. The 19th Hussars will be ordered out from England to take the place of the 21st Hussars at Bangalore.

REVERTING again to the question of the Presidential Commands in India, the Pioneer adduces what it designates a striking piece of evidence, to show how wrong Sir John Gorst was in quoting the Burma war as a proof of the smoothness with which the present system of army administration works. At first the war was conducted under the orders of the Madras military authorities, though a considerable number of Bengal troops were employed. Later on the Bombay army sent over some regiments, and it was found absolutely necessary in 1886 to place the operations directly under the Commander-in-Chief in India. Then matters went smoothly, and it was clearly established that the large army of occupation could only be efficiently controlled from army head-quarters. Accordingly, when Sir Frederick Roberts returned to India in the spring of 1887, no change was made in the arrangements which he had personally introduced, and not until General White gave up the command in Upper Burma, more than two years later, did the Madras authorities resume the control which they had had in 1885–86. If the Burma war proved anything, it was that a campaign, even against a guerilla enemy, could not be satisfactorily carried on under the Presidential system.

COLONEL J. H. RIVETT-CARNAC, Commandant of the Ghazipur Light Horse, has been appointed an Aide-de-Camp to the Queen. This may be taken as an honour to the Volunteers of India as a whole, and as evincing the lively interest which Her Majesty takes in her civilian soldiers in the East. Colonel Rivett-Carnac has rendered good and enduring service to the cause of Volunteering, and is in every respect an excellent representative. But the distinction is more than a mere personal one, and when the present incumbent retires, we may expect to see the Indian A.D.C.-ship go to some other officer of the force. Colonel Rivett-Carnac got a C.I.E. in the first batch after the Bengal Famine, so that he does not even owe to Volunteering the distinction that has been conferred on several leading Volunteers in recognition of the part they have taken in the movement.

IN July 1889, the Government of India were pleased to sanction, says an Allahabad paper, as a tentative measure, a revised course of musketry for the Native Army, which gave such satisfaction on trial that, in the spring of the year following, it obtained definite acceptance. Now, within two years of the date upon which these revised instructions were first published, the home authorities have followed suit by introducing a new course of musketry for British troops, which is evidently and admittedly a direct outcome of the existing native regulations. It will be observed that, in accordance with the principles upon which the native course was framed, the number of rounds allotted to deliberate individual fire has been reduced to 42 only. This leaves the infantry soldier 56 rounds available for volley, independent and sectional attack; 28 rounds for rapid individual fire and individual attack, and 64 rounds to expend in field practices. It is not, however, only in general outline of conduct that the British course has been assimilated to the native system of training. On the contrary, most of the distinctive and typical subsidiary features of the revised native regulations have also been bodily transferred to the new home order. Thus the instructions for calculating the figure of merit are taken en bloc from the Simla G.O.C.C., and the former system of averages, which was meaningless to all but a few specialists, is now superseded by that of percentages, which conveys the required information at a single glance to any intelligent observer. As regards targets, also, the acceptance of the Indian method is absolutely complete. Thus the bull's-eye or Wimbledon target takes the place of the present figure target for individual practices, and for collective practices the Indian volley target, invented two years ago, with its upper and lower divisions of two and four feet respectively, has been accepted without modification. The scoring, however, is to be 1 in the upper band and 2 in the lower, instead of, as in the Indian system, 0 on the upper band and 1 on the lower. This will merely result in making the calculation of percentages somewhat more troublesome without, apparently, the gain of any corresponding advantage. Another point upon which the home committee have taken a line of their own is the substitution of 7 rounds at each distance for 10 or 5 rounds as in the native course. It is doubtful, however, whether this is an improvement, for, as long as ammunition continues to be made up in packets of 10 rounds, the employment of a number which is neither a factor nor a multiple of 10, is sure to be inconvenient on the range, besides which 7 is a much more troublesome figure to manipulate extensively on paper. Nevertheless, in spite of one or two trifling drawbacks of this description, there is no doubt that the new course is a great improvement upon its predecessor; and there is every reason to believe that it will take up less time in its execution, with better results for all concerned, as regards both target marksmanship, fire-discipline, and practical musketry efficiency.

OBITUARY.

LIEUT. AND QUARTERMASTER JOHN WILLIAM COOMBES, 1st Battalion East Kent Regiment, died at the end of last month at Uxbridge, aged forty-seven years. He was the second son of the late Captain J. Coombes, Zetland Villas, Uxbridge, and served during the operations in the Malay Peninsula in 1875-76. He received his commission as quartermaster in February 1882.

CAPTAIN GRANVILLE FOULIS WINGFIELD, 7th Hussars, and younger son of Mrs. Wingfield, of Ampthill House, Bedfordshire, died on the 10th inst. at his mother's residence. The deceased officer had recently returned from Switzerland, where he had been staying during the winter months for the benefit of his health, and on Wednesday last he was suddenly taken ill with an attack of hæmorrhage, to which he succumbed. Captain Wingfield, who was only in his thirty-second year, entered the army in August 1880. He had served as aide-de-camp on the Staff of Lord Connemara when Governor of Madras.

COLONEL REGINALD WHITTING, commanding the 14th Regimental District, died of pneumonia on Sunday at his residence, Mill Mount, York, after only a week's illness. Colonel Whitting was born on July 30, 1836. He entered the army as ensign in the 62nd Foot (the Wiltshire Regiment) on December 26, 1856, and was promoted to a lieutenancy in the 8th Foot (the Liverpool Regiment) on March 28, 1858. He attained his captaincy on January 15, 1861, and became major on February 20, 1874, and was adjutant of Auxiliary Forces from April 21, 1876, to March 6, 1877. He was gazetted lieutenant-colonel on March 7, 1882, and was transferred to the West Yorkshire, the territorial regiment of the 14th Regimental District, on June 10, 1882, and held the command of the 1st Battalion of that regiment till March 7, 1888, when he went on half-pay. He was promoted colonel on March 7, 1886. Colonel Whitting served in the Indian Mutiny, 1857–58, and acted as Staff Adjutant to a detachment at Sasseram, and was present at the operations in the Jugdespore jungles, the campaign of 1858–59 in Oude, including the attack and capture of Fort Sandee, for which he received the medal. He attained the full rank of colonel on March 7, 1886, and just two years ago was appointed to the command of the 14th Regimental District at York. Colonel Whitting was greatly respected not only at the Depôt but in the city of York, and much sorrow is felt at his unexpected death.

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of

EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other Service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week, written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain.

Jeopardy of Life, the Great Danger of Delay.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

HEADACHE AND DISORDERED STOMACH.—"After suffering nearly two and a half years from severe Headache and Disordered Stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your 'FRUIT SALT,' and before I had finished one bottle I found it doing me a great deal of good, and now I am restored to my usual health; and others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, ROBERT HUMPHREYS, Post Office, Barrasford."

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHER SALINES.—"Dear Sir,—Having been in the habit of taking your 'FRUIT SALT' for many years, I think it only right to tell you I consider it a most invaluable medicine, and far superior to all other saline mixtures I have ever tried. I am never without it, as I find it possesses three most desirable qualities—pleasant to the taste, promptly efficacious, and leaves no unpleasant after-effects. I do not wish my name to appear, but you are welcome to make use of this testimonial if it is of service.—A DEVONSHIRE LADY. Jan. 25, 1889.

The Secret of Success.—Sterling Honesty of Purpose. Without it Life is a Sham!—A new invention is brought before the public, and commands success. A score of abominable imitations are immediately introduced by the unscrupulous, who, in copying the original closely enough to deceive the public, and yet not so exactly as to infringe upon legal rights, exercise an ingenuity that, employed in an original channel, could not fail to secure reputation and profit."—ADAMS.

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of Weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storms of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, APRIL 28, 1891.

General Intelligence.

[By Overland Mail.]

The Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 11th April; from N.W.P. and Madras to the 9th April; and from Bengal to the 8th April.

The following details are given in the Times of India concerning Lieutenant Grant's gallant defence:—"On the 6th instant the Manipuri troops, 3,000 strong, and with one rifled cannon, attacked Lieut. Grant, who had shut himself into the mud fort at Alaungtaung, close to Thobal. The Manipuris began the attack at 8 o'clock P.M. The attack lasted for three hours, and the Manipuris failing to take Lieut. Grant's position retreated to the capital, losing the Senapathy Prince and two generals, names unknown, killed, and ten of their soldiers in the attack. The number of wounded is unknown. Lieut. Grant had no casualties, but two of his transport elephants were struck by the enemy's rifle-bullets. The Manipuris fired their cannon off seven times. This repulse has had a demoralising effect on the Manipuri army and the chiefs, and Chinge Thadun was told by the villagers en route that they were all prepared to submit to the British force when it enters Manipur. On the 7th instant Chinge Thadun, en route for Tammu, by showing a flag was admitted into Alaungtaung Fort by Lieut. Grant, who there lent Thadun and his fellow-messenger ponies, directing them to deliver quick the letters written by Lieut. Grant to the relieving column. Thadun hurried down and met Captain Presgrave's party, one day's march from this, Captain Presgrave having returned from Langaton, where he was told Lieut. Grant's party had been captured. Upon getting Lieut. Grant's letter Captain Presgrave started back to assist Lieut. Grant, taking no rations, but only ammunition urgently required by Lieut. Grant. Chinge Thadun reports that Lieut. Grant's party were living upon grain found in Alaungtaung. Captain Presgrave has sent back to Tammu thirty prisoners, namely, one Manipuri subedar, two jemedars, two havildars, and ten sepoys surprised and captured by his mounted advance guard. Captain Presgrave has asked the officer commanding for rations. Thadun states the capital is strongly fortified; also its approaches on this side for six miles."

The outlook on the Black Mountain region is rather serious. The tribes are gathering in great force in the Surmana ranges.

Complications are reported from Burma. A Chin rising has occurred. Lieutenant Forbes, 2-3rd Goorkhas, was attacked by Khlanglang near Haka. Lieutenant Forbes was severely wounded, and five men were killed and twelve wounded.

Colonel Westmacott, commandant, 28th Pioneers, was presented with the D.S.O. by the Major-General Commanding the Poona district for excellent services rendered during the Chin-Lushai campaign.

Mr. G. E. Holland, first-grade officer of the Indian Marine, has been presented with a similar distinction for the excellent transport arrangements made by him on the Mylta river during the same expedition.

Captain MacIvor, Political Agent, Zhob, and Mrs MacIvor, have just gone from Dera Ismail Khan by the Gomal route to Apozai. This is the first time a lady has ever gone through the Gomal Pass. The march was a somewhat adventurous one.

The Governor of Bombay is still on tour in the Southern Mahratta country. A few days since he went out tiger-shooting, and His Excellency and those who went with him were very successful.

A serious riot occurred at Madras on Saturday night, April 4, near the lines of the 25th Madras Infantry. About a hundred Sepoys attacked the station, and severely injured several policemen. A number of arrests have been made.

Baboo Mohendronath Chatterjee, editor and proprietor of the Eastern Herald, published at Mhow, has been sentenced to nine months' imprisonment, and to pay a fine of Rs. 1,500, for publishing defamatory letters regarding Captain Frank, English secretary to H.H. the Maharajah Holkar.

A disastrous fire has occurred at the village of Nowarpur in Western Khandeish. Forty-five houses were destroyed, and damage done to the extent of Rs. 50,000.

Sir Madava Rao, "the Turgot of India," died on April 4.

A proposal is being considered to build docks at Madras at a cost of about ninety lakhs of rupees.

On Monday morning a guard was killed by one goods train running into another at Coorla.

Captain Bower, who captured Dad Mahomed, Mr. Dalgleish's murderer, starts almost immediately on another expedition towards Central Asia, Dr. Thorold being his only companion.

The 18th Hussars move from Mhow to Umballa, and the 7th Hussars from Secunderabad to Mhow, during the trooping season 1891-92.

Lord Wenlock has consented to become patron of the Madras School of Music.

A telegram from Rangoon states that the Government of India have ordered a formal and public inquiry into the charges made against Mr. Duke, late Deputy Commissioner of Pegu. Mr. Ward, Judicial Commissioner, Lower Burma, will conduct the inquiry.

No meeting of the Viceregal Legislative Council will be held this month.

Sir Edward Buck has gone to Pachmari to consult Mr. A. P. Macdonnel on revenue matters.

Sir F. Roberts has finally abandoned his tour, his presence being required at Simla.

The Chinese Commissioners reached Gnatong on April 4, and proceeded to Darjeeling to meet Mr. Hart and Mr. Paul.

There has been a disastrous fire in the native portion of Kemendine. Two hundred houses have been burnt, but no insurance companies are affected.

H.H. the Maharajah of Travancore, it is said, contemplates a trip to Calcutta early next month.

The total population of the Native States of the Punjab is 4,256,677.

The English church at Meiktila, which has just been finished, and was about to be handed over to the ecclesiastical authorities, has been burnt to the ground, and everything in it destroyed.

THE Grand Duke Alexis and the Grand Duke Sergius of Russia have arrived at Hurdwar on a visit to the Kumbh fair. The fair is now in full swing, great crowds arriving daily by road and train.

MR. G. W. FORREST, Director of Records of the Government of India, goes to Madras to look over the State papers at Fort St. George, which he found during his visit last year to contain valuable historical materials relating to Lord Clive's campaigns in Bengal.

SIR ALEXANDER MILLER, who succeeds Sir Andrew Scoble, has arrived at Simla and taken his seat under the usual salute.

MAJOR Evans, of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers, died of pneumonia at Palosi on April 5. This is the first fatality among British officers since the troops reached the Black Mountain.

NOTES.

THE latest news by telegram from India states that the avenging columns are closing upon Manipur. The Kohima and Tummu forces were within ten miles of the capital on Sunday, and were to move forward in concert at once, and Manipur was to be attacked yesterday, unless the Maharajah surrendered on being summoned to do so at 5 A.M. The reports state, however, that he and the Senapati have taken refuge in flight, which is likely enough. Telegrams this afternoon or to-morrow should bring the intelligence that Manipur is in British hands, and that those responsible for the murder of the English captives have been arrested.

A REUTER'S telegram hints at the possibility of the Maharajah offering resistance to the British advance. If he does, it can only be in the way of a demonstration, for the force, consisting of European and Native troops, with mountain-battery guns, is strong enough to quickly dispose of all such opposition.

THE strength of the corps ordered on service in Manipur consists of the 12th Burma Regiment, with seven British officers and eleven native, and 560 men; the 2–4th Gurkhas, with eight British officers, fourteen native officers, and 600 men; a wing of the 60th Rifles, with seven officers and 390 men; 200 of the Oxfordshire Regiment, and two guns of a mountain battery.

THE further details of the outbreak as received by post add but little to what has already been told in the telegrams. The explanation of the outburst is summarized thus:—The instructions which Mr. Quinton received before leaving Calcutta for Manipur were to recognize as Maharajah the Heir-Apparent of the State, Kula Chandra Singh. This man has been associated in various intrigues with the Commander-in-Chief, Fekendrajit Singh. They are both step-brothers of the ex-Maharajah, and organized the rising last September which ended in his abdication. Kula Chandra then became Maharajah, and Fekendrajit assumed the title of Jubraj. When Mr. Quinton arrived at Manipur he made the Maharajah acquainted with the decision of the Government, and negotiations followed. These coming to nothing, the attempt was made to arrest Fekendrajit, with the result that is already known.

MR. GRIMWOOD, the Manipur Resident who has been lately murdered, succeeded to a post to which a strange fatalism seems to have been attached. The Manipur Residency has a very unfortunate record. Some years ago Major Trotter, the Political Agent, died from a gunshot wound which he had received on the Burmese frontier. One of his successors died at his post; and another, Captain Primrose, whose mind was said to have been affected by depression resulting from the extreme isolation of his post, threw himself overboard from a Channel steamer. Mrs. Grimwood, who has escaped the sad fate of her husband, had been married to him for only three years.

A SHILLONG correspondent says that the greatest sympathy has been felt throughout that station for the two daughters of Mr. Quinton, who have been there for some time, their mother being in England. These young ladies, with all the English residents, had, of course, believed that their father's life was safe, and that he would be held only as a prisoner temporarily. This hope was followed by a period of harrowing anxiety, and then finally crushed by the terrible news of the murder of all the English captives.

THE fact that a number of the Calcutta Volunteers offered their services with the punitive Manipur expedition, and that such offer was accepted by the Commander-in-Chief, ought to give a new impetus to the Volunteer movement in India, which, it is said, has been somewhat languishing of late. The men selected are mostly of West Indian origin or descent, who were employed in Calcutta as stevedores or at the docks, and who had enrolled themselves in the West Indian company of the local corps. Two English officers of the corps take charge of them; and well armed, well fed, and well supplied with ammunition, they will doubtless prove ugly customers in more than one sense to any enemy they will meet. But will not Exeter Hall howl at this new wickedness of the Government of India in sending "bloodthirsty negroes" against mild Manipuris?

SIR WALTER SCOTT LOCKHART'S tale from the Borders is one of continued success against the turbulent tribes. His experience gained during his service in the Punjab has taught him how to deal with those very troublesome gentry. He wisely allows them no respite, but quickly follows up blow after blow. This will soon bring them to their senses, and restore peace and tranquillity on the frontier—at least for a time; but unless some definite and better frontier system is tried than that of the past, we shall always, as we have said before, be having these little wars on our hands. It is, however, not easy to tame tiger-cats in a political way.

THERE is a story told of a gentleman who, on being offered a baronetcy by George IV., respectfully asked what he had done to offend his Most Gracious Majesty. Lieutenant Grant must feel somewhat in the same position towards the Balloon Society of London, which has just presented him, through his father, with their gold medal. On what grounds, he may well ask, has this meddlesome society, which seems to busy itself with everything else except ballooning, taken upon itself the right to reward military merit? "Grant of Thobal" deserves well of his country, but the effusive patronage of him by the Balloon Society is surely an impertinence.

THE Census returns for British India, including Burmah and the Feudatory States, show an addition of about thirty millions to the population, which gives an average rate of increase of over 12 per cent. The rate of increase in French India has been much less. The Census there, as throughout the territories of the Republic, is taken every five years, and at the end of December 1886 the total population of French India stood at 279,000. On the 27th February last it stood at 283,000, giving an increase of a little over 5½ per cent. during the five years.

BY TELEGRAPH.

(Times Correspondents.)

THE MANIPUR EXPEDITION.

CALCUTTA, APRIL 27.

General Collett reached Kaitemaibi, 23 miles from Manipur, on Saturday. The Manipuris had erected a strong stockade there, but the garrison left before General Collett's arrival.

The inhabitants of Sengmai have offered submission and promised supplies.

The weather is very wet, but the health of the troops is good.

General Collett has sent a message to the Regent demanding the instant release of all the prisoners, and telling him that his only chance of mercy was to comply with the demand.

LATER.

A telegram dated from the camp at Sengmai to-day says :—

"Just as we were preparing to march upon Manipur, 12 miles distant, news comes that the Regent has fled to Chassad, a friendly Kuki village to the north-east; but the Senaputty, with 400 men, remains at the palace. Yesterday, according to one member of the Royal Family, who has sent General Collett a letter, the rebellious Princes fought among themselves. The Senaputty burnt his own house as being defiled, and fired some houses near. Statements are rather conflicting as to whether anyone remains at the palace. We march straight to the city prepared to fight if necessary."

APRIL 26.

Owing to the complete destruction of the telegraph-wires in Manipur, the news of the advancing column is meagre and comes slowly. So far, however, they appear to be all well, and they expect to meet at the capital to-morrow.

In a few days, therefore, we should have fuller details of the disaster and of the deaths of Mr. Quinton and his companions. Rumours from various native sources persistently assert that they were deliberately tortured and then murdered, their hands and feet being cut off before they were beheaded; and although people still try to cling to the hope that they were cut down at the moment of their capture, there is only too much reason to fear that the rumours are true.

It seems clear that the Government did not succeed in keeping the object of the mission secret, and it is understood that the ex-Maharajah, who is now in Calcutta, was officially informed some days before Mr. Quinton reached Manipur that the Jubraj was to be installed and the Senaputty deported, and it is therefore probable that some friends of the latter warned him. This would account for the excitement prevailing in Manipur and for the evident preparations for resistance.

The inquiry which is about to be held will probably throw light on the other doubtful points, as, for instance, whether it was really proposed to arrest the Senaputty during the durbar —a rumour which, it may be hoped, will be proved to be unfounded.

CALCUTTA, APRIL 25.

The Viceroy has telegraphed his personal congratulations to Lieutenant Grant for his gallant defence of Thobal. Lieutenant Grant, in replying, remarked with such men as he had the work was easy.

CALCUTTA, APRIL 24.

It is reported that 62 prisoners, consisting of clerks, servants, and followers, are still detained at Manipur.

CALCUTTA, APRIL 23.

The Kohima column crossed the frontier yesterday and reached Maithipham. They found three headless corpses of refugees on the road. Opposition is not expected before they reach Sengmai. It now seems certain that the Prince killed in the attack on Lieutenant Grant at Thobal was not the Senaputty but his younger brother.

Some further details of the disaster are dropping in slowly. The guard at the Treasury received no order to retire, and remained at their post till 5 o'clock, three hours after the Residency was evacuated, when they were rushed and taken prisoners. Mr. Grimwood's Diary shows that excitement prevailed at Manipur some days before Mr. Quinton's arrival, owing to the receipt of a telegram from Calcutta to the following effect: "A big tiger will shortly be caught in Manipur." The Regent and the Senaputty appear to have thought that Mr. Quinton was bringing the ex-Maharajah and meant to reinstate him, so troops were called into the capital, and the bridge at Sengmai was burnt; but when Mr. Quinton came without the Maharajah suspicions seem to have lulled for a time, and the Regent's band played at dinner. On the night of the 23rd apparently they somehow got an inkling of the design to arrest the Senaputty, and at once prepared to resist. It is now estimated that our total loss was 65 killed and 20 wounded. The killed include 55 missing, whose death is assumed.

RANGOON, APRIL 26.

General Graham's advance from Tamu was delayed until the morning of the 24th, when he left with the Staff and the Rifles. It is unlikely that he will reach Manipur to-morrow, the date at which the various columns were to meet there. In the present intensely hot weather forced marches are difficult and dangerous.

SENGMAI CAMP (via Kairong), APRIL 26.

The Kohima column arrived here to-day. This is the last halting-place on the road from Kohima to Imphal, the correct native designation of the Capital of Manipur, which is little over ten miles distant. The Maharajah has sent no prisoners to General Collett as he was ordered to do, and it is therefore possible that he may resist the British advance on the palace. Firing was heard to-day from the direction of the capital. A reconnoisance made to-day found the country deserted.

The force will advance down to Imphal to-morrow, and, acting in concert with the Tamu force, will attack the place unless the Maharajah surrenders on being summoned to do so at 5 A.M.

Letters received during the night report that the Maharajah and the Royal family have fled, and that the town has been fired and destroyed. The rumour is regarded as doubtful, however.

Two prisoners who have escaped to the British camp say that the Senaputty is in Manipur, and that only the Maharajah has fled.—Reuter.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, APRIL 27.

In the Black Mountain all remains quiet. The troops are only waiting for the remaining sections of the Ahazais to send in jargahs, after which they will probably return to India, leaving a small force to occupy the country till Hassim Ali is given up.

From the Miranzai expedition news is received that some jargahs have come in, but they are not representative. Two Afreedi sepoys of the 27th Punjab Regiment have deserted with their rifles and 70 rounds of ammunition.

APRIL 26.

After Thursday's fighting in the Miranzai Valley the enemy were completely dispersed from the neighbourhood of the Gulistan Camp, but reports have reached Sir W. Lockhart's headquarters of a large gathering of all the Orakzai clans, aided by some Afreedis, and it seems possible that some ten thousand men may be collected in a few days.

When this gathering has been dispersed the Shekhan and Mamazai Darbar clans will have to be dealt with. These clans raided the commissariat convoy at Darband Kotul on Thursday and killed four and wounded three men, besides hamstringing seven mules and carrying off fifteen. They also looted the post-bags and killed one of the troopers carrying them. Precautions are being taken to prevent the recurrence of these attacks and punish the raiders.

It is now reported that the enemy lost several men of influence in the fight at Mastaon on the 20th, among others Rustom, chief of the Rubbia Kheyl, the man who cut the throats and mutilated the bodies of the Sepoys who were taken prisoners on April 4; also the son of the late Wali Khān, the celebrated Moolah of Sapri, who gave so much trouble during the Afghan war.

The recent opinion expressed in a resolution of the House of Commons continues to be much discussed, and so strong is the feeling of both Europeans and natives against the increased disposition of irresponsible politicians in England to meddle with the fiscal arrangements of India that there is some talk of calling a public meeting to protest against such interference.

The following figures from a well-informed source may give some idea of the fresh taxation which would be required to replace the six crores of rupees which opium now yields—namely, the re-imposition of the import duties, 110 lakhs; the absorption of the famine grant, 150 lakhs; eight annas added to salt duty, 140 lakhs; double income-tax, 150 lakhs; increased provincial grants, 100 lakhs. Such a burden would be simply crushing.

From Viceroy, April 25.

"Miranzai. Lockhart, on the 23rd, attacked and routed enemy in Akhel country. Our casualties—killed, one Sepoy; wounded, one native officer, five Sepoys. Tribes asking to be allowed to send in jirgas. Permission has been granted."

CALCUTTA, APRIL 25.

On the morning of the 23rd instant the enemy took up a position two miles from the camp with three standards. Sir W. Lockhart ordered them to be turned out, and the 15th Sikhs led the advance with that object.

After an engagement lasting half an hour the enemy fled, followed by heavy artillery and infantry fire, from which they evidently suffered severely, as no attempt was made to follow the returning troops. In the evening they sent a message, asking to be allowed to send in Jirgahs.

Sir W. Lockhart's admirable conduct of the operations, giving them no breathing time, thoroughly demoralized them.

Our loss on Thursday was one Sepoy killed, a native officer and five men wounded.

Thirteen hundred Afreedis had come from Tirah to help the Urakzais, and took part in the fight. They also asked to be allowed to come in.

CALCUTTA, APRIL 24.

A telegram from Gulistan dated the 22nd states that on that day Sir W. Lockhart advanced into the Akhel country. This tribe have been the worst behaved on the Miranzai border during the last ten years, and they were not visited by the late expedition because they submitted at the last moment. They, however, joined the attack on our outposts on the 4th.

The 2nd Punjab came in for the most fighting, losing one killed and nine wounded. Other corps lost four wounded. Hard fighting and heavy firing continued from 8 till 4 o'clock. The enemy evidently suffered much. Many men of other tribes joined them. Nine Akhel villages, with towers, were destroyed. More fighting is expected.

It appears that some British subjects were killed while fighting against us.

Sir Oliver St. John goes to Beloochistan as Governor-General's Agent in place of Sir Robert G. Sandeman, taking furlough. General Prendergast, Agent at Baroda, will probably succeed Sir Oliver St. John in Mysore.

The Supreme Government have requested the Bengal Government to warn district magistrates to act with great care and caution in applying the Age of Consent Act. They suggest that whenever investigation is necessary it would be better to entrust it to an experienced native magistrate than to a police inspector. Divisional commissioners are to submit yearly reports on the working of the Act.

CALCUTTA, APRIL 24.

The Englishman publishes an authoritative article on Sir J. Pease's resolution in regard to the Indian opium trade passed by the House of Commons on April 10. Discussing the practical aspects of the matter, the journal points out that the adoption of the course indicated in the resolution would involve the stopping of a traditional custom of many millions of people, including the Sikhs and other warlike races, and would cause a general revolt. Its enforcement would be a thousand times worse than the universal application of the principle of local option in Great Britain. The loss of the opium revenue, pursues the article, would only be made good by reimposing the cotton duties, absorbing the famine grant, adding eight annas to the salt-tax, and doubling the income-tax. The increase of the salt-tax would cause misery and death to thousands, and the only alternative would be for England to pay six millions sterling to the Indian Government.—Reuter.

MAITHIPHAM, APRIL 22.

The Kohima column crossed the frontier to-day. The troops have met with no opposition so far, and found on their arrival here the place had been abandoned by the Maniporees. The telegraph wire has been repaired as far as here.

Sixty-two British prisoners are reported to be still in the hands of the Maharajah. The headless corpses of three refugees were found on the road to-day.

KERONG, APRIL 25.

The Kohima column advanced to Mayangkong to-day. The advanced guard exchanged shots with the Manipuri scouts outside the village of Mayangkong, which was destroyed, as traces of Mr. Melville's property were found in it. The rebels evacuated the place after a volley from the British. Heavy rain is falling.

BURMAH.

RANGOON, APRIL 27.

Mr. Fulton, District and Sessions Judge in the Bombay service, has been appointed Judicial Commissioner of Lower Burmah, in place of Mr. W. E. Ward, who has succeeded the late Mr. Quinton as Chief Commissioner of Assam.—Reuter.

RANGOON, APRIL 26.

In the Bhamo district the Hanton column, under Major Smythe, R.A., have surprised and captured, after slight resistance, three Lushi villages.

According to the latest information the Wuntho Tsawbwa is at the Amber mines, which have never yet been visited by Europeans. Some difficulty may be experienced in rationing the garrison left at the Jade mines.

From criticisms published on the proposed annexation of Momeik, it is apparently believed in some quarters that the measure would result in advancing the frontier of Burmah towards China. The annexation of Momeik would, however, not advance the frontier by a single foot, Momeik being surrounded by British territory.

RANGOON, APRIL 24.

Lieutenant Nicholson and one private of the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry have died of sunstroke at Mansi, north of Wuntho.

OPERATIONS IN BURMA.

RANGOON, APRIL 23.

General Wolseley held a review and Durbar at Sanka on the 17th inst. Several important Tsawbwas and Kachin and Chinese traders attended, and expressed pleasure at the fixing of a British post at the Jade Mines.

General Wolseley has arranged with some important Chinamen for the capture of the Wuntho Tsawbwa, who has fled to China.

SIMLA, APRIL 23.

Intelligence brought by a spy confirms the complete rout of the Orakzais on the 20th inst., with 300 killed and wounded. The fact that the enemy abandoned their dead is confirmatory of this news.

The Orakzais opposed the British force unaided. Two other tribes who were awaiting the result of events hastily retreated when the defeat of the Orakzais was apparent. The enemy was completely surprised by the King's Royal Rifle Corps and the Ghoorkas.

THE STORY OF MANIPUR.

THE origin of the trouble in Manipur is to be found in a domestic revolution, which in September last resulted in the abdication of the then reigning Maharajah in favour of his step-brother, the Julraj, or Heir-Apparent, Kula Chandra Singh. The deposed ruler accepted the situation readily enough; he had no following in the country and no force of character. He professed a desire to withdraw to Benares. He left Manipur, and is at present in Calcutta. The Government of India saw no reason to interfere with this arrangement; it was decided to accept the fait accompli and acknowledge Kula Chandra Singh, who, as it happened, had taken little or no part in the revolution, which was principally the work of his younger brother, Fekendrajit Singh. This scion of the reigning house had more than once fomented trouble in his elder brother's principality, and the Government of India had some time since given orders for his expulsion from the State, but on a promise of amendment he was unfortunately allowed to remain. Having succeeded in ousting the ex-Maharajah and placing his next brother on the gadi, he assumed the title of Julraj or Heir-Apparent, and took a leading part in the business of administration. It does not seem uncharitable to suppose that he intended to use Kula Chandra Singh as a warming-pan, and replace him in his turn by a Julraj. The Government of India refused to acknowledge Fekendrajit Singh as Heir-Apparent and Commander-in-Chief. Mr. Quinton, the Chief Commissioner of Assam, when recently in Calcutta, received personally the instructions of the Government—to proceed to Manipur with a suitable escort, and make known the decision of the Paramount Power that Kula Chandra Singh should occupy the gadi, but Fekendrajit Singh should not be recognized as Julraj. Mr. Quinton did not anticipate any difficulty in this mission, which fell naturally to him as Chief Commissioner; Mr. Grimwood, the Political Officer in charge at Manipur, being one of the district officers of Assam, and subordinate to him. He considered that two hundred Gurkhas would be a sufficient escort, but by the order of the Government that number of Gurkhas was raised to four hundred, in addition to a hundred men already at Manipur. There was also a force of military police numbering some two hundred. The Gurkha regiments are, or are generally supposed to be, armed with Martini-Henry rifles; the military police had Sniders. This circumstance had an unforeseen but very disastrous influence on the fate of the compact little force.

So far as is known, the Chief Commissioner and the officers accompanying him observed no indications of hostile intentions on the march to Manipur or on their arrival. Mr. Quinton left Calcutta with Mr. Woods, the Assistant Commissioner, and Lieutenant Gordon. Colonel Skene was in command of two hundred men of the 42nd Gurkhas with Lieutenants Lugard and Chatterton, and Surgeon Calvert. One hundred men of this regiment, under Lieutenant Simpson, were already in Manipur. Two hundred men of the 44th Gurkhas were under Captain Boileau and Lieutenant Brackenbury. Nothing is known of the aspect of affairs when the Chief Commissioner and his escort arrived on the 20th March. A durbar was convened for the 22nd, at which the Regent, who aspires to be Maharajah, appeared, but his brother, the Senapata, or Commander-in-Chief, was not present. The Chief Commissioner, therefore, declined to receive the Regent. In the afternoon the Resident, Mr. Grimwood, proceeded to the palace and had an interview with the Regent, and, it would appear, impressed upon him that it was essential that the Commander-in-Chief should appear next day at the adjourned durbar. On the 23rd, however, the Senapata was again absent. The Resident had a second interview with the Regent, and, according to the Deputy Commissioner of Silchar, "probably intimated to him that the Government of India would not recognize him as Maharajah, and the Commander-in-Chief would be arrested by force." This intimation, it is clear from what followed, had not the effect that was intended. The Commander-in-Chief was not delivered up by the Regent, probably for the best of reasons—the military force was at the disposal of the Commander. Did the Maharajah point this out to the Resident? How came it that the Resident himself was not aware that the Commander-in-Chief had at hand a force, outnumbering that under Colonel Skene seven-fold and provided with four guns, the gift of the Government of India? Mr. Quinton, just arrived in Manipur, had no opportunity of making himself acquainted with the relative strength of the armed forces close at hand under the orders of a Commander-in-Chief who was duly apprised that it was the intention to arrest him. If it be true that the six thousand men constituting the army of the State—an army which had some tradition of military discipline since the time when it co-operated with British troops against neighbouring Burmese and Nagas—was actually in and around the palace, it is astonishing that its presence was not suspected by the Resident, who twice visited the city to interview the Maharajah. It is strange that neither he nor his escort observed anything to suggest circumspection. Nearly as inexplicable is the action of Colonel Skene, who, before dawn the next morning, procceded to carry into effect the orders of the Chief Commissioner to arrest the Senapata in his own palace, where his troops were massed. No reconnaissance of any sort is spoken of; two hundred and fifty Gurkhas were marched to the Julraj's palace—the Deputy Commissioner of Cachar says "into" the palace, but this must be an error. The Deputy Commissioner of Silchar states that the number of men sent to arrest the Senapata was twenty-five; probably that number actually entered the palace—"when the action commenced." The Cachar telegram addressed to the Foreign Office states that at the palace there were four guns in position and six thousand men. The number of men may be an exaggeration, but it is sufficiently clear that the Gurkhas were overmatched in the serious engagement which followed. Lieutenant Brackenbury was fatally wounded; a gallant Gurkha, named Joymany Thappa, ran forward under a heavy fire and carried him to a place of safety. The Residency was in turn attacked, and the Gurkhas were withdrawn from the palace. The firing continued all day; at eight in the evening the supply of ammunition had given out. It is not easy to understand how the supply could have failed so soon unless there was very wild firing. The men appear to have been behind some shelter at the Residency, for it was not until the guns shelled the building at a later stage that it became untenable. The difference between the Martini and the Snider ammunition is assigned as one cause of the lamentable failure of the supply, but, as we have said, the five hundred sepoys could not have suffered from this cause, as it is expressly stated that they had each seventy rounds, and all alike had rifles of the same pattern. The military police were perhaps in worse case; if their Snider cartridges gave out they could not avail themselves of any Martini cartridges from the cartridge-boxes of the killed or wounded Gurkhas on whom the brunt of the fighting apparently fell.

Be that as it may, at eight o'clock in the evening an armistice was arranged. Mr. Quinton, with Colonel Skene, the Resident, Mr. Grimwood, Lieutenant Simpson, who was in command of the one hundred Gurkhas, formed the guard at the Residency, Lieutenant Cossins and a bugler proceeded towards the palace to meet the Maharajah. They were pushed into the gateway of a military post, and found themselves prisoners. The question naturally arises why the Chief Commissioner himself, accompanied by the Resident and the Military Commandant of the beleaguered garrison, should have gone forth to parley under such circumstances. That it was desirable at such a moment to bring the Maharajah to a sense of the peril in which his own prospects were placed by the hostile action of his brother, can be easily understood. But the Resident would have been the appropriate medium of communication on the 24th, as he had already been on the 22nd and the 23rd. Little difficulty was to be apprehended in treating with the Maharajah; the danger, as the event proved, was that the Commander-in-Chief would requite the attempt to arrest himself by securing the Civil and Military Chiefs of the expedition. Further information will probably supply the only reasonable explanation for the unusual course taken by the Chief Commissioner, the Resident, and Colonel Skene in putting all their heads at once in the lion's mouth. It may have been that the Residency was no longer in a condition to continue the defence, and the only thing to do was at any risk to bring the fighting to a close without expressly and formally capitulating. The going forth of the principal officials appears to have had the effect of suspending the attack, which did not recommence till midnight, when the guns were brought within a hundred and fifty yards of the Residency and shelled it. No explanation is given why the guns when brought so perilously close were not rushed by the Gurkhas, kookrie in hand. This course, which would seem obvious, was not taken; two hours later, the place having become untenable, the little garrison, with Mrs. Grimwood in its midst, retired in some disorder, marching all day on the 26th; they fortunately met Captain Cowley's detachment. It was found impracticable to return to Manipur to rescue the prisoners, owing to the want of ammunition and of food. It is stated in the telegram from Cachar that while Captain Cowley's party had Martinis, the retreating Gurkhas had Sniders; but this is incredible. The situation is unfortunate and vexatious, but it will soon be retrieved. The converging forces already in movement will have occupied Manipur and punished the mad temerity of the Commander-in-Chief and his mountaineers within less than a fortnight. The only question then to be discussed is whether Manipur shall be annexed or placed under some Chief who can maintain order in that remote conglomerate of mountains. The area of the State of Manipur is eight thousand square miles—only six hundred and fifty miles less than that of Baroda; but so sterile and inaccessible is the greater part of its surface that its total population is only 221,000, while that of the Gaekwar's Dominions is two millions and a half. The Manipuris themselves are seldom troublesome; there is no doubt that the chief part of the fighting on the 24th and 25th of March was done by Kukis and Nagas brought to the city by the Senapata in anticipation of Mr. Quinton's unwelcome visit.—Bombay Gazette.

PRESIDENCY JOTTINGS.

BENGAL.

(April 8.)

THE men of the Bengal Presidency Reserve Volunteer Battalion are likely to be shortly converted into an active Corps. It is proposed to hold monthly drills all the year round, to keep the men in training and lighten the work.

THE Ardodnya Yoga, the recent bathing festival, which brought together multitudes of Hindus from various parts of the country to cities on the banks of the Ganges, is said to have enriched the Eastern Bengal railways, which are said to have cleared a fabulous amount of rupees by the passenger traffic during the occasion.

THE statue of Lord Dufferin, intended for erection at the south end of the Red road, has arrived in Calcutta. His lordship is represented in a standing posture, in full court dress, and wearing his orders and decorations. The likeness is very good, and the statue will form a valuable addition to the Calcutta collection of eminent men in bronze and marble, whose originals have figured prominently in Indian history.

GANJA smokers in Bengal will, observes a Calcutta paper, be sorry to learn that the local Government has determined to enhance the duty on the flat variety from Rs. 4-8 to Rs. 5 per seer. What is even more important, the selling price of opium from the Treasuries has also been raised from Rs. 28 to Rs. 30 per seer. This latter increase refers only to certain districts near or bordering on Assam, viz. Jalpaiguri, Rungpur, Maimansingh, Tipperrah, Bogra, Pubna, and Dacca. It was, doubtless, necessary to maintain a certain degree of reticence regarding these changes, for vendors would have taken advantage of early information to lay in large stocks at the old rates of duty. Those, however, who have purchased licenses for the year 1891–1892 at the settlement just concluded will have some reason to complain of the surprise of which they are now informed.

MADRAS.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS has consented to become Patron of the New School of Music.

MR. S. MOSS, the Traffic Manager of the Madras Railway, has received from the Czarewitch, as a souvenir of his journey on the Madras Railway, a silver cigarette-case inlaid with gold and bearing the Russian coat-of-arms set with a diamond, a sapphire being set as the button of the spring opening the cover.

THAT matters are assuming a serious aspect in the Chingleput District, writes the Madras Times, is clear from the anxiety which the authorities are evincing as to the condition of the labouring classes. Mr. H. F. Clogstoun, Second Member of the Board of Revenue, accompanied by Mr. Tremenheere, the Collector, proceeded to Chingleput on Thursday last, and on arrival there, left at once for the village of Madiyathur, near Tripporur. On their way, they inspected various irrigation works on hand; and from their camp at Madiyathur, they went about in company with Mr. Holmes, the Sub-Collector, and Mr. Mahomed Ali Sahib Hazri, the Tahsildar, and inspected several of the affected villages, and at Siddavur they found the Pariahs in a really distressed condition, as reported by the local authorities. Grain doles were immediately ordered for some of the Pariahs who were found to be in a most deplorable condition; and it is not unlikely that relief camps will soon be established for the distressed people. The Sub-Collector and the Tahsildar are constantly on the move throughout the taluq, and they have, we understand, suggested more works for the affected villages. Messrs. Clogstoun and Tremenheere spent three days in camp and returned to Madras on Saturday last.

MESSRS. WM. WATSON & Co., the Shipping and Army Agents, of 28, Apollo Street, Bombay, opened last month a new branch of their business in Kurrachee, where they were able to secure an excellent position over the Agra Bank premises. There is constantly a growing demand in Kurrachee for the particular kind of agency work which Messrs. Wm. Watson & Co. make their speciality, and they will be able to serve there a large clientèle from Simla, Quetta, and south to Kurrachee. There was a distinct need in Kurrachee for such a business as Messrs. Watson & Co. have opened there.

SPEAKING at the annual meeting of the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge, held on Wednesday at the Cathedral Boys' School, the Bishop of Bombay gave an interesting sketch of the extensive and varied operations of the Society in different parts of the world, and asked the supporters of the Branch Society in Bombay not to think that it was doing a little peddling book-selling business in a corner, but to remember that it was doing its best to fill up one little blank in the work of a Society whose operations were as extensive as the Church herself and as varied as her needs. On the motion of the Rev. Mr. Scott, Acting Archdeacon of Bombay, seconded by Professor Oxenham, the annual report was adopted.

THE last stone of the dam constructed by Messrs. Glover & Company for the Bombay Municipality in connection with the Tansa Waterworks, was laid by Mr. H. A. Acworth, C.S., the Municipal Commissioner, on the 3rd inst. At a breakfast which followed the ceremony, Mr. Acworth proposed the health of Mr. E. Bedford, representative of the firm of Messrs. Glover & Company, and, in doing so, spoke at considerable length of the magnitude of the work, the numerous difficulties the contractors had encountered, and the highly satisfactory manner in which the same had been surmounted. Mr. Acworth further observed that while it was impossible to convey by either figures or words anything like an adequate idea of the vastness of the undertaking, he might state that the 11,000,000 cubic feet of masonry which had been used in the dam were sufficient to make a wall 100 miles long, 10 feet high, and 2 feet thick; or, in other words, enough material had been used to build a wall of those dimensions which would surround Bombay three times over.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAUB.

A FALLING off in the passenger traffic was responsible for a drop of some fifty thousand rupees in the earnings of the North-Western Railway last week. The receipts for the year ended last Saturday, show a total decrease as compared with the preceding year of some seventeen lakhs.

MR. SPEDDING has arrived in Lahore, charged by Sir Lepel Griffin on behalf of the Rothschilds, with the negotiations for the Kashmir Railway. The negotiations will be carried on through the Foreign Office; and it is stated that the Rothschilds are perfectly willing to advance the money if terms can be arranged. Mr. Spedding leaves at once for Kashmir.

THE recent retirements of Brigade-Surgeons Condon, Gray, and Moir, writes the Lahore military paper, will cause another run of promotions among Surjeons-Major of the Indian Medical Service. There now remain only five Brigade-Surgeons who entered the service before 1860, none of whom are, under service rules, eligible for promotion to the administrative grade, and all of whom will retire this or next year. Then the comparatively junior officers of the batch of 1865 will come to the head of the list, and, as we have previously announced, three of them will receive administrative rank this year owing to the retirement of Deputy Surgeons-General Thornton, Farrell, and Morice, of the Punjab Frontier Force, the Punjab Medical Department, and the Presidency District respectively. After these changes there will in all probability be rather a block for a few years, but this can well be endured.

ACCEPTING THE INEVITABLE.

THE amendment of the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure recently introduced by Sir Andrew Scoble, has been passed; and instead of speculating on the results, we are in a position to watch the effects. It is too early at present to make sure of what will happen during the next few months, but the suddenness with which the agitation of those who are opposed to the Bill has been stilled, may be accepted as suggestive of a future of calm. When the Bill was before the Viceregal Legislative Council, Sir George Chesney ventured to predict that with the passing of the measure India would see the cessation of the agitation that had sprung up against it. Sir Charles Elliott endorsed this opinion, and so did many men whose ideas or beliefs were not made known to the public. The passing of the measure was regarded as the signal for agitation to end, and it was widely thought that Hinduism would act again as it acted in the case of the suppression of sati, and resign itself to the inevitable. No religion more diligently inculcates principles of resignation, and while there is a limit beyond which interference with Hinduism would not be calmly tolerated, there has been nothing in the Age of Consent Bill to justify a belief that this limit was even approached by any consequence of the Bill. It is true that religion cannot be said to have been left quite uninterfered with by the Bill, if we are to accept the definitions of religion that have been given by various agitators. In every civilized country, indeed, marriage cannot be treated as totally distinct from, and unconnected with, religion; any alteration in marriage laws must involve some amount of interference with the religion of the people concerned; but in this instance the alteration is not one opposed to the principles of Hinduism, nor is it one, we should say, that is contrary to the teachings of that religion as interpreted by the most reliable authorities. It has been asserted that it is contrary to these teachings, but there has been nothing to support the assertion in such manner as to incline us to accept it as true.

Digitized by Google

The subject is one of great importance, and much may depend upon the manner in which Hindus now act. In a short time it is possible that the "Age of Consent" will become an almost forgotten term, the Hindus accepting the new law and so conducting themselves as to make it a dead letter. But the time for shelving the subject has not yet arrived; for the Government has to fulfil the promises of the Viceroy. It has to watch very closely the administration of the new law should its application to any particular case or cases be found to be necessary. It has further to feel the pulse of the people, so as to judge whether the excitement that was noticeable in some quarters a short time ago has disappeared, or if resentment and irritation are merely being nursed in secret. The whole history of the British rule in India has been one in which Hinduism has been submitted to trying ordeals and tests. It is generally admitted that Christianity, though it has failed to establish itself in this country in any great force, has caused an awakening of Hinduism. What has happened in other countries has happened also in India. Two religions have been compared. Let it be granted that each has faults when it is judged in the light of the practice of its followers. Let it be admitted, to speak more plainly, that however lofty may be the teachings of Christianity its practice in this country, speaking of Christians generally, not of individuals, has been open to some severe criticism on the part of Hindus. Still, the comparison that has been invited between Christianity and Hinduism has had one natural consequence. It has caused many Hindus to realize that their religion has deteriorated, that it has not been preserved according to the teachings of the highest Shastraic authorities. This has caused an awakening, followed by close study of these authorities. They have not all been found to agree, perhaps; for the process of contamination and adulteration is not one of modern growth; yet it has been possible to derive from their teachings a religion which, when compared with modern Hinduism as practised to-day, shines like a diamond of the first water when set side by side with the lump of crystal that does duty in its place in the jewellery of some person who desires to make a show without having the means wherewithal to purchase a real gem.

The question has been put repeatedly: "Is this particular form of Hinduism compatible with morality, with civilization?" And frequently the answer given by Hindus themselves has been, "No." Now it need not be urged that Christianity also has its faults. Hindus may help Christians to purify their religion and may receive help in turn. If any such spirit of mutual help and friendly criticism is noticeable, the results should be good. But the first essential is that when a fault is pointed out and seen, it should be acknowledged; amendment should be made promptly and with a good grace. That it is sometimes hard to act according to a high ideal is known to Hindu and to Christian alike; all the more reason then that each should strive to set a good example. Here, in this case, we may judge the matter that has been under discussion by the light of the Shastras. The result is disagreement on the part of those who should be supposed to know best how to read their Shastras. Or, we may judge by the light of morality and civilization; and even those who realize that they have still to make progress before they can consider themselves among the most civilized, will admit that there is much that has cried out for reform. No comparison need be instituted between the civilization of the Hindu and that of the Christian, that of the Frenchman and that of the Englishman or the American. There is a broad moral ground upon which Hindu and Christian stand together; and, regarded from this ground, the change that has now been made in the law bearing upon Hindu child-marriages cannot be said to be unjust to Hinduism, nor to be too far-reaching, nor to have been passed too soon. If the matter be studied in this manner, Hindus will accept the inevitable and lay their plans like the Raikwad Brahmans of Ahmedabad, so that the "Scoble" Act may pass harmless over their heads, having brought about the reform that it wished to introduce and yet having led to no criminal prosecutions. If Hindus conduct themselves prudently, following the examples now referred to, we shall soon see the fulfilment of Sir George Chesney's full prediction that, "in a very short time the entire Hindu community will look back with surprise and regret" at the opposition that the Bill received, and will recognize the wisdom and justice that enforced the change, and "the advantages to themselves and to their reputation among the nations which will result from bringing their practical conduct into harmony with the dictates of humanity."—Madras Times.

THE KARACHI ROUTE.

The new Karachi route for trooping to and from England, the experimental trial of which has just been sanctioned by the Government of India, will probably effect economies both in the military and marine budgets. The districts which will use the route are the Peshawar, Rawalpindi, Lahore, Sirhind, Meerut (excluding Muttra), Quetta, and Sind districts. It has been estimated that the traffic by this route will amount to about 10 shiploads (5 out and 5 home), or say, 11,500 persons, including officers and their families, men, women, and children. It is proposed to run these troopships consecutively, so that the route need not be kept open longer than four months, namely, from the 15th November to the 15th March. The depot, therefore, which is to be located at Karachi, and not at Landi, as at first proposed, will be open for only five months, and the staff will be a temporary one. Whether a temporary staff will be able to work a large embarkation depôt like this satisfactorily or not is a question not very easy of decision; but the experiences, we expect, of the first season will show that, to make things work as smoothly as they now do at Deolali, at least half of the staff must be permanent. At present at Deolali the whole of the staff is permanent, but, of course, there the season really lasts eight months, the first troopship arriving at the end of September and the last one leaving about middle of April. In addition to the actual passing through of troops, there is the preparation for them at the beginning of the season, and the winding up of accounts, &c. at the end of it. However, as we have said, the experimental trial of the Karachi route next season will clearly show the necessities in this respect. The gain to the Marine Estimates results from the Karachi route saving one day's sailing each way, while the gain to the Military Estimates is brought about by savings for railway charges, and for sea fares between Karachi and Bombay for troops from the Sind and Quetta districts, who now proceed to the latter port. Of course, there will also be a gain by the increased traffic thrown on the North-Western Railway, which is a State line, and the withdrawal of this traffic from private lines. The rest-camps along the new route will be at Dadu, Reti, Sher Shah, and Mian Mir, and the accommodation for the first year will be in tents; though, we believe, if the route be permanently adopted, it is intended to construct huts at the different rest-camps. There would seem to be no reason why the route should not be permanently adopted, for even if the pecuniary gain is only small after the up-keep of the route has been deducted, still the strategic gain, in view to frontier defence, is important.—Civil and Military Gazette.

THE NATIVE PRESS OF BENGAL.

The events which led to the passing of the Age of Consent Bill, and the prolonged and acrimonious discussions in the Native Press to which the measure gave rise, will not, it is hoped, be allowed to pass unheeded. Nothing that has happened in Lower Bengal in recent years has so clearly and unmistakably shown that the Native Press—with a few honourable exceptions which only serve to prove the rule—is thoroughly unscrupulous and disloyal, and does not hesitate to lend itself to the designs of those mischievous agitators—principally disappointed graduates and school-boys—the raison d'être of whose existence is the abuse of the action of Government and its officers. Where is this to end? It is vain for the Viceroy and the members of his Council in their speeches, and for District Officers and their subordinates by their personal intercourse with the people, to endeavour to explain the measures of Government, when the wilful and pernicious misrepresentations of the Native Press are allowed to circulate among the so-called "educated" classes, and through them to filter down to the lower orders who have hitherto been proverbially content with our rule and administration. Of whatever nature their grievances may be, they are due generally to the action of their own countrymen. There is no greater oppressor of the Bengali than the Bengali himself. Is there any other civilized Government in the world that would have allowed the Native Press to take up and propagate the cry of the Hindu religion being in danger merely because in an already existing section of the Penal Code the figure ten was changed to twelve.

Is the hope, expressed in the Viceroy's speech on the Bill, that this misrepresentation will quickly die out likely to be realized? The agitators and Congress-wallahs in Bengal are not likely to give up such a favourable opportunity of notoriety among their countrymen and of open hostility to a measure designed for the protection of their own children from the most barbarous and degrading outrages. The very shame of the exposé has given vitality and virulence to their policy of opposition to all Government measures as such. It may be said that, so far as Lower Bengal is concerned, there is no political danger in this policy—that the criticisms of the Native Press are merely a safety-valve for the escape of seditious and hostile virus which might otherwise fester in and poison the body politic. The sting of a mosquito on the hand is not usually dangerous in itself—it is a mere passing irritation which is soon forgotten. But there are conditions of health when even so apparently trivial a cause may entail the most serious consequences. Is there not some danger that the constant and studied misrepresentations of the Native Press in Bengal will, if allowed to continue unchecked, in time so act on the whole Indian body politic as to produce a condition so dangerous that one sting of extra vigour, like that of the recent articles on the Age of Consent Bill, will produce a dangerous condition and require a drastic remedy? Has not the time already come for the establishment of some sort of censorship over the Native Press? No one would more rejoice to see it established than those really loyal and enlightened native gentlemen who are the first to suffer the most virulent abuse at its hands whenever their own honest opinions or actions run counter to the avowed policy of the unscrupulous agitator. No one will rejoice more than they that the Government has stood firm and passed the Age of Consent Bill without paying any heed to the misleading and disloyal inuendoes of the Native Press, and they would be the first to welcome any measure for the control and regulation of what amounts to a grave public nuisance, fraught with possibilities of serious political danger.

A few days ago a native paper published in the mofussil suggested that the Bengalis should, if the Age of Consent Bill were passed, boycott all Manchester and other goods of English manufacture, and so bring the Government of India to its bearings through Sir David Barbour's pocket. This can hardly be called "seditious" language, but its tone is calculated to do infinite harm, and to bring the Government and its officers into contempt among the more manly races of Upper India for allowing it to continue unchecked. The press in most countries is looked upon as a means of education, of spreading truth and enlightenment; but the influence of the bulk of the native papers published in Bengal is exerted in the contrary direction, and it is high time for Government to recognize the disease and to apply the remedy. During the recent meeting in opposition to the Age of Consent Bill on the Maidan, it is well known that utterly indefensible language was used by some of the public speakers, who did their utmost to stir up bad feeling against the Government. Some of the leading native papers have given themselves over to furious denunciation of constituted authority, to deliberate and perverse misdirection of public opinion, and to the coarsest abuse of English domestic life. It is impossible, from the very nature of such writing, to give examples; nor would it serve any good purpose to do so. Anyone who is curious can easily satisfy himself of the truth of this statement. The wonder, indeed, is that the authorities have not interfered on the ground of decency, for the pages of even the more reputable journals from day to day abound with passages the publication of which would certainly be promptly interdicted in any European country. At various times, in recent years, some one or other of the journals of England, in the fervour of a moral crusade, has temporarily forgotten the conveniences, and has promptly paid the penalty in the shape of heavy fines and imprisonment. But at the present moment in Bengal every little paper is executing a moral war-dance which would throw the wildest excesses of the English press completely into the shade. Government might well consider the seditious side of the question, but meantime what Mr. Nugent calls the "floods of filthy literature" are an affair for the law officers to look to, and there ought surely to be some means available of dealing with the nuisance.—Englishman.

THE KARUN RIVER.

A REPORT on the progress of Mohamerah and the Karun River trade contains some interesting information. What was only recently an inconsiderable riverside town has now become a thriving and popular port, at which the steamers of the British India Company and the Bombay and Persian Gulf Steam Navigation Company trading with Busrah now make regular calls. Grain is now shipped by lighters direct for Europe at Mohamerah, and in the river the Euphrates and Tigris Steam Navigation Companies run a fortnightly steamer service to Ahwaz in conjunction with that running to Shushter. In addition to this the Nasery Company launched an imported steam launch, which, towing two lighters, communicates with Ahwaz. As to the products Mr. M'Douall, who has prepared the report for the Foreign Office, states that though a large quantity of wheat is produced on the Karun much more could be grown. Oil-seed, flax, and roses are cultivated, a good quality of rose-water being made from the latter on the island of Khedr. Dyeing and tanning constitute considerable industries at Mohamerah. Good silver-work is also done by the Sabaean community. During the year reported upon the town has greatly developed. Numerous new public buildings, commenced at the junction of the Karun with the Shat-el-Arab, have been completed, including a Government house, landing-place and stores; a telegraph office, a battery and infantry barracks, have been built on the opposite side of the Karun. Unfortunately, the landing-stage is too far from low-water mark to be of much service, but it is used by river steamers which anchor a lighter between it and the steamer so as to form a bridge. During the year also the telegraph line between Dizful, Shushter, and Ahwaz was laid, though on the date of the report the section between the two latter towns only was working, the communication between Dizful and Teheran being reported seldom perfect. At Ahwaz, to complete the service, the line is to be carried across the river, and thence to Mohamerah. The Nasery Company has imported a light steel tramway from England, and by its means cargo is conveyed across the rapids. The work of the customs department, it appears, is not yet fully organized, and some hindrance to the carrying trade of the river has been occasioned, as at present goods owned by Persian merchants are liable to duty at every place they pass through. Goods are still sent by caravan for Mohamerah to places beyond Shuster, in spite of the advantages offered by steam conveyance. These are, however, difficulties which are not anticipated to prove very serious, and next year's report is expected to tell of far greater progress in every direction.—Bombay Gazette.

PENNY PLAIN, TUPPENCE COLOURED.

MR. WILLIAM DIGBY, of the Indian Political Agency, thinks that in India "foreigners skim the cream off every pint of milk, and take some of the milk itself." This remark will not be found in his letter, which we publish to-day, on "the Economic Condition of the People of India," but in the current number of India, a journal which is always interesting as affording the most remarkable instances of how little grains of solid grievance can sometimes be found buried amidst the most stupendous heaps of loquacious chaff. Of course by using the word chaff we do not mean to imply that Mr. Digby's journal ever perpetrates such a thing as a "goak" (with the exception perhaps of a "grim" one after the manner of Mr. Gladstone). The remark about the milk and cream, as a remark, will not be considered very original, but it is worthy of notice as forming the key to a gay series of "coloured diagrams" with which Mr. Digby has thought fit to embellish his usually sombre publication. Anything can be proved by statistics, but statistics with coloured diagrams, thinks Mr. Digby, must be simply irresistible. Accordingly he prepares his blue, red, and black paints (black, of course, for India), and daubs them over his parallelograms, divided by vertical and horizontal lines, to prove a vast deal of things about the iniquities of the India Office and the deplorable results of British rule in this unhappy country. The "startling facts" which Mr. Digby has pictured in these "graphic tables" will be found very startling by those who cannot resist the glamour of paint, but those whose heads are screwed on the right way will pause and (to use a lacteal simile, such as Mr. Digby does) chew the cud of meditation before accepting coloured diagrams which may turn out to be "coloured" in more ways than one. In the very first of these pictorial exhibitions they will see a comparison of the "income per head per annum" in India with the same in other countries. They will observe, however, that the countries compared with India are European countries, and also Canada and Australia; but not a single Oriental country is represented, although this is obviously the only fair comparison possible, seeing how enormously the cost of living differentiates in Europe and in Asia. Of the brief footnotes which Mr. Digby appends to the diagrams we can only say that for broad generalization, unsupported in most cases by anything but imagination, they beat anything that we have ever read before. For instance, of India's mortality he writes:—"So far as actual deaths are concerned, one of the years mentioned, of our rule of India, was twelve times worse than a year of ordinary warfare with breech-loading cannon, repeater rifles, and explosive bullets, would have been. If we have saved a few thousands of people from the swords of Mahratta marauders per annum, it is, apparently, only that starvation should annually garner one hundred times as many. As for wide-spreading fever, we are responsible, in some cases, for the malaria which finds the under-fed and under-clothed people such easy victims. The authority for the latter statement is to be found in an India Office Blue-Book on Vital Statistics." Ex uno disce omnes.—Madras Mail.

THE ENCOURAGEMENT OF LOCAL INDUSTRIES.

THE Hindu who cries out for Reform in the abstract, and against Reform in the concrete, is not a unique exemplar of the peculiarities of mankind. He has a family resemblance to another class of men, a class found in and around the India Office in London. There, at odd times, an agitation springs up in favour of Indian industries as mediums for the supply of official requirements in this country. In the same office a dead set is made against one Indian industry, but then it is well known that the exception is needed to prove the rule. It is on that account, we may be sure, that the Secretary of State lends such a willing ear to the representations of the Lancastrian humanitarian. It is not that he wishes to help Lancashire cotton-spinning and to obstruct or discourage the cotton industry in this country. All that is wanted is that an exception shall be held up in order that the whole world may see that it is the rule with the Secretary of State for India to encourage the local industries of the country whose interests he is supposed to have in his special charge. To say that there is inconsistency in this, is to talk rubbish. In statesmanship, as in politics, there is no inconsistency; for all consistently strive to get what they want, and what they think will be most profitable to their Parties or themselves. Thus, it is consistency alone that causes the British Government, through Lord Cross, to tell Indian factory-owners that they must confirm to Western ideas, even though they thus bring about a reduction in their trade; while the same authorities, through the same high official, state that Indian industries, as a rule, must be encouraged. The fact is that there is too much talk of encouragement of this kind. What India must learn to ask for is absolutely Fair play. She wants no Protection; she must have no garotting hand placed at her throat. Hers is the proud boast, "Here Free Trade rules as nowhere else in the world." While this is so, she should scorn protection as staunchly as she condemns attempts to place unfair restrictions upon her freedom.—Madras Times.

THE EDUCATION OF FEMALES.

The education of native ladies in the Madras Presidency has made such progress that those who are responsible for it find themselves face to face with the knotty question of the form it should take in its more advanced stages. The Free Church of Scotland Mission School for Hindu caste women, which has just been celebrating its jubilee, has now 350 pupils, instead of the five with which it commenced operations fifty years ago, while it has given birth to twenty other schools, in town and country, with 1,500 pupils. The time had come now, remarked Dr. Miller, in his jubilee speech, for more advanced education, and it was an anxious question what that education should be. Dr. Miller did not pretend to offer a solution of the problem; but he indicated pretty clearly the direction in which he thought it should not be sought. He thought it would be a calamity to the country if female higher education should be cast in the same unvarying mould as that which has been prescribed for young men; and he confessed that he was not altogether satisfied when he heard of young ladies passing the matriculation, or first examination in Arts, or even becoming Bachelors of Arts. The question is, indeed, one of tremendous difficulty, and one on which, it must be confessed, very little light is thrown by the practice either of modern Europe or of antiquity. Whenever, in the past, woman has embraced the higher education, it has been the higher education as pursued by the sterner sex. Hypatia lectured on mathematics and philosophy; the daughters of Sir Thomas More studied the Latin and Greek classics; and so, at the present day, the students at Girton and Newnham devote themselves to much the same subjects as their brothers. It would almost seem that, in the very nature of things, the higher education lies in a plane in which sex does not count for much; and the most that can be said is that there are certain branches of the higher knowledge which might be expected to attract a larger proportion of female, than of male, students, and vice versa. In this country, the question is complicated by the peculiar conditions of female life, though, even here, it is questionable whether such considerations affect the higher education so much as they do learning of a homelier and more practical kind. Dr. Miller suggests a college of music. This, however, while all very well in its way, does not go very far. The difficulty, it strikes us, is greatly increased by the fact that the English language has been made almost the sole medium of the higher education in India. We see a distinct rôle to be fulfilled by the female mind in the field of vernacular literature; and in this direction more native ladies than one have already done work full of promise; but the course of study in vogue in Indian Colleges and Universities, if we except the Punjab University College, is but ill fitted to qualify them for the task.—Statesman.

OUR VOLUNTEER FORCE.

The example set by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in calling a conference next month to discuss the question of increasing the number of volunteers in the Province might well be followed by other heads of local administrations. Sir Charles Elliott has nominated as members of the conference, Mr. Haliday, a member of the Board of Revenue; Mr. A. Smith, the Commissioner of the Presidency Division; Mr. Lee, chairman of the Municipal Commissioners; Colonel Chatterton, commandant of the local volunteers; and Lieutenant-Colonel Sterndale, commanding the Volunteer Reserve Battalion. The important matter is, of course, to ascertain the feelings of volunteers themselves; to discover the reasons which induce men to enroll themselves or to decline to do so, or after a certain period to resign their membership of a corps: in a word, to test the popularity of volunteering among the European and Eurasian population. This will be no easy matter, for while a hundred different reasons could be advanced for the unpopularity of the movement among the classes which should support it, there are not many that could be brought forward on the opposite side. In time of profound peace the volunteer, whether in India or in England, has his enthusiasm for bearing arms damped by the scanty support which he receives from the Government. The authorities no doubt respect him for his self-sacrifice, and are in sympathy with the national feeling of which he is the embodiment; but the claims of the regular army are so pressing that the "Auxiliary Force" are thrust into the background. In India this has certainly been the case for a good many years, and it is all the more creditable to the volunteers that their numbers have risen as high as 20,000, or four times what they were twenty years ago. But there is still an unreality about them as a military force which they themselves unquestionably feel. They have arms and uniform; they are taught to shoot straight and to drill with steadiness; but if they were suddenly called upon to act as soldiers, they have not the equipment which would enable them to turn out and remain out even for a few days. A few bodies such as light horse corps are, perhaps, an exception to this rule; but the infantry, as a whole, are not in any sense equipped for the field.—Pioneer.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.

The general meeting of shareholders of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China held their 37th ordinary general meeting on Wednesday at the Cannon Street Hotel, Mr. William Paterson presiding. In proposing the adoption of the report and accounts, the Chairman remarked that it was a great trial to the directors to meet the shareholders last year on account of the unpleasant news which they had received from Calcutta. He need only refer very briefly to it that day. They would remember that, at a subsequent meeting, the directors had to tell them of the loss they had sustained by the defalcations of their cashier at the Calcutta branch, which had been greater than they at first anticipated. Although they had recovered certain securities from him, the Board deemed it advisable to write off the whole claim. That had now been done, but at a cost, he was sorry to say, of £35,000 from the current year's earnings. Although this was a large item, they considered it better to erase the whole matter from their books. (Hear, hear.) Under those circumstances they would not, he thought, be dissatisfied to learn that, in spite of the heavy and abnormal drawbacks with which they had had to contend, they were in a position to pay a dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. for the year, to place £50,000 to reserve, which now stood at £300,000, and to carry £9,100 to the current account. (Hear, hear.) Whatever accrued from the securities which had been recovered from the defaulting cashier would be so much to their advantage in future years. The balance-sheet indicated a very favourable position, but it certainly did not point to or indicate any great increase in the volume of their business. It was very largely increasing, but they would readily understand that the difficulty with regard to the currency in their sphere of operations added greatly to the care which was necessary in the transaction of their business. The net profit, with the addition of £9,767 brought forward from last year, amounted to £123,104. The prospects for the future were encouraging. Mr. Emile Levita seconded the motion. A brief discussion followed. Several shareholders complimented the directors on their action in contributing £100,000 to the Baring fund. The Chairman, in reply, said they were very pleased to find that their action had met with the cordial approval of the shareholders. It was very satisfactory to find that the prompt action of the Bank of England had really averted a crisis of inconceivable magnitude. (Hear, hear.) The report was then unanimously adopted, and a dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. for the year declared. The retiring directors and auditors were re-elected.

Quite a number of members of the Civil Service in the North-West Provinces and Oudh are gazetted for furlough and leave. Mr. W. G. Neale, Commissioner of Agra, goes home about the middle of April for six months and a half; Mr. J. J. McLean, Officiating Session Judge at Azamgarh, at the beginning of the month for seven months; Mr. Adams, Commissioner of Benares, as already announced, for seven months; Mr. J. White, Collector of Benares, for eight months; Mr. A. Robinson, Deputy Commissioner of Fyzabad, for eighteen months immediately; and Mr. M. S. Howell, Sessions Judge at Shahjehanpore, special leave for four months from the beginning of next month. Mr. C. J. Connell, Collector and Magistrate of Bareilly, proceeds on three months' privilege leave early in May. Mr. H. M. Bird goes to Cawnpore as Magistrate and Collector in succession to Mr. F. N. Wright; and Mr. R. H. Macleod, Sessions Judge of Ghazipore, takes Mr. White's place as Collector at Benares; Mr. R. E. Hamblin, Joint Magistrate at Agra, officiates for Mr. Robinson at Fyzabad; and Mr. E. Galbraith officiates as Collector of Muttra during Mr. Conybeare's absence on furlough. On the abolition of the Commissionership of Jhansi Mr. G. L. Lang takes the Sessions Judgeship at Mirzapur.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

INDIAN OPINION ON THE MANIPUR AFFAIR.

THE Overland Mail just to hand has brought, with its many Indian newspapers, many press comments therein regarding the recent catastrophe at Manipur, and the causes which are supposed to have led the way to it. These comments are not altogether favourable to the Government of India. The Pioneer, which may be taken as representing the official view, is ominously silent in its editorial columns, but in its "Occasional Notes" it inclines to throw the blame of the immediate bringing about of the disaster on Mr. Quinton. There was no sudden attack, it says, upon the Chief Commissioner's party, but "an unforeseen drifting into hostilities in consequence of the failure of the political negotiations." This is a very diplomatic way of putting it; but what are the facts, even according to the Pioneer, which declares itself to be in possession of the instructions which Mr. Quinton received before starting on his mission? The settlement which he was instructed to make was to recognize as Maharaja the erstwhile Jubraj, as the heir-apparent of the State is termed. This man is Kula Chandra Singh, and with him has been associated in various intrigues the Senapati, or Commander-in-Chief, Tekendrajit Singh, alias Koytang. They are step-brothers of the ex-Maharaja, and they organized the rising last September which ended in his abdication. Kula Chandra then became Maharaja, and Tekendrajit assumed the title of Jubraj. When the Chief Commissioner reached Manipur he announced the decision to recognize Kula Chandra as Maharaja, but on condition that the Senapati should be deported. Negotiations followed in the usual course, and these coming to nought, Mr. Quinton resolved to arrest Tekendrajit. For this purpose Colonel Skene, with 250 Gurkhas, proceeded to the palace. He succeeded in entering the outer enclosure, but further progress was barred, as some six thousand armed men, with four guns, had been gathered within the walls. An engagement followed. Colonel Skene retired upon the Residency, and the Manipuris assumed the offensive, with the result now known. The Pioneer contents itself with giving these details, but makes no comment beyond hinting that probably the smallness of Mr. Quinton's escort tempted the Senapati to show resistance to being arrested. The Pioneer's contemporaries, however, are not so satisfied with this explanation. They ask, Why, in the first place, did the Government of India allow its decision to be made known publicly (which it did) prior to the visit of the Chief Commissioner to Manipur? and secondly, why, knowing the strength of the force which the Senapati had with him, was the possibility of resistance not taken into account by the despatch of a stronger escort with Mr. Quinton? The Englishman says that the action of the Government of India was "unfortunate"; but the Statesman expresses itself more strongly. It says:—"It seems an extraordinary thing that the Government of India, if it had made up its mind to allow the present administration of Munipore to continue, and to recognize the usurping occupant of the guddee, should have at the same time decided to remove the Commander-in-Chief, who was mainly instrumental in bringing about the recent changes. But it is still more extraordinary that, having resolved on this step, for which there may have been sufficient reasons, it should have allowed the Chief Commissioner of Assam to enter Munipore before its arrangements for dealing with any possible resistance were completed. That these arrangements were not completed at the time of the attack on the Residency is clear from the fact that reinforcements were on their way to Munipore which were not expected to reach that place till five days later."

The Madras Mail, which is almost as "official" as the Pioneer, says that the causes of the successful assault by the Manipuris on the chief British official of Assam and his following were the superiority of the Manipuris in numbers; the possession by them of field-guns; and the want of sufficient ammunition and food on the part of our men. "The first two were practically unavoidable, though the havoc resulting from them would have been greatly mitigated if the authorities had foreseen, as surely it was possible to foresee, that Mr. Quinton might require a stronger escort, and possibly also a few light field-guns." This is a very mild manner of rebuke. As it was well known that amongst the guns with the Manipuris were certain seven-pounder steel mountain-guns of British make, it would certainly have been better had Mr. Quinton's escort been accompanied by a little light artillery. The Madras paper thinks that the omission to strengthen that escort was merely an error of judgment, "deplorable," but "not absolutely blameworthy"—a conclusion which has not been altogether accepted by the Bengal or Bombay Press. The Mail, however, does not look leniently upon the official shortcomings regarding the supply of ammunition, and—what at first was not generally known—the supply of food for the Gurkhas. "If it was thought that ammunition was required at all, it was manifestly absurd to send only 40 rounds for each man with no reserve." The "absurdity" will hardly be questioned—although that is not the term which might most correctly describe the blunder. No comment is made about the shortness of the food-supply, but in summing up the whole matter the Editor is obliged to confess that "altogether the case for the authorities seems a very bad one." But what "authorities"? The responsibilities seem to have been so divided, that it is not likely that much good will result now from trying to fix the full blame in any particular quarter. If Mr. Quinton ordered the arrest of the Senapati on his own sudden impulse, without having had previous instructions to do so, he no doubt acted rashly, but then he had a military officer by his side who could have explained to him the hazard of making the attempt in the face of the Senapati's force—outnumbering his own by so many thousands, and in possession, too, of artillery. Colonel Skene might have regarded the Manipuris as a horde of cowards, but he must have known that their Kuki allies, in themselves a multitude and armed with rifles, were men who could and would fight. Unfortunately, the more one thinks over the matter with only the present information at hand, the more difficult it is to come to any satisfactory explanation of the action taken by both the civil and military authorities. It is clear that "some one had blundered"; but the initial blunder appears to have been the despatch of so small an escort on so ticklish a mission, and the question which remains to be answered is, Who is responsible for this? But the answer, although it may be guessed at, is not likely to be given "officially" to the public.

THE Committee of the Royal Humane Society has, on the recommendation of the Secretary of State for India, awarded a silver medal to W. B. Huddleston, second grade officer, Indian Marine, for saving the life of Gunner E. Peterson, of the Indian Marine survey ship Investigator, under the following circumstances:—While the men were trawling in 1,800 fathoms in the middle of the Bay of Bengal two sharks were observed swimming round the ship, and a baited hook was put overboard. Shortly afterwards one was hooked. It immediately dashed forward, and fouled the trawl rope by swimming round it. Peterson thereupon fetched a rifle with the intention of shooting the shark, and then clearing the line, but while getting over the head-rails he fell into the sea. Huddleston, regardless of the presence of the other shark, which was about 7ft. long, and aware that the gunner was unable to swim, plunged in, and succeeded in rescuing the man.

India in Parliament.

THE MANIPUR DISASTER.

The Marquis of RIPON asked the Secretary of State for India whether he would lay on the table any papers in respect of recent events in Manipur. He deeply regretted the sad loss of life which had occurred, and especially the great loss which the Government of India had sustained by the death of Mr. Quinton. He (Lord Ripon) had had much to do with him, and always found him a man of marked ability, sound judgment, and great moderation of character. He was quite certain that the Indian Civil Service, of which Mr. Quinton was an ornament, had sustained a great loss by his death. The action of the Indian Government in dealing with the Manipur question would be watched with the utmost care, and he might say jealousy, by every native prince in India. He hoped, therefore, the Government would be strictly guided by those principles of policy in regard to native states which were introduced at the termination of the Mutiny, and which had given India nearly forty years of internal peace, and done so much to increase the loyalty of the native states.

Viscount CROSS joined with the noble marquis in deploring the loss of so many valuable officers in this disaster, and in what he had said with reference to the late Mr. Quinton. Mr. Quinton was a man who had been in the service of India for thirty-five years, and had risen to his high position entirely by his own abilities. He had won the confidence of no fewer than three Viceroys; and it was only last year, in consequence of the high position he filled, that he was appointed to the somewhat difficult post of Chief Commissioner of Assam. He (Lord Cross) should like to express his deep sympathy with the widow of Mr. Quinton and the relatives of the other officers who had lost their lives on that sad occasion. With regard to the request for papers, they would be laid on the table after the despatches containing full information had been received. He could assure the noble marquis that there was no person more likely to treat the native states of India with justice, whatever policy had to be pursued, than the present Viceroy, the Marquis of Lansdowne.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE OPERATIONS IN MANIPUR.

Colonel NOLAN asked the Under-Secretary for India whether his attention had been called to a paragraph in the Times of the 22nd, stating that villages had been burned on or near the Mastaon plateau; whether this statement was correct; and, if so, how many villages had been burned.

Sir J. GORST said the Mastaen plateau was not in Manipur, but on the Afghan frontier. The Secretary of State for India was not in possession of such detailed information concerning the military operations in India as to enable him to answer the various points in the question of the hon. and gallant member.

Colonel NOLAN asked when the Secretary of State for India would be in the possession of such information.

Sir J. GORST said the Secretary of State had implicit confidence in the humanity of the Government of India, and would not harass them during critical military operations by questions which seemed to imply want of confidence in them. Full reports would be sent home from India, and would be laid before Parliament without loss of time, and if the hon. and gallant member had any fault to find with the military operations in India, he would then have an opportunity of doing so.

Colonel NOLAN asked whether the right hon. gentleman could say when the Secretary of State for India would be in possession of the information which would enable him to answer his question—whether it would be in a week or a month.

Sir J. GORST said it was obviously impossible for the Secretary of State for India to form any conjecture as to when he would receive the military reports from India.

Colonel NOLAN asked whether he was right in stating that it was usual for a general commanding to write a despatch home in about a week after an action took place. Was not that the custom in India?

Sir J. GORST said he was not able to answer questions of a military character without notice. He had no doubt the Commander-in-Chief in India would send all information home as soon as the convenience of the public service enabled him to do so.

In reply to a further question by Colonel NOLAN,

Sir J. GORST said the Commander-in-Chief in India had given the officers commanding columns operating in Manipur their instructions or orders. All the operations, were in the hands of the military authorities at present.

1867–68, from the landing in Annesley Bay in October 1867, with the Advance Brigade under Col. Field; was employed in making roads from Koomaylie to Antalo; and was present at the assault and capture of Magdala, being mentioned in despatches and receiving the medal. He also served in the Afghan War in 1880, and commanded the 16th Bombay Native Infantry at the defence of Kuch, was mentioned in despatches and received the thanks of the Government of Bombay and the medal awarded.

Lieut.-Col. Henry Erskine Forbes, of Easter Kinmundy and Fiddy, Aberdeenshire, second son of the late Henry David Forbes, Esq., of Balgowmie, died on the 15th inst. at Detmold, Germany, aged 69. He entered the service in May 1843, became lieutenant in January 1849, captain in November 1856, major in March 1868, and lieutenant-colonel in April 1870, and served at the siege of Mooltan, in 1848-49, receiving the medal with clasp.

Lieutenant-Colonel H. C. T. Jarrett, V.C., of the Bengal Staff Corps, and lately Deputy Conservator, first class, at Saugor, in the Central Provinces, where he died on the 11th instant. He was in his fifty-fifth year, and had passed all his military career in India. Colonel Jarrett was awarded the V.C. "for an act of daring bravery at the village of Baroun, on the 14th October 1858, on an occasion when about seventy Sepoys were defending themselves in a brick building, the only approach to which was up a very narrow street, in having called on the men of his regiment to follow him, when, backed by only some four men, he made a dash at the narrow entrance, where, though a shower of balls was poured upon him, he pushed his way up to the wall of the house, and, beating up the bayonets of the rebels with his sword, endeavoured to get in."

NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA.

The ordinary meeting of the shareholders in this bank was held at the Cannon Street Hotel, April 22. Mr. R. O. Campbell, who presided, moved the adoption of the report, which he said bore testimony in every line to the bank's progress and prosperity. The nett profit had amouted to £118,125, or a little over 23½ per cent. of their paid-up capital. The total distribution for the year was a dividend of 6 per cent., and the directors had appropriated a sum of £116,625 towards placing the bank's rupee capital on a sterling basis of 1s. 6d. per rupee. It would be seen that there was a great cash balance of £1,437,944, an increase of £692,000 compared with the last accounts. In India, for several months, money was so cheap that it was difficult to employ any amount at even one per cent. profit, while on this side the Argentine difficulties made it essential to keep themselves strong in view of any emergency. It was satisfactory that in every department of their business there had been great development, the volume of their transactions having amounted to £6,858,295, against £5,637,000 in 1889. They thought it would be to the advantage of the bank to build up a pension fund for the staff, and for this purpose they were setting aside £2,500 as a nucleus. New shares would be issued to increase the paid-up capital to £500,000, the amount it was originally intended to call up. The prospects for the future were as good as had been the results of the year's working. Mr. J. Borradaile seconded the adoption of the report, to which Colonel Bolton moved an amendment, and spoke at length in disapproval of the manner in which the board attempted to solve the silver fluctuation. Another shareholder took exception to the amount of the dividend and moved a further amendment, but both were negatived and the original motion carried.

REVIEW.

The Australian Irrigation Colonies. Illustrated. Messrs. Chaffey Brothers.

We have received a copy of the handsome illustrated folio volume entitled, The Australian Irrigation Colonies, compiled by Mr. Matthew Vincent, the representative in London of Messrs. Chaffey Brothers.

The primary aim of the letterpress and illustrations is to give the English public an idea of Mildura and Renmark, the places near the river Murray which the respective Governments of Victoria and South Australia, through the Messrs. Chaffey, have irrigated and settled with a thriving population.

It was the Hon. Alfred Deakin, late Victorian Minister of Public Works and Water-Supply, who, on behalf of his Government, first entered into this remarkable contract with this enterprising pair of Canadian brothers who had had great practical experience in the matter of irrigation in California. Australia is a continent periodically subject to drought, but when Dr. Moorhouse, the present Bishop of Manchester, then Bishop of Melbourne, was asked to appoint "a special day of prayer and humiliation" for rain, his Lordship said he would do so when "the people should have first tried the experiment of preserving the rainfall." It was on this hint that Mr. Deakin acted when he engaged the services of the Messrs. Chaffey Brothers, who have already converted what was a mere desert into a smiling and populous settlement. According to the latest reports of these Irrigation Colonies, we are told that "the sale of land for the past six months has been substantially in advance of that of any previous like period. The area disposed of now exceeds 11,000 acres, and is, for the most part, being rapidly brought into a state of productiveness. The opinions formed by experienced horticulturists with regard to the early returns from vines and fruit-trees have been fully realised."

It may be of special interest to our readers to know that the Hon. Alfred Deakin, the brilliant young Australian statesman who practically set this work on foot, has recently visited India for the sole purpose of studying the system of irrigation in vogue there. On his return to Melbourne, he informed a press representative that "Indian irrigation is on by far the largest scale and by far the best of any in the world. As far as engineering work is concerned, it far exceeds anything else I have seen in Egypt, Italy, or America. The white people in the country don't know it. I was the first white man in the country, who was not an official, who went up the Sirhinde Canal."

In addition to the description of these Irrigation Colonies, this volume contains a number of illustrations of Australian scenery, with views of the chief cities of the Island-Continent, which are quite up to date, and give a very accurate idea of the social and industrial progress of the Australian community.

DELHI AND LONDON BANK.

The half-yearly ordinary general meeting of the Delhi and London Bank, Limited, was held on Wednesday at the offices, Royal Bank Buildings, Bishopsgate Street Within. Mr. David Henry Small presiding.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, stated that the business of the bank had greatly increased. At no period of the bank's history had they been able to show so large an amount under the head of customer's balances, &c., and in the total of the banking assets, which might be taken as highly satisfactory. If they compared the figures now before them with those of the corresponding period last year, they would find that the total assets showed an increase of upwards of £247,000, mainly attributable to the growth of their fixed and floating deposits, which showed an increase of nearly £161,000. The loan business also showed a satisfactory increase, the figures being £1,027,087, against £890,183 for the previous December. The cash in hand at the close of the half-year amounted to £149,414, which compared with £65,613 held on December 31, 1889. The profits earned upon the working of the half-year under notice, although better by £2,821 than on the previous December, were not quite so good as last half-year. Still the difference was not much, and when they took into account the great difference in the rate of exchange at which their profits had had to be remitted, the falling off was more than explained. Alluding to the Baring crisis, he said, although they were not asked, and had not joined in any guarantee in reference to the Baring liquidation, the effect of that great difficulty was felt in every direction of business, and rendered it necessary for the direction to exercise great caution in the conduct of their operations, and to be prepared for any unforeseen emergency. The position in London was extremely critical, and in the East they had to face a state of things almost unprecedented, for whereas during the early part of the year they had there a great scarcity of money and abnormally high rates, with a high rate of exchange, the position was entirely reversed during the latter half of the year, exchange dropped away to a little over 1s. 6d., and money became so plentiful that it was freely offered at 2 per cent., and even at that low figure employment could not be found for it. However, he was pleased to be able to say that, notwithstanding all these difficulties, their managers were able to utilize their resources to such effect as to enable the directors to place before the shareholders a report which, under the circumstances, he was sure they would consider highly satisfactory.

The motion was seconded by Major-General E. J. Rickards, and agreed to.

The retiring directors, Mr. D. H. Small and Major-General John Clarke, were re-elected.

AFGHAN POLITICS.

When the Amir was absent in Turkistan, his son, Habibullah Khan, obtained great kudos for the orderly management of public affairs at Kabul; and in many respects he appeared to give promise of great things. It was hinted to us at the time that the credit which we gave to the youth might really be due to the tried advisers left with him by the Amir; and we are fain to admit that Habibullah Khan's subsequent proceedings do not at all keep up the same high level of promise. He is now twenty-two years of age, and with his brother, Nasarullah Khan, seems to have developed a most fanatical spirit, which augurs ill for the unity of Afghanistan, if ever he should obtain supreme authority. Indeed, signs are not wanting that the influence of his sons upon Abdur Rahman is already causing mischief. The celebration of the Moharram by the Shias in Kabul was forbidden last year; and this year the Amir has disbanded his Kazilbash Regiment. This, combined with the fact that Habibullah Khan and Nasarullah Khan openly advocate a Holy War against the Kazilbashes or Shias of Kabul—postponing for a while their idea of a crescentade against the Feringhis at large—is held to be significant of further persecutions, during which it might be dangerous to have a Kazilbash Regiment under arms. It is rumoured also in Kabul that all Shias are to be excluded from office of all kinds. This revival of religious fanaticism is entirely due, it is said, to the influence of the Amir's sons, one of whom is supposed to have had a vision last year, in the shape of a visitation from one of the Prophet Muhammad's Companions. We believe, on the other hand, that the Amir's queen—whose young son, we suppose, will be the rightful successor to the throne of Kabul—uses all her efforts to persuade the Amir to adopt a kinder policy towards his Shia subjects and co-religionists. The best chance of a strong and united Afghanistan lies in the hope that the Amir will adopt this course, and that his rule may also be prolonged until his infant son is able to succeed; for Habibullah—whose appointment to govern during the Amir's recent absence in Turkistan marks him out as the natural successor to Abdul Rahman, should anything happen to the latter now—seems to have since hopelessly alienated the Shia section of the people by his fanaticism, and especially by the alleged injustice which he displayed in an Afghan cause célèbre last year. Our readers will perhaps recollect that Kazi Shahabuddin, a well-known Kazilbash officer in the Amir's service, was killed by one Khorramdel, a son of the present governor of Khost. The latter was acquitted by Habibullah Khan, on, it is alleged, an entirely false pretence that the murdered officer had given great religious provocation by "abusing the first three Companions of Muhammad in the presence of the accused." This act of alleged injustice rankles in the mind of the Shia community; and when we recollect that it was the persecution of the Kazilbashes which overthrew the Saduzai dynasty and established that of Dost Muhammad, the chances of peaceful rule for Habibullah, in case of the Amir's death, are small indeed. The Kazilbashes, the Shias of Kabul, are descended from the Persians who accompanied the great Nadir Shah in his invasions of Khorassan and India in the early part of the eighteenth century. He made a settlement of them in Afghanistan as a safe-guard against political risings in that country; and since the death of Nadir Shah they have been always loyal and able supporters of his successors on the Afghan throne, except when, as we have noted, their persecution under the Saduzai dynasty caused its overthrow and the substitution of that of Dost Muhammad. Unless the Amir listens to wiser counsels than those of his two headstrong sons, the danger will remain that history may before long repeat itself.—Civil and Military Gazette.

INDIAN VILLAGE COMMUNITIES.

AT last week's meeting of the Indian Section of the Society of Arts, Mr. B. H. Baden-Powell, C.I.E., read an elaborate paper on "Indian Village Communities, with Special Reference to their Modern Study." Sir Steuart Colvin Bayley, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., late Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, presided. Among those present were Sir George Birdwood, Sir George Baden-Powell, M.P., Sir Owen Burne, Mr. O. V. Morgan, M.P., Mr. Whitley Stokes, C.S.I., Mr. Thornton, Mr. Tupper, Mr. Seton-Karr, and Mr. Naoroji.

MR. BADEN-POWELL said that almost every educated person was aware of the fact that throughout India agricultural land was divided into certain local groups called "villages" (in a different sense from that in which the word was used in England). It was also commonly understood that the holders of these local groups formed what were called "village communities." This division of land had survived all changes, though the owners and the form of holding had often changed, and a local name remained permanently on the map for each village. The formation of villages was not, however, quite universal; on the west coast, for example, and in the Himalayan districts, there were no villages; what were now so called were artificial aggregations of separate holdings, each with its own homestead, and often scattered somewhat widely apart. The ordinary accessible and generally read literature on the subject was inadequate and often misleading. There had been a general tendency to take certain passages and copy them from one book into another, as if they exhausted the subject. These passages mostly were derived from the early published official minutes, written when the process of developing a suitable land administration was under discussion. After that was settled, the really valuable information ceased to become public, and went into Settlement records and official reports. Some of these had been reprinted in issues known as "Selections from the Records of Government"; but they did not get beyond the official circle of readers. Having sketched, necessarily in mere outline, the progress of events regarding the discovery of local land tenures as far as they concerned villages, the lecturer adverted to the ideas which he understood to be generally prevalent on the subject, and then entered into a rather minute description of the communities in question. Incidentally he invited attention to what he termed a most important point, and one on which he hoped that the influence of the Society of Arts, so often exercised for good, might avail to produce a remedy. He referred to the total absence of all rational statistics of village tenures in Upper India, where the community form prevailed, and where the origin and present condition exhibited such curious and interesting varieties. To this fact, more than to anything else, he attributed the general want of information regarding villages. In each of the northern provinces (where these joint-villages were the salient features) there were plenty of able officers who could gradually make out proper returns according to the real facts of constitution. The result would be, perhaps, a rude bouleversement of our current conventional ideas about "village communities"; but it would enable a new departure to be made, and throw floods of light on the real application of these theories of ownership and the history of institutions which, during the last twenty years, have aroused so much interested attention.

A discussion, showing some diversity of opinion on the subject, followed the reading of the paper, which will be published in due course.

THE CARE OF INDIA'S DEFENCES.

ANXIOUS to strengthen the country's defences to the utmost, the Government of India does not overlook the fact that men are important as well as guns, and pits, and earthworks. Much money has been spent during the last few years in attempts to make the frontier impregnable, and much good work has been done. How much of this has been undermined by indiscreet legislation remains to be discovered. But we learn by telegram that the Government of India has now placed on record its statement of facts. What that statement is, many military men may judge. We have at times referred to official reports that have shown how seriously the authorities erred when they yielded to the representations of a few prudish moralists, who, while not prepared to say, "Scatter your troops, disband them; take care of morality and purity, and let the country take care of itself," insisted that certain laws should be repealed, on the ground that their existence implied State sanction to immorality. From that time to this events have gone on heaping up the tale of evil results, of ill-health in the army, of growing mortality. Money has been spent almost recklessly in strengthening walls and arms; without a cent. of cost, with merely a few strokes of the pen, the chief defences of the country, the men to man the forts and the guns, have been reduced in strength, and health, and numbers. Well may the Government of India protest and marshal appalling figures to prove the folly of what has been done.—Madras Times.

BENGALI MISCHIEF.

THE mischievous kind of writing against which we shall never cease to protest is exemplified in the columns of a Bengali paper published at Lahore. It says of the Government, "the paltry sum they can manage to devote to the intellectual development of the people is a shame and a scandal to civilisation"; whereas the fact is that in proportion to its taxation per head, India is better off in the matter of free education than most countries that call themselves civilised. Again, it says of our rulers, "while in matters affecting the life and progress of the people they are always very slow to spend the public money on the ground of poverty, they are never loth to waste lakhs upon lakhs on worthless and useless pageants, and on the personal comforts and luxuries of the higher officials." Now, if there is one thing in which, more than another, the English administrators of India have set a good example to our countrymen, it is in dispensing with costly pageants, and devoting all available funds to the improvement of the administration and the condition of the people. If foreigners to India desire to see costly pageants, they do not go to the head-quarters of English Governments, but to the Native States or the houses of wealthy natives. It is not for us, whose country is covered with relics of palaces of unsurpassed grandeur, to cavil at our rulers because they build from time to time palatial residences suitable for State functions and for the accommodation of the large number of hard-working officials whose business is always near the person of Viceroys or Governors. Again, our Bengali contemporary says that "in matters of realimportance the Government always strains at a gnat, but for the pleasure and comfort of the rulers they can swallow a camel." To read this deliberate misrepresentation of Government gives us real sorrow; for it is nothing less than a calamity that such writers should find a home and such writing should find readers in the capital of this loyal Province.—Punjab Patriot.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE move of the troops in the Rawul Pindi district will this year commence about the 1st May instead of about the 10th April, as was the case last year. The delay is probably owing to the extreme severity of the weather at Murree during the past cold season, the snow being still very deep round the family quarters, and it is quite impossible to receive any married soldiers there at present.

THE 45th Sikhs' change of station is countermanded.

THE departure of the 15th Sikhs from Ferozepore to take part in the Black Mountain Expedition was very smartly carried out. This fine regiment, which distinguished itself so much in the Suakin Expedition in 1885, received sudden orders about 10.30 A.M., and was at the station, ready to entrain, by 2.30 P.M. the same afternoon.

THE following paragraph from the Englishman will be read with interest by Volunteers:—The Government of India have, with the greatest gratification, accepted the offer of the Pioneer Company, Calcutta Volunteers, to take part in the Munipur Expedition. Each man will be provided with 300 rounds of ammunition, and the party will be despatched to Silchar on the 7th instant in the steamer Ibis. About seventy members of other volunteer corps in Calcutta have also volunteered for service in Assam, and their offers have been accepted; but the men selected will be attached to the Pioneer Company under Captain Cox's command. Captain Blyth, the adjutant of the corps, will also proceed to the front in a few days. Several Volunteers in Government employment, who are anxious to join the Pioneer Company, are deterred, it is said, by the report that if they do so they will risk losing their appointments. Some twenty Government clerks, however, have received permission to go to Assam on service. Two men on the Calcutta Police have gone the length of resigning their service in order to join the Pioneers.

THE recent retirements of Brigade-Surgeons Condon, Gray, and Moir will, points out a contemporary, cause another run of promotion among Surgeons-Major of the Indian Medical Service. There now remain only five Brigade-Surgeons who entered the service before 1860, none of whom are, under service rules, eligible for promotion to the administrative grade, and all of whom will retire this or next year. Then the comparatively junior officers of the batch of 1865 will come to the head of the list, and, as we have previously announced, three of them will receive administrative rank this year owing to the retirement of Deputy Surgeons-General Thornton, Farrell, and Morice, of the Punjab Frontier Force, the Punjab Medical Department, and the Presidency District respectively. After these changes there will in all probability be rather a block for a few years; but this can well be endured.

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1833.

Every Saturday. Price Sixpence.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other Service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week, written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

The Calcutta Review.

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. Kaye, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storms of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 6, 1891.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 18th April; from N.W.P. and Punjab to the 16th April; and from Bengal to the 15th April.

THE following Gazette of India Extraordinary was issued from Simla on the 16th April:—"The Governor-General in Council has received with the deepest regret confirmation which leaves no room for doubt of the news of the cruel and treacherous murder at Manipur, on the night of the 24th ultimo, of Mr. J. W. Quinton and the following officers, who accompanied him under a flag of truce from the Residency to the Palace of the Regent of Manipur:—Lieutenant-Colonel Skene, Mr. Grimwood, Lieutenant Simpson, and Mr. Cossins. Besides these it has been reported that Mr. Melville and Mr. O'Brien were also murdered. In Mr. Quinton the State has lost a public servant of long service and varied experience, who has filled with distinction many high and important posts to the complete satisfaction of the Government of India. Colonel Skene was an officer of long and highly distinguished service, who passed the greater part of his career on the Assam frontier. Mr. Grimwood had been attached to the Assam Commission since 1878. He has been Political Agent, Manipur, since April 1890. The Governor-General in Council will take the necessary steps to exact full and signal retribution for this atrocious outrage. Troops are converging on Manipur from Burmah, Cachar, and Kohima."

THE statement of Captain Boileau, the senior surviving officer who escaped being murdered at Manipur, shows that the Regent's allegations regarding the ill-treatment of Manipuris by our troops are quite unfounded. The Manipuris fired on our troops first. The latter were divided in attempting to arrest the Senapati. It is evident that our troops fought under a great disadvantage.

THE opinion prevails in Simla that the Manipur operations will occupy the troops for about two months.

MRS. QUINTON is on her way out from England. The profoundest sympathy will be felt for the bereaved lady, and for her two daughters, who are now in Shillong.

A COLUMN, numbering 100 British and 100 native infantry, under the command of Major Vere, Royal Rifles, has started from Bhamo to punish the Kaukkwe Chins for raiding. The expedition will soon be ready to start against the Klang Klang Chins for their attack on Mr. Macnabb's force recently.

ALL is quiet at the Black Mountain, but the Khan Kheyl section of the Hassanzai and Akazai tribe have not as yet sent in their jirgah.

THERE have been several "brushes" with the enemy in the Miranzai country.

OFFER of troops to the Government of India has been made by the Rajah of Kapurthala, who has available for frontier service about one thousand men.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY will give his annual Eton Dinner at the Viceregal Lodge on the 4th of June.

THE Viceroy held a Council on Saturday morning, April 11. All the members were present, except Colonel Pemberton.

H.E. the Governor of Bombay is still on tour in the Southern Mahratta country.

THE farewell dinner given at the United Service Club to Sir George Chesney was an unqualified success. Sir Frederick Roberts was in the chair. He, with Sir James Browne and the guest of the evening, made the only speeches.

THE last news from Cabul states that fears were entertained there of the possibility of serious floods, owing to the rapid rise of the Cabul river during three consecutive days. No rain had fallen; but the rise of the river was due to a sudden thaw which had set in, on the hills, at the beginning of the week.

EXPRESSIONS of sympathy and condolence have been received by the late Sir Madavo Rao's family from the Viceroy, the Foreign Secretary, the Madras Government, the Maharajahs of Baroda, Mysore and Travancore, and numerous others in all parts of India. The deceased's property is valued at seven lakhs of rupees.

SIR ROBERT SANDEMAN was to arrive at Simla about April 26, and be the guest of the Viceroy. He then proceeds, after a week's stay, to England.

GENERAL AZIM-UD-DIN, Khan Bahadur, Vice-President of the Council of Regency in the Rampur State, has been murdered.

THE Queen's birthday will be celebrated in India, the same as in England, on the 30th of May.

THE Khojak tunnel will probably be opened in June by Sir Frederick Roberts.

HER MAJESTY'S Indian troopship Euphrates, Captain John R. E. Pattisson, R.N., sailed for England at 10 A.M. on April 17, calling at Aden on the 23rd to embark details.

LIEUT. L. HERBERT, Central India Horse, who was for some time A.D.C. to the Duke of Connaught, has received a similar appointment on the Viceroy's Staff.

A STRONG protest is being made in Madras against the abolition of the sixth Judgeship in the High Court. The Court is now one year in arrears.

THE marriage of the Maharajah of Kolhapore has just been celebrated with great pomp.

A SERIOUS riot has occurred at Benares over the Ramjee Temple case. The mob did some damage to property, and the military had to be called out to quell the disturbance.

PRIVATE LLOYD, of the 2nd Devonshire Regiment, murdered Colour-Sergeant Edwards of the same regiment at Bernardmyo on April 10.

A THIRD cable has just been laid between Aden and Bombay for the Eastern Telegraph Company.

A TELEGRAM from Rangoon announces that Mr. Charles Swappe, Engineer-in-Chief of the Mu Valley Railway, has died suddenly at Katha. The cause of his death is not known as yet.

COLONEL THUILLIER, Surveyor-General, has gone to Bangalore. He is expected in Simla later on. Mr. Ramsay is now engaged inspecting the Bolan Railway. Mr. O'Callaghan has gone to Quetta to meet Mr. Ramsay, and there discuss the question of the new alignment. No decision has been yet arrived at regarding the construction of the new line.

THE great Kumbh Mela is over. The assemblage, which equalled in numbers that of 1879, broke up on April 13. The pilgrims have been dispersed free of epidemic disease.

OBITUARY.—Lieut.-Colonel F. T. Powis, Madras General List, at Waltair.

NOTES.

THE papers to hand by the present Overland Mail, which left Bombay on April 18, although full of details regarding the Manipur disaster, contain no information of importance which has not already reached here by telegraph-wire. But in India, as here, there is a good deal of comment going on concerning individuals dead and living, concerning responsibility and concerning annexation. And the comments have not all been written in the best taste or temper.

IN some quarters, chiefly military ones, the responsibility and blame of the disaster is attempted to be laid on the dead Commissioner. Mr. Quinton, it is said, kept the military officers in ignorance up to the latest moment regarding his instructions and his intentions, and it is asked how far the commander of his escort had a free hand in making his dispositions.

IT was the Chief Commissioner's desire, says one writer, to send in a letter to the Palace which led to the "cease fire" being sounded at half-past seven on the evening of the 24th; it was to the Chief Commissioner that Colonel Skene found it necessary to say that under no circumstances would his men surrender; lastly, it was the Chief Commissioner who told Colonel Skene that the Residency would not be tenable if fire were re-opened. "These," adds the writer, are incidents which will not be without weight when the facts are put together for final judgment to be passed upon them."

OTHER writers lay the blame on the military. "Does no one's heart burn within him," asks one scribe, "after this jeopardizing of the best traditions of the British army? Is nothing to be said when a strong and well-equipped force, composed of a class in which it is the fashion to express peculiar pride, is seen in retreat from a half-savage foe while British officers, civil and military, remained behind, prisoners in the hands of the enemy? When the officers in the Residency hear of the capture of the chiefs, and find that the Manipuris are attacking them, although they knew that Captain Cowley with 200 more men was due in three days; although, if ammunition was short, they still had bayonets or kukris; although they must have known that their departure was pretty sure to end in but one way; although on such occasions, time after time, British troops, including Sepoys, had under competent leaders turned what appeared hopeless defeat into brilliant success, it was thought that withdrawal was the only course."

THIS reflection on the Gurkhas and their officers is emphasized still more strongly by another writer, who declares that if only a company of British soldiers had been with the Gurkhas there would have been a different tale to tell, for the Palace would have been carried at the point of the bayonet and the "wretched" guns of the Manipuris been quickly silenced. The error of judgment was, he holds, in exclusively employing native troops in a hazardous mission. "A military expedition consisting of a purely Indian force is not to be relied on; to be effective it must have the prestige of the British soldier; in other words, Tommy Atkins must be there to support and lead in times of danger." This may to a certain extent be allowed, viz. that native troops always fight better when there is a leaven of British troops with them; but this writer hints that the Gurkhas did not fight well on this occasion because there was a strong sympathy between them and the hillmen of Manipuri, both being mountaineers, with the same sentiments and of the same blood. This insinuation is cruel and unjustifiable, because not true. The Gurkhas have no sympathies with the Manipuris, and surely this was sufficiently proved by the way in which they fought under Lieutenant Grant at Thobal.

BUT, besides these carpings, it is now stated that the complaint that the ammunition of the Gurkhas ran short at Manipur is unfounded. "The force under Captain Boileau" (the officer who commanded in the retreat) "was by no means so destitute of ammunition as the original reports made it appear, for they carried off six boxes with them." It is denied also that these cartridges were for a different kind of rifle than that used by the Gurkhas. Then it is asked, what became of the Gurkhas' knives?

THESE reflections, apparently made against the Gurkha soldiers, are made in reality against the Gurkhas' English officers, for the same critic says:—"The disparity in numbers at Thobal was certainly not less than that at Manipur, and there Lieutenant Grant was more than able to hold his own." The grammar of this is not very clear, but the meaning evidently is that the Gurkhas fought well under Grant, but at Manipur fought badly because under a less able leader.

THIS kind of criticism is mischievous as well as foolish. No good can possibly come out of a mutual recrimination between civilians and military and their friends as to the placing of the responsibility of the Manipur disaster. Mistakes seem to have been made on both sides, but until the public is in full possession of the information which it is only in the power of the Government to give, these indiscriminate fault-findings are to be regretted and condemned.

ANGLO-INDIANS at home have, of course, had their say on the matter, and have from their experience some right to be heard. One of these, Mr. W. Martin Wood, in a letter to an evening contemporary written a month ago acquitted Mr. Quinton of all but a very small share in the blame for the Manipur fiasco. "The ultimate responsibility," he wrote, "rests with the Political Department—the 'Foreign Office' of the Indian Government—and that Department, chiefly by reason of its absorption during recent years in the demented policy of trans-frontier aggression, has lost its head in dealing with its own proper business, that of modifying, advising or directing the internal political arrangements in the Indian States of which Manipur is one." Mr. Martin Wood thinks, perhaps, that Mr. Quinton's error was from trop de zèle in carrying out his orders. But with regard to that unfortunate officer we would commend to our readers the perusal of a letter from the vigorous hand of Sir W. W. Hunter, which to-day we reprint from the Times.

THE number of Post Offices in India in 1854 was 201; in 1879–80 the number rose to 4,579; and in 1890–91 to 9,586, or nearly doubling the number in ten years, 1879-81 to 1890-91. The number of letters delivered went up from 17½ millions in 1854 to 120 millions in 1879–80, and now we find the figures in the annual report for 1888–89 at nearly 168½ millions. Newspapers in 1854 were less than two millions; in 1879–80 they went up to 11½; and in 1888–89 to over 22½ millions, or double the figures of 1879-80. Parcels in 1854 were under 300,000; in 1879–80 they went up to nearly a million; and in 1888–89 to nearly two millions. Book-packets in 1854 from less than 100,000 to over two millions in 1879-80, and to eight millions in 1888–89. Postcards were not known in 1854; in 1879–80 they stood at 7½ millions; and now at the considerable number of nearly 86 millions.

THE manager of the North-Western Hotel, Lahore, has filed a complaint in the Court of the Assistant Commissioner of Lahore, charging a lady, who, it is said, has been staying in the hotel since February last, with having struck him with the handle of her parasol.

THE MANIPUR EXPEDITION.

CALCUTTA, MAY 5.

A despatch from Manipur, dated May 2, states that the Regent and his youngest brother have separated from the Senaputty. One hundred men of the 43rd Goorkhas have gone, under Lieutenant Clay, with Captain Dun and Mr. Mitchell, interpreter, to endeavour to capture the Regent, who it is thought may be returning to surrender.

A Manipuri has been captured near Tamu, whom the villagers declare to be the actual murderer of Mr. Quinton. He was found to be severely wounded by three bullets, but it is uncertain when the wounds were inflicted.

The instructions given to Mr. Quinton were to expel the Senaputty, and the method was left to his own discretion, no orders being given to effect the arrest at the durbar.

(Reuter.)

CALCUTTA, MAY 4.

The Englishman vouches for the accuracy of an account of the Manipur disaster which appears in its columns to-day. Though adding little essential to the narratives already furnished, the account merits attention, if only because it confirms previous statements as to the secrecy observed from the outset in regard to Mr. Quinton's mission and the unusual mode of procedure adopted.

It appears that on Sunday, March 15, Lieutenant Gurdon reached the Residency at Manipur and closely questioned Mr. Grimwood as to the condition of affairs, without, however, in any way enlightening him as to the object of Mr. Quinton's mission, even the telegrams which subsequently passed between the lieutenant and the Chief Commissioner being worded in Italian. Lieutenant Gurdon left Manipur to rejoin Mr. Quinton on Tuesday, and on the following Friday, March 20, Mr. Grimwood went out to Sengmai to meet the mission, when he was informed, in strict confidence, that it had been decided to arrest the Jubraj in open durbar and deport him to India, Mr. Grimwood himself being required to carry out the arrest. Mr. Quinton with his escort reached the capital on Sunday morning, and the durbar was ordered for noon. Mrs. Grimwood begged Mr. Quinton not to compel her husband to effect the arrest of the Jubraj, as he had always been so friendly, and earnestly besought the Chief Commissioner to appoint someone else. Mr. Quinton, however, refused, stating that it was Mr. Grimwood's duty. Replying to Mrs. Grimwood's question as to the reason of the arrest, Mr. Quinton declared that the Government could not allow anyone except themselves to make or unmake Maharajahs. At the hour appointed the Maharajah, the Jubraj, and the Senapati arrived at the Residency, but the durbar was delayed for two and a half hours, the translations of the document announcing the decision of the Government not being completed. The presence of the strong guard aroused the suspicions of the Princes, however, and the Jubraj and Senapati slipped away. Mr. Quinton steadily refused to see the Maharajah in the absence of the Jubraj, who alleged ill-health as the reason for his departure.

Eventually, the durbar was postponed till eight o'clock on Monday morning, and then till noon. The Jubraj continuing to make excuses for his non-attendance, Mr. Quinton at four in the afternoon sent Mr. Grimwood to inform him of the decision of the Government. Mr. Grimwood remained at the Palace for three hours, endeavouring to persuade the Jubraj to surrender himself, but he as persistently declined, protesting that he had done nothing to deserve banishment. On Tuesday, March 24, the Jubraj's Palace was stormed, but the Prince was not found. At noon the Residency was attacked by the Manipuris, and at half-past three the troops holding the Palace were withdrawn. Shortly afterwards guns were brought to bear upon the Residency, and Mr. Grimwood urged that the British should retire to the heights, a mile and a half distant, until reinforcements arrived, arguing that the fact of the telegraph wires being cut would warn those at the other end that something untoward had occurred. He further pointed out that if cannon were brought the Residency would easily be rushed and captured by the Manipuris. Mr. Quinton wanted to obtain terms, and Mr. Grimwood was sent to parley with the Jubraj, who, however, refused to treat with anyone except Mr. Quinton himself. The latter, with Colonel Skene, Mr. Grimwood, Lieut. Simpson, and Mr. Cossins, then went forth to meet his doom, under the circumstances which have already been described.

The statement published in the Englishman emphatically declares that no blame is to be attached to Mr. Grimwood, who had already enjoyed the friendship and confidence of the Jubraj, and was thoroughly well informed as to the position of affairs in Manipur. Warm praise is given to Mrs. Grimwood for the splendid heroism she displayed during the attack on the Residency. The lady herself had a narrow escape from death. A Sepoy standing next to her was struck by a bullet which scattered the poor fellow's brains over her dress; yet, notwithstanding all the horrors of the scene, and her terrible anxiety as to the fate of her husband, she was unflinching in her attendance on the wounded, soothing Lieut. Brackenbury's last moments, and by her cool presence of mind greatly helping the retreat. A eulogy is also passed upon Captain Butcher's decision of character, and Lieut. Wood's pluck and efforts to lighten the anxiety of the retreat, the danger and hardships of which have, it is declared, been altogether under-estimated.

RANGOON, MAY 4.

Mr. Soppitt, with the 12th Burma Regiment, has returned to Tammu. He is now about to start with a detachment of mounted infantry in pursuit of the Regent and Senaputty, who are believed to be hiding with a few followers on the Manipur-Thaungdut border. The military and police on the Upper Chindwin will co-operate from Homalin, Thaungdut, and Poungbyin in the endeavour to capture the fugitives.

The following telegram has been received from the Viceroy by the India Office :—

MAY 4.

Major Maxwell, chief political officer, telegraphs from Manipur: "No relatives of Senapati were killed or injured in the attack on the 24th. Captains Butcher and Lugard, Dr. Calvert, and Subadar Mahesh Thapa, all say decidedly that no women or children were seen in the Senapati's enclosure."

We have received the following telegrams from the India Office :—

"From Viceroy, May 2, 1891.

"All quiet in Manipur, April 29. The postal line to Silchar had been re-established, and the Kohima line was to reopen in two or three days. The inhabitants were returning to their villages, and Collett was getting local supplies of grain. He hoped to reopen the daily market in a few days.

"From the Viceroy, Simla, May 3.

"General Collett wires from Manipur, April 30, that mounted infantry had come upon traces of Regent and companions, and had found rifles, ammunition, and ponies, but were obliged to desist from pursuit owing to hills being impracticable for mounted infantry. Regent had taken Chasal route, and his following had dwindled to 20 men. The wounded officers are doing well."

MAY 3.

Although the telegraph department is doing its utmost to restore communication, the Manipur line is not yet open beyond Kairong, and, as telegrams have been sent thither by messengers, the news is two or three days old before it reaches India.

The fugitive Princes were not captured up to Thursday evening, but a number of rifles and other articles found on the road indicated the haste with which the fugitives fled.

It is now clearly established that the Manipuris themselves, and not the half-savage Naga mercenaries, were guilty of the murder of the British officers. After Mr. Quinton, Colonel Skene, and Mr. Grimwood were beheaded, their blood was sprinkled over the mouths of two idols, which stand in the shape of dragons in front of the Royal Palace. Next day the Regent and the Senaputty went in a sort of State procession through the streets, as if to celebrate a victory. Crowds assembled and general rejoicings took place. The Senaputty seemed determined to wipe away all signs of British connection with the State. Not only were the charred remains of the Residency still further demolished, but every building in the neighbourhood, and the very walls of the compound and garden were levelled, and the graves of British officers were desecrated. The Kongjaikhut sanatorium, 12 miles from the capital, built by Sir J. Johnstone, was burnt, and his child's grave dug up. The first impression, that Mr. Quinton was killed in the excitement of the moment and that the Manipuris quickly repented the act, appears altogether wrong.

The funeral service on Thursday morning is described as most impressive. The idols on which the blood had been sprinkled were blown up that evening, and on the same day a proclamation was issued directing disarmament. All found armed after seven days were liable to death or transportation.

The Government has not yet given any indications of its intentions regarding Manipur. The question should be treated in a practical spirit. Putting aside purely sentimental considerations, annexation is the only course which will effectually punish the Manipuris and restore British prestige. Moreover, that step will have the advantage of removing an obstacle to free communication between Assam and Upper Burmah, and of giving a position where a strong British garrison can be stationed to overawe the turbulent Nagas, Kukis, and Lushais.

Another point on which the Government maintains the utmost reticence is the nature of the instructions given to Mr. Quinton. This is the more to be regretted, as it now seems clear he intended to effect the arrest of the Senaputty at the durbar. If that idea was not his own, then fairness demands that the memory of the unfortunate officer should be cleared of the imputation, and that the blame of sanctioning such a very extraordinary proceeding should be laid on the right shoulders. It will be remembered that an attempt to carry out a similar course in Burmah some months ago was made the subject of severe animadversion, and the public have a right to know who suggested a step so inconsistent with all traditions of British policy in dealing with native States.

The Bengal Chamber of Commerce has taken the opportunity afforded by the Manipur troubles to call the attention of the Government to the necessity of constructing roads to Cachar. They point to the almost roadless condition of the district, and urge, on strategic as well as commercial grounds, the importance of making a good system of communication through a country which is so exposed to Lushai and Naga raids, and which is one of the main bases of all hostile operations against those tribes.

RANGOON, MAY 3.

All the officers wounded in the recent engagement near Thobal are doing well.

The Tamu column, except the 2nd Battalion of the 4th Goorkhas, who remain at Manipur until transport is available to take them to Kohima, will return to Burmah in detachments. The first detachment is expected to arrive at Tamu to-day. The health of the troops is good. The Regent of Manipur, the Senaputty, and their two other brothers, accompanied by some twenty followers, are reported to have fled to the Upper Chindwin. The mounted military police are searching the district for them.

CALCUTTA, MAY 2.

The following troops remain at Manipur:—The 8th Mountain Battery, The 1st Battalion of the 2nd Goorkhas, and the 42nd, 43rd, and 44th Goorkhas. The 2nd Battalion of the 4th Goorkhas remain a short time only.

CALCUTTA, MAY 1.

Manipur news has been delayed for two or three days, as the telegraph is not open beyond Kairong. Lieutenant Dewar commands the mounted infantry sent to pursue the Regent and the Senaputty. The party has taken only three days' rations.

The remains of Mr. Quinton and his companions, which were exhumed in the presence of the committee consisting of Colonel Mitchell, Major Maxwell, Captain Boileau, and Dr. Calvert, were to be buried yesterday in the cemetery near the Residency, with full military honours, General Collett reading the service, and all the regiments furnishing one company for the funeral cortège.

The Court, consisting of Colonel Ewens, Major Travers, and Captain Birch, appointed to inquire into the recent events, have decided that a proclamation of disarmament shall be issued after the Manipur officers have furnished the names and residences of the Sepoys who are now scattered.

The wounded officers of the Tamu column are doing well.

Owing to the difficulty of rationing so large a force, the Cachar column was to start on its return on Wednesday and the Tamu column yesterday or to-day.

LATER.

The Manipuris state that the murder of Mr. Quinton and the others took place shortly after their seizure. The negotiations having failed, the officers were leaving the durbar hall, which was full of armed and excited men. The Senaputty indicated by a nod that the massacre might begin, and then retired with the Jubraj. Mr. Grimwood, who was walking last, was stabbed with a spear in the back; he fell and was dragged about 50 yards and then beheaded. Mr. Quinton and Colonel Skene were beheaded in the same place, while Mr. Cossins, Lieutenant Simpson, and the buglers were killed near the hall. There appears no reason to believe that they were tortured.

The Residency is a complete ruin. The palace also is burnt having been set on fire before the Princes fled.

BRITISH CAMP, MANIPUR, APRIL 30
(via Kairong).

Cholera is spreading, and most of the garrison have been moved out of the fort.—Reuter.

MANIPUR (viâ KARONG), APRIL 29, 7 P.M.

Four men of the detachment of mounted infantry sent out in pursuit of the fugitive rulers have just come back with instructions to report that Lieutenant Dewar, of the 60th Rifles, believes that his party is on the track of the Maharajah and Senaputty, a rifle presented to the Maharajah by the Viceroy having been found on the road. The Maharajah is reported to have taken to flight three days before the arrival of the British forces; but this story is regarded as improbable.

Confidence is being gradually restored. The people are returning to their homes, and supplies of provisions are coming in.—Reuter.

"From Viceroy, April 30, 1891.

"Collett telegraphs that Manipur Regent and brothers, with following of 50 armed men, have fled in north-east direction, apparently to Chasad, in Tonkal Naga country. Mounted infantry sent in pursuit, but not likely to overtake them. Burial place of our murdered officers has been found, and a military funeral ceremony was to be held this morning."

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, MAY 5.

With regard to the Black Mountain expedition, the Government has sanctioned the construction of temporary shelters for the troops near Seri, and the question of the necessity of keeping European troops on the spot after the cessation of hostilities is now being considered in consultation with General Elles and the Punjab Government.

CALCUTTA, MAY 5.

A Miranzai telegram, dated Mastaon last night, states that many men with standards were seen coming down from Tilah to Khanki, and 2,000 Shekhans and Mishties are reported as being collected at Kangarbur ready to oppose the advance of the troops. The enemy is said to be preparing to commence active hostilities again on the Eed Festival, which takes place on the 9th inst.

Sir W. Lockhart arrived at Mastaon yesterday.

CALCUTTA, MAY 5.

The Mounted Infantry have returned from Manipur without capturing the Princes; but further efforts for that object are being made by means of the military police.

Twenty-five thousand rounds of smooth-bore ammunition and a quantity of caps were found to have been all destroyed.

It is understood that the Indian Government are opposed to annexation, and would prefer to establish in Manipur a new rule under British influence.

SIMLA, MAY 5.

A dispatch received here from Manipur states that a man who is declared by the villagers to be the murderer of Mr. Quinton has been caught. The man was found to be suffering from three severe bullet wounds. It is believed that the Regent is coming in to surrender.—Reuter.

The India Office has received the following telegram:—

"From Viceroy, May 4.

"Major Maxwell, Chief Political Officer, telegraphs from Manipur:—'No relatives of Senaputty were killed or injured in the attack on the 24th. Captains Butcher and Lugard, Dr. Calvert, and Subadar Mahesh Thapa all say decidedly that no women or children were seen in the Senaputty's enclosure.'"

CALCUTTA, MAY 4.

Sir W. Lockhart marched from Kharai Kotal to Daradar, the head-quarters of the Mamazai clan, on Saturday. Fourteen out of the 21 rifles taken on April 4 were brought back and a promise was obtained to give up the remainder.

Yesterday the detached column which has been operating in Shekhan and the Mamazai country returned to Samana. Fourteen towers of the Mamazais and of the Rubbia Kheyl tribe were blown up en route.

A Mamazai village was fired, contrary to orders, probably by some of the camp followers, so Sir W. Lockhart has remitted the whole of the fine imposed on the tribe, to show them that he meant to destroy only defences, and not villages.

MADRAS, MAY 4.

Distress continues to prevail in certain districts of the Presidency, but it is prevented from becoming acute by the opening of works giving employment to all capable of working, and by the establishment of soup-kitchens. The gratuitous relief of the destitute is confined to a comparatively limited area of the tracts most affected, and the proximity of the railway and port of Madras permits the easy importation into the famine-stricken district of large supplies of grain, the cheapness of which, as compared with the prices that ruled during previous famines, has enabled the ryots to avoid the necessity of resorting to the Government relief works. Thus the number actually employed is much below the anticipated figure.

There will probably, however, be a considerable increase shortly, owing to the cessation of all agricultural operations, but it is expected that the advent of the south-west monsoon and a rainfall in June, if reasonably propitious, will result in the immediate return to their agricultural avocations of the majority so employed, and will remove all cause for further anxiety. The failure of the monsoon would largely intensify the existing distress, but arrangements have been made by the Government sufficient to meet any probable emergency.—Reuter.

RANGOON, MAY 4.

Mr. Soppitt, Civil Officer with the Tamu column of the Manipur field force, has returned to Tamu and started with a body of mounted infantry in pursuit of the Regent and the Senaputty, who are reported to be hiding on the Manipur Thaingdat border.

MAY 3.

A telegram, dated Seri, May 2, states that last night, under cover of darkness and heavy rain, some marauders crept into the camp past sentries, cut down one pony and carried off two others. This shows that the tribes are still far from submission.

The Bombay public are greatly excited by an extraordinary tragedy which happened there last week. Two young Parsee ladies, named Buchoobai and Therozbhai, left their home, stating that they were going on a visit to an aunt, residing at some distance. About an hour later their bodies were found lying in a pool of blood at the foot of the University clock-tower. It is clear that they had fallen either from the storey above the clock or from that immediately below. The height of the former is 150 ft., of the latter 97 ft. So far, there is no explanation of the mystery. The first idea was that they had been criminally assaulted and thrown over by some Mahomedans, who are said to have been in the tower at the time, but who have not been traced, or that they had thrown themselves over to escape the importunities of these men. But it seems doubtful if any such persons were there, and the theories of voluntary suicide or pure accident appear to be at least equally probable. The inquest, which is not yet concluded, may throw some light on the matter.

LATER.

Sir W. Lockhart marched on Friday from Dran to Kharai. On the way he was met by deputations from four clans—namely, the Shekhans, the Mamazais, the Rubbia Kheyls, and the Meshtis. These are tribes against which the expedition of last January was directed. They then submitted and paid fines, but when the late disturbance broke out on Samana range they took a leading part, and the Rubbia Kheyls murdered their Sepoy prisoners with much brutality, one man having been, it is said, flayed. Sir W. Lockhart now ordered them to restore the rifles taken on April 4, and the mules captured from the convoy. When these orders are complied with, their submission will be accepted, after they have been further punished by the destruction of their towers and the imposition of a fine.

With the submission of these clans a great step will have been taken in the pacification of the Miranzai border. Every effort will then be directed to make roads, to construct posts on the Samana range, and to prevent the recurrence of outbreaks.

CALCUTTA, MAY 2.

Sir W. Lockhart advanced into the Shekhan country on the 30th ult., and occupied the village of Dran, the head-quarters of the tribe. The advance was opposed, but the 1st Punjab Regiment, which was the leading force, soon cleared off the enemy, with one man wounded. The towers of Dran and Lagardarra were blown up. The enemy set great value on these towers, and their destruction is a severe punishment to them. The villages and the cultivations were left unmolested.

Sir W. Lockhart proposed to visit Daradar yesterday in order to inflict a similar punishment on the Mamzais, who joined the Shekhans in attacking the convoy last month.

CALCUTTA, MAY 1.

The situation in the Black Mountain is unchanged. A party has been sent towards Machai to capture 65 head of cattle belonging to the Akazais, but the tribe still refuses to submit. Probably a prolonged occupation by a reduced force will be necessary. Meanwhile roads are being made along the crest of the Black Mountain, and also from Oghi, our new base, to the different passes.

The India Office has received the following telegram:—

"From Governor, Madras, May 1, 1891.

"Condition of Chingleput and North Arcot unchanged. 5,300 employed on special works in former district, 5,020 in latter district. Numbers on gratuitous relief in North Arcot, 929. There is no longer cause for anxiety in Nanguneri. Prices stationary."

BURMAH.

RANGOON, MAY 4.

The pacification of Wuntho having been completed, Brigadier-General Wolseley returns to Mandalay, and the Wuntho field force will be broken up, the troops returning to their quarters.

RANGOON, MAY 3.

An important circular on the reorganization and reduction of the Burmah military police has been issued by Sir Alexander Mackenzie. He has sanctioned the strength of the military police in Upper Burmah at upwards of 16,000 men. The battalions vary from four to 15 companies each. The smaller battalions have one, and the larger two, three, and in one case four British officers seconded from Bengal regiments. The men for the most part are Punjabees and Pathans, with some Goorkhas and Hindoostanees. If trouble arose on the Afghanistan side the British officers would be recalled to their regiments and the police battalions would be placed under local district superintendents, who understand neither their language nor their ways, and have themselves no military training. The results might be disastrous.

The remedies proposed have been—First, the conversion of the police battalions into local regiments; secondly, a reduction of strength. A reduction in the strength of the military police in three out of the four divisions in Upper Burmah is considered feasible by General Stedman, late Inspector-General. The conversion of the police into local regiments was begun, and four such regiments were formed. Further progress was stayed, probably owing to objections at Madras to disband useless regiments which are still sent to Burmah for service.

Meantime, to ascertain how far reduction by one method or other may safely go, the Chief Commissioner has issued a circular inquiring what number of armed police it is essential to retain as such in each district for the repression of dacoity and gang crime. A large proportion of these will be mounted to make the force mobile. In addition to the objections to the present condition of the police force stated in the circular there is the real danger of having large bodies of Pathans and other fighting men under the lax discipline of the police, with but one or two British officers to look after them.

The Burmese civil police are also to be reorganized and redistributed. At present they are armed with guns of various sorts, and, because small bodies of Burmans cannot be trusted to use or defend firearms against dacoits, they are kept together in larger posts of thirty or forty, and spend much time in practising ineffective drill, and they never learn their civil duties. It is proposed henceforward to arm them only with batons and dahs, to distribute them to convenient stations, to instruct the men at police schools, and to introduce a proper system of village patrol. It is probable that on the northern frontier the Chief Commissioner may prefer to retain the military police battalions rather than convert them into local regiments.

The Burmah official Gazette has published an important note by the Chief Commissioner and a memorandum by the Financial Commissioner propounding for consideration a scheme for abolishing the thathameda, or house-tax, upon agriculturists in Upper Burmah, and substituting a land revenue assessment based upon the principle of reserving for the State a share of the gross produce of each holding. It is proposed to settle all so-called bobabamg, or private lands, upon these terms with the existing occupants, giving security and permanency of tenure forthwith and without waiting for a regular survey and settlement. The tenants of State land pay at the present the estimated value of one-fourth of a share of the produce. It is suggested that private lands might pay from one-sixth to one-eighth. The Chief Commissioner indicates his preference for the lower figure, which, according to the Financial Commissioner, would fall at the rate of about two rupees an acre and raise the revenue of Upper Burmah by 26 lakhs of rupees. Various methods for arriving at a fair estimate of the value of the State share of the produce are put forward for discussion. The actual payments would be made in cash. It is claimed as an advantage that the State and the cultivator would, under this system, be partners, sharing the profits and losses of good and bad years, which, in a country with such a scanty rainfall, is most important. The plan would make it more desirable than ever for the Government to spend money freely upon irrigation. Those who are not agriculturists will continue to pay a modified thathameda tax.

A GANG of coolies engaged in constructing a new road from Saideur on the Eastern Bengal State Railway to Shamgunj lately unearthed a very large hoard of rupees buried in pots four feet below the surface. SHAMA PERSAD, a Hindu, was picked up by the police from the Hughli river, off Jorabagan Ghat, on Sunday, at 10.30 P.M. He was in a very exhausted condition, and was suffering from severe burns. On being questioned, the man said that while making poojah he had fallen into a trance, during which he heard the goddess Kali order him to proceed to the burning-ghat and throw himself on to the first corpse that was burning. He immediately went down to the ghat, and seeing that a corpse was alight, threw himself on to it, but feeling an unpleasant sensation, he jumped into the river to cool himself. On inquiries being made by the police, it was ascertained that a body had been burning, when a man rushed up and threw himself backwards on to the burning pile. He did not, however, remain long before starting for the river.

AT the Calcutta police-court on Monday a telegraph-signaller named Van Haften, employed in the Calcutta Central Office at a salary of Rs. 20 a month, was charged with defrauding the Government of six thousand rupees by means of forged money-order telegrams. The prisoner, a youth of about twenty, was formerly stationed at Dacca. On being transferred to Calcutta he arranged with a firm at Dacca to receive telegraphic money-orders on his account to be sent from Rangoon, and to remit the money according to his instructions. From time to time telegraphic money-orders were received at Dacca purporting to come from W. R. Kinsley & Co., Rangoon, in favour of the Dacca firm, and accounts were paid to the latter firm, who remitted the money under instructions from the prisoner to different addresses in Calcutta. As much as Rs. 1,800 was sent to Dacca in one day, and the frauds extended over some four months before they were discovered. Telegrams from Rangoon to Dacca are sent viâ Calcutta. There is no such firm as W. R. Kinsley & Co. at Rangoon, and the telegrams were written and despatched by the prisoner, who also received the money remitted by the Dacca firm, in some cases in a false name and in others through third parties.

A PROTEST against the "cramming" system, so far as it applied to law examinations was held by the Madras law students in the hall of the Christian College on Saturday last. SIR ARTHUR COLLINS, the Chief Justice of Madras, is in direct communication with the Secretary of State for India as to the necessity of retaining for another year a sixth Judge in the Madras High Court, in consequence of the great accumulation of arrears. THE native weavers of Bangalore have a common practice of using empty bomb-shells as spindle sockets for their looms. Some six weeks ago, a weaver picked up an unexploded shell on the artillery practice-ground at Agram, and thinking that the combustibles it contained were rubbish, threw it into the fire, his wife being busy cooking at the time near by. The shell exploded, killed the man on the spot, and fractured the right leg of his wife.

IT may not be known to the public at large, observes the Madras Mail, that the late Sir Madava Row had other remarkable attainments than those which brought him into public notice and won for him "the applause of applauded people." He was not only one of those natives who spoke and wrote with great facility in the English language, but was also equally well versed in his own mother tongue; and he has left behind him to the Marathi student a moderate legacy of good Marathi poems, numerous enough to form a small book. Among his popular poems may be mentioned "An Ode to Convince an Athiest" and "A Glance at the Nineteenth Century." The latter, only recently composed, discloses the great material changes that India has undergone in her political, social, and religious aspects by the English rule. The poems are said to be such as to entitle the Rajah to be regarded as a Southern India Maratha poet.

IT will be hardly credited, writes the local Mail, and yet it is perfectly true, that it was seriously proposed at the meeting of the Madras Senate to limit the study of Indian History up to the year 1858? Fortunately Mr. Bliss objected and his objection was finally upheld. He pointed out the desirability of boys learning history up to date. Many of the boys on leaving school knew absolutely nothing of life, and one way of teaching them what life really is was to teach them recent history. He quoted a case in point, where a young man who had passed through Sandhurst College did not know who Lord Lawrence was.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR in Council is pleased to appoint Mr. W. H. Le Quesne to act as Under-Secretary to Government, Public Works Department, vice Major Olivier, R.E., pending further orders.

AT Monday's meeting of the Bombay Municipal Corporation Mr. D. E. Wacha proposed that, having regard to the alarming growth of Municipal expenditure in recent years, and the possibility of increase to the existing burden of local taxation in the near future, it was imperative to retrench expenditure and supervise it more rigidly with a view of securing greater soundness and permanence to Municipal finance; and that a Committee of Retrenchment should be appointed to investigate all branches of existing expenditure, and submit their report not later than August 31 next, showing what material reductions and economies compatible with efficiency could be effected, and what system of supervision could be adopted which would better safeguard expenditure in all its branches. Mr. A. M. Dharamsi moved as an amendment that the Municipal Commissioner should be asked to obtain information from the heads of departments on the questions raised by Mr. Wacha, and that he should be requested to submit his report on the same within one month. After the matter had been under discussion for two hours—the full extent of the sitting—the debate was adjourned. At their meeting on Thursday afternoon the members of the Bombay Municipal Corporation, after a long discussion, rejected Mr. Wacha's resolution calling for the appointment of a "Committee of Retrenchment" to investigate all branches of existing Municipal expenditure, with a view to effecting a reduction in the same, but agreed, on the motion of Mr. Pherozeshah Mehta, to forward Mr. Wacha's statement regarding the financial position of the Corporation to the Standing Committee and the Municipal Commissioner for their consideration.

WITHOUT being oblivious of the prompt efforts made by other troops in the Manipur region, it is fair, the local paper thinks, to claim for the Punjab the honours which Lieutenant C. J. W. Grant and his gallant party of the 2nd Burma Infantry have won in Manipur. The regiment to which Grant and Presgrave belong was formed from the Chin Levy a year ago, and advanced on Tammu from the Burma, not the Assam side. The behaviour of the Punjab men contrasts strikingly with that of the 44th and 42nd Gurkhas, who appear to have lamentably failed in heroism, if not in duty, at Manipur.

WE have been making inquiries, says the Civil and Military Gazette, into the slave trade in Kaffir girls, with a view to ascertaining how generally it extends in India; but we find that, owing to the zenana system, it is very difficult to obtain direct evidence. We are, however, assured on trustworthy authority that girls from Kaffiristan, Yaghistan, and also Mohmands are sold in Peshawar, not by relatives, for sums varying from Rs. 5 to Rs. 200, which we believe is the limit. The fact that this trade is not stamped out by the British authorities is due, we believe, to two facts. In the first place, although traffic in slaves is penalized under our laws, we cannot act in independent territory, and the slaves are of course captured by trans-frontier tribes and sold in the first instance by them. In the second place, the traffic is not one which the public opinion of our own Mussulman subjects condemns. Indeed, the good old days before the British raj, when the wealthy had zenanas stocked with numerous slaves, are often spoken of with regret. Under these circumstances, too rigid a crusade against such slavery would be both futile and unpopular; and the pursuit of the rescuer cannot pass beyond the silken fence of the zenana.

MR. QUINTON.

WHEN our hearts are away at Manipur with the mutilated remains of the dead, and the painful yearning for swift and signal retribution is still unsatisfied, it is difficult to take up the pen and attempt a notice, however brief and incomplete, of the distinguished officer whose career has been suddenly cut short by treachery and foul murder. For the brutal deed which has closed the lives of the late Chief Commissioner of Assam and his unfortunate companions touches us, in these provinces, very nearly, and deepens with a sense of close personal loss the gloom with which the sombre tidings of this national calamity have been received.

Having as his contemporaries Sir Charles Elliott, Sir Charles Aitchison, and Sir Denis FitzPatrick, Mr. Quinton entered the Civil Service in the first year of the open competition (1856) at the close of a successful college course at Dublin University. Appointed to these provinces, he spent the first years of his service as Assistant Magistrate at Ghazipur and Meerut; shortly after his transfer to Oudh, then a separate administration, he became well known as the capable Magistrate of Lucknow. In 1875 he was nominated by Sir George Couper to a temporary vacancy in the office of Judicial Commissioner of Burma. Shortly after his return in 1877 he was appointed Magistrate of Allahabad; and after a brief tenure of the post of Civil and Sessions Judge and Commissioner of Jhansi, he returned to Allahabad as Commissioner in 1882. In Lord Ripon's viceroyalty he was chosen by Sir Alfred Lyall in 1883 to represent the N. W. P. and Oudh in the Imperial Legislative Council; and so fully did he maintain the reputation which he had already acquired as a man of sober judgment, sound views, and reliable experience, that this appointment was renewed both by Lord Dufferin and Lord Lansdowne. Mr. Quinton's knowledge of the details of administration in every branch of public business marked him out for appointment to the Public Service Commission, while his judicial experience and impartiality of view led to his selection for the unenviable post of member of the Crawford Commission. In the New Year's Honour List of 1888 Lord Dufferin showed his sense of Mr. Quinton's public services by securing for him the Companionship of the Star of India, and shortly afterwards Sir Alfred Lyall made him a member of the Board of Revenue for these provinces. He held this post till his appointment by Lord Lansdowne to be Chief Commissioner of Assam in October 1889. He was a Fellow of the Universities of Calcutta and Allahabad. His Indian term of service would have been completed on the 16th November next.

This is no time, nor indeed have we as yet the knowledge, for any expression of opinion regarding the tragical issue of his mission to Manipur or of the proceedings which led up to it. Mr. Quinton received his orders direct from the Government of India, and there can be no question that he endeavoured to carry them out, to the best of his ability, with the same loyalty and unflinching adherence to duty which have on all occasions characterized his official career. In the execution of that duty he has met a violent and cruel death, hurled with shocking suddenness, and in the fulness of health and strength, from a position of power and eminence to be the victim of a savage and bloodthirsty soldiery, and, although the full particulars of his murder may never be known, we may rest assured that he met his doom with manly dignity and the fortitude of a Christian. Over the dark details of that black crime we do not desire to linger. In the first outburst of sorrow our thoughts turn more naturally to the dead man's personal qualities, and to the heavy loss inflicted upon innumerable friends of all classes and races in every part of India by the barbarous act which has drained the life-blood of the "human-hearted man we loved." As an administrator, not a man it may be of commanding personal gifts, of exceptional political insight, or strong opinions, he was yet an officer of much quiet strength of character, of quick decision, of temperate opinions, of singular reasonableness of view; he had a very considerable knowledge of men and affairs, an even-balanced but confident judgment—a man not shrinking from responsibility and capable of exacting strict obedience to his orders. In his personal nature and qualities he was an eminently loveable man, and the grief for his untimely and barbarous end is embittered by the sharp contrast between the manner of his life and the manner of his tragic death. Incapacitated by an accident in youth for athletics or sport, though a man of masculine temperament, he had seldom or never been brought into personal contact with even such dangers or discomforts as befall the sportsman; he had passed his career, in steady promotion from one responsible office to another, in the normal course of civil administrative work, content with wide and many-sided friendships, the beloved and genial head of a very united family circle, up to the date of his death in unbroken happiness, and at the time of this terrible shipwreck, within near view of port—retirement to rest and leisure in England. He of whom his friends might surely have predicted that his eyes would be closed at the last by those nearest and dearest to him, and his remains consigned to earth with the solemn rites of his religion; he of whom it might have been felt certain that he who had no personal enemy in this wide Empire has, in the grim irony of fate, looked his last on life far away from wife and children, the prey unarmed of an infuriated mob, hemmed in by pitiless and bloodthirsty foes; and his dead body lies mutilated and without sepulture on the extreme outskirts of British sovereignty. Gifted with an equable temper, pleasant manners, great kindness of heart, unflagging cheeriness, and a contented disposition, his personal attractiveness made him popular wherever he went and with all classes of society; and his tragical death will be deeply deplored throughout India. But to his intimate friends—and they are many—his death is an irreparable calamity. There is no consolation to them for "the touch of that vanished hand or the sound of the voice that is still." There are men, as Bacon says, that are princes and "have wives, sonnes, and nephews," but these cannot supply the place of a friend, these cannot make up for the lost "comfort of friendship." "I am heartbroken," writes an intimate friend of Mr. Quinton. "There was no man in India to whom I was more attached or had a greater affection for. I had known him so intimately . . . it seems as though a great source of sunshine had gone out of one's life, and I can scarcely bear to think I shall never hear his laugh again. He was a very loveable man." He was a man of whom more than one old friend might have thought, as Septimus Severus did of Plautianus, "I love the man so well as I wish he may outlive me."

> And in the places of his youth;

Into the privacy of grief we may not intrude, but we may at least express the intense sympathy which we know is everywhere felt with the lady who was the companion of his life, now far away at home, with the fatherless daughters alone at Shillong, and the son who started with General Collett in the vain hope of being his father's rescuer from captivity.—Pioneer.

GOVERNMENT AND PRIVATE ENTERPRISE.

"PRUDENS FUTURE" writes to the Pioneer:—"Last week I was at Amritsar, and having a spare day, I went up to Dhariwal to see the Egerton Woollen Mills. The first thought on seeing them was that they were in a very out-of-the-way place, and in conversation with the manager he informed me the old company had started the mills at Dhariwal to utilize the water-power available from the Bari Doab Canal at that spot. I did not realise this as an inducement, as at the time of my visit and for some time before, the canal was dry, and the mills were being worked by steam-power. I understood it was contemplated by the present company, who have recently acquired the mills, to remove the machinery to a more central and convenient position, as the charge made by Government for the water-power used was altogether out of proportion to its value, and the stoppage of the canal for repairs, &c., probably at a time when the mills were very busy, rendered it advisable to work with steam-power only. My object in writing to you is to show the dog-in-the-manger policy of the Government with regard to the available water-power on the various canals through the country. I believe the Irrigation Department have a list of the available water-power at each fall on the various canals, and the rent per horse-power varies. I also believe the manner in which the value of water-power was arrived at was to calculate the cost of steam-power at the spot; and as the water-power value was arrived at from 20 to 40 years ago, and has not been changed, the cost of steam-power has decreased very considerably from extension of railways, new mines, and improvements in steam generators, so that, at the present time, the Government valuation of its water-power is about double, or even more, of what steam would cost for the same work. I do not wish to go into comparative values, but to remark, as I said before, on 'the dog-in-the-manger' policy of Government. On all the large canals, at different points, many thousands of horse-power exist, and are practically useless; if the whole were utilized nothing would be taken out of the water, and it would cost Government nothing. Why cannot Government offer this available and now useless power free to anyone who will utilize it for manufacturing purposes? Such a course would probably encourage various concerns to start, and the very fact of local labour finding employment would be ample repayment for the power which it now owns but cannot utilize. The canals exist for irrigation purposes, but in their course, to obtain suitable levels, it is necessary to put in weirs, and according to the height of the fall and the volume of water passing so is the power. As the water returns to the canal after giving out its power by its fall nothing is taken out of it or is lost; the same water passes on to again give out the same power close by or miles away, and afterwards to be utilized for irrigation for which the Government recovers its value; therefore, if the whole of the water-power available throughout India were given free, Government would lose nothing; but under present regulations, this power which has existed, and been running to waste, for nearly half a century in many parts, can only be utilized by paying an altogether prohibitive rate, quite sufficient to handicap any manufacture, and hence I think you will agree with me in comparing such a policy with 'the dog-in-the-manger.' In England water-power has now, practically, no value. I know of many thousands of horse-power to be had for nothing, and this in manufacturing centres, and yet in India, far from a railway station, town, or even good road, the Government expect business men to pay an excessively high rate for the privilege of utilizing what is daily going to waste."

"PAGET, M.P." ON BRITISH JUSTICE.

MR. CHARLES ERNEST SCHWANN, M.P., did not visit India last cold weather for nothing. It is true that the results of this globe-trotting Manchester merchant's discoveries and investigations have not been given to the world in the usual book of travels, and have had to content themselves with a humbler destination in the columns of the Star; but they are none the less remarkable for that, and thanks to woodcuts, double headings, and a generous sprinkling of capital letters of the alphabet they have attracted sufficient attention to require notice from other students of things Indian. After describing a visit to Darjeeling, and talking the usual twaddle about "feasting" his eyes on "the grand and peerless peaks" of the Himalayas and "the fairy fountains of verdure" on the hillsides, and after repeating with delicious naiveté the ancient chesnut about the woman who carried a grand piano on her back all the way up the ghaut, Mr. Schwann leaves cloudland, and settles down to "business." Unfortunately his visit to the nebulous regions appears to have fuddled his brains, and in his search for grievances he has overstepped the limit prescribed for men of honour. Of course it was necessary to find some grievance against British rule in India, or the Radical readers of the Star would not have been satisfied. What do they care for "peerless peaks" or muscular coolie women? What they want is some blood-curdling atrocity, some direful tale of oppression by the Tyrannous Anglo-Indian Official. Mr. Schwann, who knows his audience, went a step further than any of his globe-trotting predecessors, and has impugned something that has never been impugned before, namely the justice obtainable in the English Courts in India. "Maladministration, or miscarriage of justice," remarks this gentleman, "comes in only when the race-feeling of the Anglo-Indian portion of the community here is called into play. Justice betwixt Hindoo and Hindoo, or betwixt Hindoo and Mahomedan, is impartially administered, and no genuine complaints can arise on that head. It is when an Englishman is in the dock that English juries, and, I am sorry to say, Judges, seem to lose their heads." He then cites the Dum-Dum murder case as an example, and makes the astounding statement that no sooner had the original sentence been pronounced by Mr. Justice Norris, "than many Anglo-Indians raised a tremendous storm. Commanding officers said the English soldiers would mutiny if the sentence were carried out. Pressure was put upon the Advocate-General to grant a certificate for a review of the case. Then on the point that the soldiers' evidence, given against their comrades, had not been corroborated by any independent evidence the verdict was quashed!" A grosser and more libellous misstatement concerning the cause of the case being reviewed it would be hard to imagine, and in making it Mr. Schwann has laid himself open to the very gravest censure. As if this were not enough, Mr. Schwann goes on to make other grossly libellous and untrue statements. He says:—

"The English soldiers in Court, when the judgment was given in favour of the condemned, cheered lustily, and O'Hara was carried home to barracks in triumph. His companions, who had turned Queen's evidence, were boycotted, and had finally to leave the regiment. We must make some allowance for the feeling of comradeship amongst ignorant soldiers in an Irish regiment, but think of the effect on the Indian people of such an apparent miscarriage of justice under the clamour of the Anglo-Indian world. To poison justice at its source is not only immoral, but, to put it on the lowest grounds, is in the highest degree impolitic. Perhaps it would not be too strong a thing to say that if an Englishman beats a Hindoo he may be fined, though that is very problematical, but if he kills the native outright he is pretty sure to get off scot-free!"

Finally he caps the whole by concluding as follows:—

"All this requires no comment from me. The 'Jameson' revelations have prepared the public to understand how Englishmen can degenerate when living long with more or less uncivilized races, to understand why Anglo-Indian writers and 'gentle' Anglo-Indian ladies can never talk of the execution of a native without saying that 'another nigger has been polished off,' nor of the execution of an Englishman (when a conviction can be obtained against one, which is not easy, however glaring the crime) without its being said in indignant terms that 'another Englishman was to-day strangled to death in public.'"

What is one to say about a gentleman, professing to be an Englishman, who drags the English name through mud like this? If this is the kind of man on whom Young India builds its hopes of political advancement, all we can say is, "God help Young India!"—Madras Mail.

THE MANIPUR OUTBREAK.

KOHIMA, APRIL 17.

MR. WILLIAMS, of the Telegraph Department, has related his experience to a correspondent. He says:—On the 23rd Mr. Quinton and party, with an escort, left for Manipur and held a Darbar on the arrival of the Maharaja, and his youngest brother attended, but the Jubaraj and Senapati did not. The Chief Commissioner then ordered the Jubaraj's palace to be attacked at 4 A.M. The Manipuris replied from their forts, and fighting continued all day till 5 P.M., when both sides ceased firing. The Chief Commissioner went with four officers—Colonel Skene, Mr. Grimwood, the Political Agent, and Lieutenant Simpson, and Mr. Cossins—under a flag of truce. They were met by the Jubaraj in the compound. The Jubaraj asked the Chief Commissioner why he did such a thing without any cause of offence. The Chief Commissioner apologised, but the Manipur officers being enraged urged for the British officers to be punished. The Jubaraj gave orders to arrest them. The men arrested them, and cut off their heads. The Jubaraj was very sorry for it, as he told me after he had me released from prison. He was very kind to me after that, and told me to speak the facts as he related the above to me personally. Messrs. Melville and O'Brien, of the Telegraph Department, were at Myongkong, 36 miles from Manipur, where they were attacked by the Manipuris, and being overpowered they were also beheaded. I saw their corpses on the road, and picked up some private letters from the bungalow, which they occupied when attacked and burnt down. The Manipuris are making preparation to oppose the British, and are blocking the roads and building the wooden forts and placing guns at stages. I saw four guns at Thobal, where they sent me as interpreter to the British Camp. There the Senapati was in command, and he was also very kind to me, but became very angry when the officer believed to be Colonel Howlett would not retire after three days' delay. Both the Senapati and Jubaraj say they will fight, and die like men; and the British Government will never get them alive as prisoners, but can take their corpses as prisoners. Lieutenant Brackenbury, who was shot in the legs, was unable to get up when the Residency was shelled and set fire to, so he was burnt to death inside.

THE WINTER IN INDIA.

IN the present year a well-defined disturbance appeared about two months earlier than usual, so that it is fair to assume that the causes which operate to produce these storms were effective much before the usual time. On the 20th October Quetta began to record frost at night, and on the 21st the temperatures were between 10° and 20° lower than the normal in North-Western India. With the second week of November there occurred a change in the weather. A recovery from the unsettled conditions which had prevailed in October and the first week in November set in, and the mean temperature was higher than usual from the 10th till the close of the month over Northern India. Also there were no storms in the North-West; but in December the unsettled weather returned, and the storms which occurred in the latter half of the month were severe. On the 15th the minimum thermometer at Murree registered 12° of frost, and the cold over the hills and their neighbourhood was severe. The first fall of snow in India was registered at Simla on the 14th. At Murree the first fall was on the 15th, at Quetta on the 16th, and at Mussoorie on the 17th. The storms of the month occurred on the 15th, 16th, 25th and 26th. In both cases the first indication of the depression was afforded by a barometric fall and rain at Quetta, and by a strengthening of the south-east winds on the hills. The first storm occasioned very little rain and snow, but with the second the fall was much heavier. Murree received three feet of snow, and Simla and Mussoorie about ten inches, and the total rainfall of the month was very largely above the normal over nearly the whole of North-Western and Northern India. In January the unsettled weather reached its climax. Four severe storms appeared over Northern India. The weather was almost uninterruptedly under the influence of an approaching, present, or retreating disturbance. Rain on the plains and snow on the hills occurred day after day, and the temperature was exceedingly low everywhere. In the mountain districts around the north-west frontier of India the snowfall was excessive. In the Yusafzai district the snow lay to a depth of about 15 feet at the close of the month, on the Murree hills to a depth of about 12 feet, and in Plach and Kulu to a depth of about 15 feet. Early in February another storm occurred. The snow which accompanied it fell to almost unprecedentedly low levels, lying in the Dera Ismail Khan District as low as 2,000 feet. It still further added to the accumulated snow on the mountain ranges around the North-West of India. After the storm had disappeared a period of fair weather set in, during which cold northerly and north-westerly winds poured down from the mountains into the plains, and the minima recorded at this time were lower than any since 1876. In Simla the 8th was the coldest day. On this occasion the highest temperature registered was below freezing point (30°·5), and the night temperature showed 10° of frost, being down to 21°·8. These temperatures were, however, beaten by records on Jakko and in the more exposed parts of the station, where readings of 11° or 21° of frost were recorded. These readings were taken at some distance off the ground, where radiation is slight. At the level of the earth's surface the thermometer at the Government Observatory fell to 5°, or 27° of frost. This excessive cold was not, however, by any means confined to the hill stations. Temperatures of 30°, or 2° of frost, were recorded at this time at Peshawar and Rawalpindi, and temperatures of between 30° and 32° from several stations in the North-West. These temperatures were those registered at the regulation height of 4 feet from the ground, and the temperatures on the ground, judging from the example given by Simla, must have been something like 10° lower. But, however deterrent this excessive cold may have been to the proper progress of the crops in North-Western India, it is probable that the effect was slight compared with that of the excessive rainfall which has accompanied and is accompanying the unsettled weather of the present season. At the close of February the weather report of the Meteorological Department showed that the rainfall for the two months—January and February—had been excessive over nearly the whole of Northern India. Thus for that period Murree received 20 inches instead of its normal 5 inches; Simla 9 inches instead of 4½ inches; Peshawar 7 inches instead of 2½ inches; Rawalpindi 10 inches instead of 4½ inches; and Ludhiana 6½ inches instead of 2½ inches. Nor does this record apparently close the period of unsettled weather. The telegrams which are daily received from Simla and published in these columns contain almost uninterruptedly information of deficient day temperatures and of showery weather, so that a season which commenced auspiciously with generally favourable rainfall promises, unless the weather changes completely and quickly, to end in disappointment and famine prices.—Pioneer.

THE MISSIONARY AND THE BRAHMANS AT COIMBATORE.

THE religious excitement at Coimbatore arising out of the conversion of a Brahman youth to Christianity reached an acute stage the other day, when the missionary chiefly concerned in the case, was hustled, reviled, beaten, and thrown down by an angry crowd. The immediate occasion of the trouble was the production of the boy in obedience to the order of the Court, and the prompt discharge of Mr. Bird, the Judge observing that the charge of contempt had been purged by the one day's imprisonment which that gentleman had undergone. Mr. Irvine added, however, that there could be no doubt that the father and grandfather of the boy were his proper custodians, and that anyone attempting to prevent them asserting their rights would be liable to serious consequences. Immediately on the conclusion of the hearing of Mr. Bird's case, therefore, the relatives of the boy were prepared to carry him off, but in anticipation of some such contingency a warrant had been already issued so that the youth found himself in the hands of the police. Then followed the scene. In leaving the Judge's Court for that of the Collector, with the peon on one side of him, his father on the other, and Mr. Bird bringing up the rear, Appu Rao was speedily surrounded by his old friends, who gave vent to their religious zeal by setting upon the missionary practically within the precincts of the Court. Whether this is to be regarded as contempt or not we do not know, but it seems doubtful whether the victim of this zealous outbreak would have escaped with a whole skin if it had not been for the timely appearance of his own servants, and a friendly Salvationist who happened to be standing by and came to the rescue. We have no desire to overburden this brief account of the circumstance with unnecessary inferences, but we suspect that the Brahman friends of the youth had allowed themselves to be somewhat misled by what the Collector described as the "extra judicial" remarks of the Judge as to the father's right of custody of the boy. In any case, from whatever cause it may arise, it is a lamentable circumstance that an outbreak of religious fanaticism should occur actually within the precincts of one of the most important of our mofussil courts of law, and we may congratulate ourselves that under the present régime such events are extremely rare.

Of course, on the case coming before the Collector he immediately granted a summons for assault, dismissing the defendant on the criminal charge of kidnapping the boy, animadverting severely on the false affidavit put in on the strength of which the warrant had been secured, and on the conduct of the vakeels who had had charge of the case. The youth himself felt it necessary to apply for police protection, which was granted; and it was arranged, after considerable palaver, that he should live in a small bungalow in the Collector's compound, pending the final decision of the Court as to the question of his right to choose his own residence, or whether as a minor he is to be given up to his father. In view of the excitement prevailing at Coimbatore it is, perhaps, desirable, in the interests of justice, for the case to be heard elsewhere. Not that there is any fear, apparently, that the Collector would be either intimidated by any ebullition of popular feeling, or hoodwinked by legal subtleties of any kind. It would be unseemly on our part, pending final issues, as the case is still sub judice, to express any opinion on the case as a whole; but we may venture to hope at all events that the law on the question of personal religious liberty may be so clearly defined as to enable both missionaries and others to know precisely where they are.—Madras Times.

"FLAGRANT INGRATITUDE."

OUR evening contemporary publishes Mr. Eardley Norton's opinion regarding the movement started a few days ago to commemorate Mr. Bradlaugh's services to this country. Mr. Norton writes indignantly and with disgust, and he is perfectly right in doing so. "The collapse of the subscriptions," he writes, "opened to commemorate the late Charles Bradlaugh's services to the people of this country has been so complete that I withdraw my offer of a donation of Rs. 500 towards objects now hopelessly unattainable. I should have been glad to help a movement based on a feeling of gratitude and evincing some capability of appreciating at their full value the generous efforts of one who gave India great and gratuitous assistance. But all that the people of Madras have subscribed is Rs. 180! I decline to continue a connection with a movement so ridiculous. Look at the men who have subscribed and their amounts, and recollect the names of those who have not! The contrast teaches a lesson not much to the credit of men who praised the lion living and now will not bury it decently dead." This shameful apathy in a right cause, accompanied by a clamorous agitation in support of a vicious social custom, is causing disgust to many English friends of our country. Mr. Norton has always taken a most prominent part in the endeavours of our people for political advancement. He has given us his time, his money, and his talent. He has always spoken and written well of us, and has evinced a degree of enthusiasm which has many a time served to stimulate us to exertion and rouse our drooping energies. To set a good example to his native friends, he put down the handsome amount of Rs. 500 as his contribution towards the Bradlaugh Fund. But what effect has his example had? The total amount hitherto subscribed by the natives of this Presidency for the object of perpetuating the memory of the man who did more valuable service to us than many Viceroys and Governors, and who was praised, extolled, and almost adored while he was alive, has come up to Rs. 180! Such inconsistency and ingratitude might well rouse the indignation and contempt of a generous and disinterested English friend. And what is worse, while Madras has at least made a show of an attempt, the other parts of the country have not done even that. They have been content with a message of condolence with Bradlaugh's daughter. Such flagrant ingratitude is sure to discourage those benevolent gentlemen, members of the House of Commons, who have agreed to continue the work done by the late member for India. Still we are all sincere and enthusiastic political reformers, and, as Mr. Mano Mohon Ghose would say, we are making very satisfactory progress on every line of reform.—The Hindu.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 6, 1891.

BRITISH DESPOTISM IN INDIA.

SOME of the English newspapers in India have again been calling the attention of the Government and of their readers to the continued seditious tone of part of the native press, especially in Lower Bengal. The complaint, however, is one of very old standing, and it has been a matter of opinion, on which there are arguments on both sides, whether it would be wise or foolish for the Government to interfere except in some particularly outrageous instance of disloyalty to British rule. Certainly the Government of India has had for many years to put up with a vast amount of vituperation and abuse in return for the freedom which, under its "despotism," it has allowed to the vernacular press of the country. But there have been, and there still are, Englishmen who, knowing India from practical experience, are of opinion that it is better to let the seditious shrieking of a few foolish Babu editors and boy correspondents waste itself in type, which few read and by which nobody in particular is injured. The calm philosophy of the giant who allowed his wife to thrash him because it pleased her and did not hurt him, may, in certain cases, be worthy of imitation by official giants when attacked by pigmies. But it is not so easy to preserve an equanimity of temper when one finds in an English newspaper at home—edited by an English gentleman who has accepted a decoration at the hands of the Government of India—continued attacks upon that Government in the shape of monstrous accusations of cruelty, oppression, and injustice, which are as false as they are malicious. India is the title of a journal professedly published for the honest discussion of Indian affairs, and its editor is Mr. William Digby, C.I.E., who was formerly connected with the Local Government and press at Madras. The journal is generally believed to be the representative organ of the Indian National Congress, and copies of it are no doubt as freely distributed in India as in England. In the latest issue of this precious print, the editor, quoting part of an expression lately used by Sir John Gorst in the House of Commons, to the effect that India was not a free country (in the sense which England is), but under a Government which had certain arbitrary and despotic powers, makes it a text for a long diatribe against that Government, telling his readers that "not law but individual caprice is supreme in India—in British India at least." The editor's individual opinions may be of little weight and powerless to disturb the serenity of the weakest of Indian official minds, but one boast which has been always prominently put forward in Mr. Digby's journal is that the Indian National Congress is eminently loyal to British rule and that its object is merely to secure for the natives a larger share in the government of their country and a more extended political franchise, both of which privileges are to be used for the benefit of the fellow-countrymen of the so-elected representatives and for the strengthening of the British raj in India. So far for the "professions" of loyalty towards that raj: Mr. Digby's journal shows the manner in which they are put into force so as to encourage the less-educated native to respect the Government. He quotes from the Introduction to the verbatim Report of the proceedings at the recent Congress Session certain passages in which the Government of India is represented as being one of the most hateful and odious of despotisms—"linked with some virtues but a thousand crimes." Byron's Corsair, to whom this line originally applied, had only one virtue; but although the Indian Administration is allowed to have "some," they are altogether neutralized by the "crimes."

Here are some gems of truth showing, according to the National Congress, how the natives of India are treated by the despotic Government of India:—

"Millions of educated and patriotic men are treated as political helots to gratify the class prejudices and amour propre and fill the pockets of a handful of bureaucrats, the average men amongst whom are positively less qualified for rule in India than a very considerable proportion of those whom England permits them to misgovern."

* * * *

"Pay, promotion, and polyliteral affixes appear to be the sole things in which most of our modern civilians take any real interest. They are mere professional administrators, who take up the work simply as a matter of business as a means of making money. They are, consequently, wholly out of touch with the people to whom, with rare exceptions, they are bound by no earnest unselfish desire to do good, no real heartfelt interest in their welfare and progress.

"Ninety-five per cent. of all the most important and responsible offices in the country are monopolized by Europeans, on salaries fully double of those that would secure quite as, in many cases far more, competent Indians for the majority of these posts.

* * * *

"One-fifth of the entire population tremble on the verge of starvation, to perish by millions whenever the smallest natural calamity of drought or flood increases by one iota the insecurity of their position, and the money wrung from our pauper population, by the cruel taxation of the first necessaries of life—the money which is all our Government has had to show for the twenty odd millions who in recent years have succumbed to famine and its consequences—is ruthlessly squandered in bloodshed, and in wicked, and idiotically mismanaged, aggressions on feebler neighbours, to gratify the ignoble cravings for personal distinctions and titles, of individual members of a Simla cabal.

* * * *

"Almost every indigenous art and industry has been crushed, and agriculture, the one art on which now depend nearly 90 per cent. of the population, is slowly deteriorating under a grasping rack-renting system of temporary settlements, and, with it, our crops and our cattle.

* * * *

"The masses are being persistently demoralized; despite the distinct orders of the House of Commons, an iniquitous system of excise, calculated to stimulate drunkenness and all its attendant crimes and vices, is still retained, only slightly and superficially reformed in some provinces, in all its original iniquity in others."

* * * *

It is not necessary to make comments here on the above elegant extracts, which will no doubt greatly delight the readers of the seditious Bengal papers when translated into the vernacular. Mr. Allan O. Hume, C.B., writes in this issue of Mr. Digby's journal that "the Congress movement is in a state of the most robust health."

It can, however, be hardly flattering to him as an old Indian civilian to read these opinions of Congress as to the way in which Indian civilians have administered to the good government of that country.

As will be seen from the notice at the head of opposite page, Allen's Indian Mail ends its existence to-day as a separate entity. Newspapers are as subject to the laws of mortality as their proprietors and editors, and the Mail shuffles off its mortal coil at a grand old age. The causes which have brought about that end now, sad as they are, need not be referred to here. But the old paper does not die utterly. Its soul is only transmigrated. Henceforth it will be incorporated with Messrs. H. S. King & Co.'s Homeward Mail and Official Gazette, which for many years has been, not its unfriendly but stronger rival, to which our subscribers and advertisers should now transfer that support which they gave to Allen's Indian Mail in former and more fortunate days.

A BRAVE act is reported of sepoy Jaymani Thappa, B Company 42nd Ghoorkas, who, when Lieutenant Brackenbury fell mortally wounded, rushed forward under a heavy fire and carried him to a place of safety.

IT is stated that the Viceroy will visit Mysore in the first or second week in July—a circumstance which in itself suffices to contradict the story that got into the society papers at home that Lord Lansdowne, finding that his health has suffered from residence in India, has asked to be relieved of his office. From Mysore his Excellency will probably go to Ootacamund, and will then give the only foundation that ever existed for the report last autumn, that Lord Lansdowne was so far opposed to the Simla Exodus that he intended to substitute the Nilgiris for the Himalayas this summer.

MR. QUINTON AND THE MANIPUR MASSACRE.

Sir W. W. Hunter sends the following important letter to the Times:—

SIR,—When the telegraphic account of Mrs. Grimwood's alleged statement appeared last week, it was at once perceived that it contained expressions inconsistent alike with facts mentioned in private letters written from Mr. Quinton's camp before the disaster and with Mr. Assistant-Commissioner Gurdon's official report to the Viceroy after that deplorable event. As, however, it was then hoped that this week's mail might bring despatches which would place the circumstances in their true light, it was not thought needful to publicly criticize an account given by a lady who had just emerged from so terrible an ordeal, and who had herself drunk so deeply of the cup of sorrow. It is now understood, however, that some time may still elapse before a complete and an authoritative narrative of the transactions at Manipur can reach England. It has, therefore, been determined, in justice to the memory of the murdered Chief Commissioner of Assam, to make the following statement. I have drawn it up from notes supplied for the purpose by one of Mr. Quinton's family, who was in the fullest correspondence with him up to the mail before his death. They have been forwarded to me by a late member of Lord Lansdowne's Government, who writes that, had he "not been a member of the Government under whose orders Quinton went to Manipur, and therefore bound to leave it to" his "colleagues to give the full explanation which they will doubtless furnish in due season," he would have written to you himself.

Four serious charges have been insinuated against Mr. Quinton, on the strength of the telegraphic account said to have been given by Mrs. Grimwood. First, that the whole expedition was planned by Mr. Quinton in overweening confidence. Second, that he abstained from seeking information and counsel as to the actual state of Manipur. Third, that he planned a treacherous arrest of the Senaputty. Fourth, that, in going out to parley with the enemy, he acted on his own bad judgment and against the advice of the local Political Agent, Mr. Grimwood.

First.—Mr. Quinton went to Manipur under the orders of the Government of India, and with instructions to carry out a specified policy.

Second.—So far from not seeking information and counsel about the condition of Manipur, Mr. Quinton was not content even with the full written accounts which he had received, but, before entering Manipur, despatched an Assistant Commissioner to make further and special inquiries. I quote from the notes supplied to me, without, of course, being able to verify their statements. "Mr. Gurdon was sent on ahead to Manipur to find out every particular as to the chances of resistance, and the feeling of the Jubraj and other Princes, and all the necessary information." On March 19 Mr. Quinton wrote from his camp, on his way to Manipur, that Mr. Gurdon had come with the information required. That information was such as to lead him to suspect there might be some resistance, but resistance of a kind which his escort and troops would be easily able to cope with. Mr. Quinton took every care to learn the facts, and he acted after a consideration of the alleged facts as officially reported to him.

Third.—As to the supposed plot to treacherously seize the Senaputty, I can only quote Mr. Gurdon's official report to the Viceroy, telegraphed by Lord Lansdowne on April 18. The Princes having failed to attend the durbars, Mr. Quinton "sent a written ultimatum to the Regent warning him that unless the Senaputty was surrendered he would be arrested." This does not settle the point; but it is the only clear official evidence which we yet have in regard to it, and it is of a nature that may well make us pause before accepting Mrs. Grimwood's statements. "I must express my feeling that it is incredible," said Lord Ripon in the House of Lords on Friday, "from my acquaintance with Mr. Quinton's character, that he should have had any hand in such an unworthy proceeding." "My information," rejoined Lord Cross, "does not lead me to believe that the Government of India ever contemplated the summoning of the Senaputty to a durbar for the purpose of arresting him. If that had been done, I should have been very much surprised."

Fourth.—The final charge against Mr. Quinton, made on the strength of Mrs. Grimwood's alleged statements, is that he went forth to parley with the enemy, in opposition to the advice of the local Political Agent, Mr. Grimwood. On this point Mr. Gurdon's official narrative, as telegraphed by the Viceroy, leaves no room for doubt that Mrs. Grimwood, if correctly reported, was not aware of the facts. "In the evening, during a truce, while Quinton was negotiating with the Regent, Senaputty sent a messenger inviting Quinton to meet him After some hesitation Quinton, on the advice of Grimwood, went to the main gate." Further comment is superfluous and would be cruel.

The foregoing facts are sufficient, I hope, to lead the public to suspend any judgment adverse to Mr. Quinton until the promised despatches from the Government of India reach this country. Those despatches will, I feel confident, throw a very different light on the transactions at Manipur from that derived from the alleged statements of the afflicted lady who escaped the massacre, and whose husband perished in it. I sat side-by-side with Mr. Quinton in the Viceroy's Legislative Council during four years, and knew him in public and private life as few men had opportunities of knowing him. He was an experienced, cautious, high-minded man, without any special gift of the initiative, and apt to lean on the judgment of others rather than to assert his own. The miserable lie telegraphed, on the authority of the two fugitive Goorkha soldiers, that Mr. Quinton had ordered a sauve qui peut, was scarcely less opposed to all that was known of his character than the charges of overweening confidence and blind disregard of advice which have now been built on Mrs. Grimwood's alleged statements. The sauve qui peut story is now known to be a lie, and, unless Mr. Quinton's whole nature changed miraculously during the last week of his life, the present charges will, I believe, be found to arise either out of an incorrect report of what Mrs. Grimwood really said, or from the disordered state of that lady's memory as to the circumstances just before the heartrending bereavement which she had suffered.

I am faithfully yours,

Oxford, May 4. W. W. HUNTER.

THE POSITION OF INDIAN WOMEN.

IT is as impossible to generalise on the position of women in this country as on the religion of its "people" or their prejudices or customs. There is variety to an extent scarcely known elsewhere, and the natural result is that the subject is studied in a few points of view; and as the result of such studies is frequently made known to the British public, an utterly false picture is drawn in the minds of people who have had no opportunities of judging for themselves, and are content to place reliance in what is put before them. In many cases the picture is confusing also; for even in regard to certain classes, all observers are not in agreement, nor do all study the matter in the same light. It has come about that we have heard much of the political and social disabilities of the Indian woman; and, on the other side of the argument, a good deal has been said in favour of the domestic life of the Hindu woman, her virtues and the smallness of her wants. The intelligent Hindu, of whom we hear so much at the present time, is quite competent to judge that expansion of mind brings with it an expansion of desire. The narrow limits of the home of the uneducated woman, or the woman who has only been trained in a fashion that may almost be termed "ancestral," are her world. She is happy if she be virtuous; and the probability is in her favour in this respect. Expand her intellect so that it is only in proportion to her domestic life, and she pines for more scope. If she is to be happy, she must receive more consideration than before, and this means in too many cases not a mere shedding of conservatism, but an increase of expense to whomsoever may have to provide for her wants, and perhaps an increase of temptation out of proportion to the extra strength of resistance imparted by cultivation of the mental powers. We are told by many writers that Hindus degrade their women. According to Western notions there is much truth in this, but the instance usually chosen to establish its truth can scarcely be said to be happily selected. "Hindu women live under a constant suspicion, which is in itself deeply degrading," it is said. Is this true? Suspicion can hardly be said to have a degrading influence unless the suspected person knows of its existence, and is aware that the cause lies in some doubt of his or her virtue or power to resist temptation. That this is far from being always the case in India hardly needs to be said. Women frequently take the prevailing system as that to which their mothers were acustomed, ask no questions, and draw no deductions.

Looking back to the origin of the purdah system, we find the cause not in suspicion of Hindu women or doubts of their virtue, but in dread of the spoliating invader. In this we have the mainspring of the movement that organized the purdah system, and it cannot be said to reflect disgrace or degradation upon Indian women. More serious is the reflection cast by the general desire to get girls married early; but here also there is something to be said of a kind not usually mentioned by English writers. It is a sin for a girl to pass through life unmarried, and women are usually considered to be more numerous than men. Hence competition in the matrimonial market has led to a desire to be "first in the field," and girls are married early for fear lest they may never find husbands at all. To attribute the system entirely to doubt of female virtue in India is to cast a sombre reflection not only on womankind but on mankind in this country, and to overlook what may reasonably be accepted as a much more important factor. It is an error to judge everything in this life with a pessimistic eye, or to apply an optimistic touchstone and then stand aghast at the extent of inferiority or corrupt alloy displayed. In judging of Indian women as they are, and in weighing up the system under which many of them live, we must guard against picking out only the faults and neglecting the counterbalancing beauties. There is a considerable amount of truth in the statement that the purdah system begets suspicion and breeds doubt; but, on the other hand, it must be remembered that where it comes into play in a natural manner it is accepted unreservedly as what is right, and has no more narrowing influence than had poverty in England forty years ago, when poverty meant for the most part ignorance, no Board Schools being available to provide education at a low rate. As regards Hindus, the purdah system is often misunderstood, and judged as some think about the harem system in Mahomedan Turkey. Seclusion is treated as an even more hurtful enemy than ignorance, because bringing the latter in its train. But at its worst the purdah system in India is hardly so bad as to be treated as an unmitigated source of degradation, many as are its degrading influences in some instances.

Let us turn from it to the more open life enjoyed or endured by many Indian women, a life that calls for less spurious sympathy, is more immediately under the eye of Western observers, and consequently attracts less comment than the mysteries and supposed horrors of the purdah system. Under the latter we are said to have the Hindu woman degraded by doubts and seclusion; under the other system, common among pariahs and not unknown among the castes, she is represented as degraded by being made the beast of burden. Be she free, therefore, or confined, she is still degraded, if all that is said be true. The coolie woman toils all day long. If there is work to be done in the hot sun she gets most of it. While the husband sleeps, the wife and the daughter work out in the open, uncomplaining, and in many cases quite happy. This is not the picture usually drawn by Western depictors of Indian people and Indian customs. The Lancashire spinner is appalled at the thought of long hours of factory work for Indian females, adults and children. Yet were he to see those women and children at their daily task, he would be forced to admit that they are at least as happy and contented as the males. If he wandered into the street, he would find the heavy work done by females under the direction and supervision, and with the occasional assistance, of males. In the fields there is a somewhat similar picture visible. Everywhere in cases where the purdah system is not in force the woman is at work, and she is generally happy; even under the purdah system she is not always the drone, the toy that she is represented to be. We have the authority of native writers whose integrity is beyond question for the statement that with the Hindu, as with the Englishman, the woman's peculiar sphere is that of the home. There she frequently rules mildly, but nevertheless firmly; sweetly and happily, but with no less influence. If English writers will but realise this, if they will but understand that Western standards do not always offer perfect bases whence to observe Eastern customs and manners and to gauge their merits, then we shall be nearer to the true knowledge of facts, which is the best groundwork for reform and advancement. That there is scope for reform we do not pretend to deny; but we fear that efforts may be misdirected unless a proper understanding be first arrived at as to what is really wrong in the current systems.—Madras Times.

FACTORY LEGISLATION IN EAST AND WEST.

THE Indian Factory Act is passed, and is now beyond interference, interested or disinterested, from the exponents of Lancashire opinion. It is, nevertheless, still curious to watch how those who were so eagerly insisting upon legislation for India in accordance with Lancashire views have been diverted from their quest by misunderstandings of their own, which have left them small opportunity for thinking about the oppression and cruelty that are supposed to be practised in Bombay mills. Mr. Maclean, strange to relate, has had to justify himself before Oldham opinion against attacks which have been made upon him by men who affect to be doubtful if he is, after all, such a friend to his constituents as he professed to be. A trade paper has exhorted Mr. Maclean's constituents to remember, when the general election comes round, that he had been the bitterest opponent of legislation promoted in the interest of the working men of Oldham. The explanation of the charge is that during the debate on the second reading of Sir Henry James's Factory Act Amendment Bill Mr. Maclean "sneered at the Bill, sneered at the opponents of the Bill, and sneered at the operatives." He admits the first charge. The Bill had been so modified and amended that he regarded it as "absolutely contemptible." But he speaks respectfully of the opponents of the Bill, and as to the operatives, though we find on reference to Mr. Maclean's speech that he did say some slightly sarcastic things about the time coming when working men would be the only class whom it would be worth while to consider, he respects them too much —owes his position in Parliament, in fact, so entirely to their votes —to sneer at them. However, what is of special interest to us is Mr. Maclean's apology for his attitude in relation to factory legislation in India. Having, he tells his constituents, studied the growth of Indian industry from its infancy until now, he can put forward a fair claim to speak with authority on the question of the extent to which Indian competition may be fostered by fresh and vexatious restrictions placed by Parliament on the freedom of employment of capital and labour in England Now it so happens that the Manchester Guardian tells us that we played with the question when, a few weeks ago, we suggested that English factory legislation must be at least as much in need of amendment as our own, since no fewer than four Bills for the amendment of the English Acts are before the House of Commons. We are now told that the proposed amendments—which? Sir Henry James's, or Mr. Mathews's, or whose?—are largely intended to bring miscellaneous workshops and mills within the spirit of the Acts, and in this respect, and also as regards the proposed new regulations specially applicable to textile mills, they are distinctly progressive. That is the Manchester Guardian's way of describing what Mr. Maclean considers "fresh and vexatious restrictions on the freedom of employment of capital and labour." To add to the strife of tongues there is the protest recently launched by the Bradford worsted manufacturers against Sir Henry James's Bill as having been drawn up by Lancashire people in entire ignorance of the requirements of Yorkshire, for which it is not suitable. However, we need not press any argument derived from the distracted counsels of English advisers upon Indian questions, though it is permissible to ask what can be the value of advice as to factory legislation for India which comes from men so singularly unable to agree even upon factory legislation for their own country. One point of personal interest we cannot refrain from advancing. Mr. Maclean tells his constituents in Oldham that at the present moment he is the best-abused man in all the length and breadth of India "because he has been mainly instrumental in forcing the Indian Government to reduce the excessive hours of labour in Indian factories." This is a general impression which largely takes its colour from Mr. Maclean's consciousness. But if it will serve him before his constituents in the general election to which he is looking forward, we will readily admit that he has not raised himself in public esteem in this country by his strenuous advocacy for the application to Indian mills of what in England would be called, in his own phrase, "fresh and vexatious restrictions on the freedom of employment of capital and labour." He ought to welcome the worst that is said against him in Bombay, for objurgations hurled at him here would, when translated for the instruction of Oldham electors, read like compliments.—Bombay Gazette.

MANIPUR IN PEACE.

LIKE the "Age of Consent" Bill, our little wars are useful for their "educative effect." Within the past week those who knew of Manipur in India have had their geographical knowledge expanded, and it is hoped editors have ere this looked up Salisbury maps, consulted Hunter, and thereby given the public the ancient history and the position on the globe of Manipur or Imphal.

"I've been there," my friends have heard, and am so pestered with inquiries that I write to the Pioneer, requesting all of them to kindly take this as an answer to the most pressing questions, apart from the position (? perilous) of our countrymen who survived the first impulsive counter-attack.

To begin with, this petty Tributary State was unnecessarily magnified into one of your old political's "buffers," lying, as it did then, between British Cachar and unknown regions to its east, over which Burma and China held never-well-defined sway. Like Afghanistan and Nepal, too, it is interesting; the present dominant class being a graft of more civilized neighbours, from the plains, on the aborigines, and the religion of the intruders being adopted with fervour, more or less fanatical. However, the Manipuris are mild Hindus of an unorthodox kind, and in stature and complexion come between Gurkhas and Afghans; while their numbers cannot exceed those in Rewah, for example, and their arms and organization are about on a par with this Tributary State.

In the good old days, when the late Colonel McCulloch was Resident, the place had no current history. After him, Colonel Johnson, of the same school, held on, till the spirit of unrest was seen stalking to the north, on that lofty backbone, the Borail and Patkoi Range, from which ribs of hills are thrown out to the north, or Naga country, and the south, or Manipur territory. Our Government took over, after extreme provocation and with mature deliberation, the whole of Nagaland, Manipur helping us, nolens volens; and a Boundary Commission, "unhonoured and unsung" in those quiet days, settled things between us, excluding, of course, the Nagas from the council.

The new school of C. S. Politicals now came in, with history-making in Lushailand to the south, Chinland to the east, while the British power was "consolidated" at Kohima, in the Naga Hills, to the north. For this they were selected as more fitting instruments to be wielded by that motive power which can best be called the Spirit of the Age. Thanks to this, Manipur is no longer a "buffer," and might well be annexed for political "educative effect," if the Regent and his Chief have committed themselves grievously.

The country is traversed from north to south by some half-dozen parallel ranges of forest-clad hills, with valleys varying from a mile to many miles in width; and situated in about the last of these, at a height of 2,600 feet above sea-level, is the capital, Imphal, with a lake and other scenery reminding one of Kashmir. That blessing, trade, will derive little advantage unless mineral resources show up, and, above all, communications, which must cut the hill-ranges at right angles and be very expensive for a civilized Government, be undertaken.

Popularly, Manipur is famous for polo ponies, and their grotesque trappings; and infamous for the sale of women.

It is warm and moist from the middle of March, when the chota bursat sets in steadily, to the end of October, while the hills are unhealthy till December. Leeches swarm during the rains, and man-eating tigers are not unknown. The peculiar "double-branch horn" deer is found here only. The tea plant is indigenous; and, lastly, some fine silks can be obtained; but everything is expensive.

I have encamped amid the colonies of Manipuris settled in North Cachar, strolled with pleasure through their clean-washed (leepoeel) villages, with detached houses, interspersed with bamboo and betel palm, found them industrious cultivators, and that they have intelligent carpenters and smiths among them—who will not do a stroke for you, however, under a rupee a day. When questioned why they left their own country they reply that "the more they do there the more they are robbed by taxation" They are not so frank as out-and-out hill-men, are quiet, but look suspiciously impulsive.

The men dress in turban, jacket and dhotie, of silk or cotton, while the women have one over-all cloth, of thick cotton stuff, which reaches from the armpits to the ankles; and how it is kept up is a mystery, as neither knot nor cord appear. Unmarried girls wear the pony clip or fringe, while the married must brush their hair back.

Some five years ago I was in those parts, interested in the Bengal-Assam Railway Survey, which was finished in October 1886. It is a thousand pities, now, the Government did not begin the line then, which would have been in running order ere this, and so saved many lives and much money; in fact, under such circumstances, such a coup de main, with such retaliation as has unhappily occurred, would never have been resorted to—would not have been called into existence. The line was designed to strategically serve Lushailand, this very country, Manipur, the North Cachar Hills (Gunjong), and the Naga Hills—our quite as much disturbed eastern frontier.

The lines, starting from Chittagong and Chandpur on the Megna, opposite Goalundo, to Cachar would pay well, and were negotiated for by more than one Calcutta firm; the portion via Gunjong, connecting the valleys of Cachar and Assam, would not pay, owing to expensive construction charges and no local traffic; but onward from Golaghat to Dibrughar it would.

And with these arguments Secretaries of State, Viceroys and promoters of Companies have played shuttlecock, and nothing has been done. Now there will be hot haste to start the lines, with or without a Company.—Pioneer.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE BENARES DISTURBANCE.

GREAT excitement prevails in Benares owing to the riot in the city over the Ramjee Temple case. It was supposed that the matter would have been discussed at the Municipal meeting yesterday morning, and a large crowd assembled at the Town Hall to hear the result. Finding that the temple case was not for consideration the crowd dispersed, but proceeded to the site of the temple, as a rumour had got abroad that it had been demolished. The temple was found intact, but by this time the mob had become riotous, and dug up the water-works pipes from the temple site to the distributing station, and also destroyed a small pumping-engine on the river-bank. Raja Shiva Prasad and Babu Sitaram, the Municipal Commissioners who had refused to listen to the protest of the people, had their houses attacked, as well as the city telegraph-office, the wires being cut at the Rajghat Station. The mob wrecked the place, plundering the cash-chest of about Rs. 3,000. Immediately on receiving the news, the Magistrate and the District Superintendent of Police and the Commissioner proceeded to the scene of the disturbance with a strong force of East Lancashire and 12th Native Infantry Regiment. Two companies of the former were also despatched by a special train to guard the Dufferin Bridge, and other parties were sent to guard the Bank of Bengal, the Post Office, and the Cantonment Railway Stations. The troops remained in the city all night, and every precaution has been taken by the civil and military authorities. Everything passed off quietly last night, most of the troops being withdrawn from the city about 11 o'clock. The Volunteers, who turned out promptly, were also dismissed to their homes. The Magistrate remained at the Town Hall all night in case of further trouble. All is quiet to-day. About 120 rioters were arrested last evening, and more arrests are being made to-day.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

The riot at Benares has been a more serious affair than was at first thought. Religious prejudices may have started the riot, but a much more probable cause was the dearness of provisions, as the Julayhas, who are Mahomedan weavers and are a large body, took a prominent part in the riot. They presented two or three petitions to the Collector complaining of the unduly high prices charged by Bunniahs, and asking him to obtain lower rates, which he informed them he was powerless to do. It was generally known by the natives in Allahabad and elsewhere that there was to be a disturbance in Benares; so it may be said that the riot was premeditated, and the religious feeling respecting the temple gave the opportunity desired. The Government Telegraph Office was completely gutted; everything inside the place, including the furniture, was smashed to pieces. The Telegraph Master lost everything he had, and he and his family were glad to escape with their lives into adjoining premises. The iron cash-chest was smashed open, and its contents, which are said to have been considerable, were appropriated by the rioters. The Rajghat Station was wrecked completely, everything being smashed to pieces, and the Station staff had a narrow escape of their lives; and besides the three thousand rupees plundered from the cash-chest, two parcels of silver bullion worth over three thousand rupees were taken. Raja Siva Prasad was prepared for the rioters, and Rai Seetaram, who had not done so, had his place invaded. Several valuable conveyances and much property were destroyed. The mob were pillaging his house, and there was every likelyhood of its being wrecked, but the native Sub-Inspector of Police ordered his men to fire. One of the villagers was wounded, and the remainder dispersed. The Volunteers were called out, and the ladies and children were placed under their protection at the Osmond Hotel. One hundred and seventeen of the rioters have been arrested, and everything is now quieting down.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY, MAY 1.

THE MANIPUR DISASTER.

The MARQUIS OF RIPON.—I wish to ask the noble lord the Secretary for India a question of which he has received private notice. Can the noble lord inform the House whether there is any foundation for the statement appearing in some of the newspapers that it was intended to summon the Maharajah of Manipur and other native princes to a durbar at Manipur, and then at that durbar, or afterwards, to arrest them? If such a statement represents the facts correctly, I should like to know whether that proceeding had the authority of the Government of India. I need not point out the important bearing of the question, but I must express my feeling that it is incredible, from my acquaintance with Mr. Quinton's character, that he should have had any hand in such an unworthy proceeding.

VISCOUNT CROSS.—In answer to the question of the noble marquis I have only to state that my information does not lead me to believe that the Government of India ever contemplated the summoning of the Senaputty to a durbar for the purpose of arresting him. If that had been done, I should have been very much surprised. As to the actual facts, it is impossible for us at present to make any statement, because the Viceroy has not yet had an opportunity of obtaining all the information necessary. In the meantime I do not think it would be right to present papers in an incomplete state; but I am expecting further details, and as soon as the papers are complete they shall be laid on the table.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 1.

THE MANIPUR DISASTER.

Mr. CREMER asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to letters which appeared in the Times on the 29th ult. from Mrs. Grimwood and Lieut. Albert Wood concerning the way in which the massacre at Manipur commenced; if he could inform the House whether the statement in regard to the attempt to capture the Jubraj was true; and whether the agent was authorised, and if so, by whom, to capture the Jubraj, and the reasons which prompted such attempt.

Digitized by Google

Mr. D. CRAWFORD, at the same time, asked whether the Under-Secretary would lay on the table the instructions given to Mr. Quinton as the head of the expedition.

Sir J. GORST replied in terms identical with the answer made in the House of Lords by Viscount Cross. (See Lords' report.)

Mr. CREMER wished to know whether an attempt was made by the agent to capture the Jubraj, and if so, on whose authority that attempt was made; whether he received instructions from anyone or acted solely on his own responsibility.

SIR J. GORST thought the hon. member must see that his noble friend the Secretary of State was not at present able to answer that question, inasmuch as the officers of the expedition had been unfortunately killed, and any official records of the nature referred to in the question were probably destroyed. Despatches were on their way, which should arrive in the course of Monday next, and on the receipt of those despatches papers would, he had no doubt, be laid on the table.

Mr. CREMER gave notice that he would repeat the question on Tuesday next.

MAY 4.

THE DISASTER IN MANIPUR.

MR. CRAWFORD asked the Under-Secretary for India whether he would lay upon the table the instructions given to Mr. Quinton for the expedition to Manipur.

SIR J. GORST said that the text of the instructions given to Mr. Quinton would be laid upon the table as soon as the despatches were printed.

MR. BRYCE asked the Under-Secretary for India whether the papers relating to the Manipur expedition which he had promised to present to the House would include not only such instructions as might have been given to Mr. Quinton by the Government of India, but all communications which had passed between the India Office here and the Government of India upon this subject.

SIR J. GORST said that the communications which had passed between the India Office and the Government of India upon the subject would also be included in the papers presented to Parliament.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.

SIR G. CAMPBELL asked the Under-Secretary for India what were the railways for which the Secretary of State had given or offered a guarantee, and what was the amount and duration of the guarantee in each of such cases; and whether, in cases in which a concession had been given, any deposit or security had been exacted to bind the applicants, or whether in any cases concessions had been given which left the concessionaires free to take them up if they found they could raise the money so as to make a profit for themselves, or to throw them up if they could not.

SIR J. GORST: A proposed company for making a railway from Chittagong to Assam is the only one to which such a guarantee has been offered. The Secretary of State does not think it would be fair to the promoters of that company to promulgate the terms of that guarantee in reply to the question of the hon. member.

THE MANIPUR DISASTER.

Mr. CREMER asked the Under-Secretary of State for India if he could now state whether an attempt was made, or intended to be made, by the Chief Commissioner to capture the Jubraj at Manipur in case he attended the durbar to which he had been invited, and whether such attempt was the cause of the massacre which followed; whether the Chief Commissioner ordered the attempt on his own authority, or if he received his authority from the Indian Government; whether any record had been kept of the exact orders which the Chief Commissioner received; and when the Government would lay before Parliament a complete copy of such orders.

SIR J. GORST.—I have been directed by my noble friend the Secretary of State to answer this question as follows:—The best answer I can give to the question is to say that I have just laid on the table all the despatches relating to Manipur, and that they will be printed and circulated as speedily as possible. The Secretary of State has only been waiting for a despatch by the last mail, which arrived this morning.

MR. CREMER.—Am I to understand the right hon. gentleman to state to the House that he is not in a position to express any opinion upon or to give any definite answer to the questions I have put?

SIR J. GORST.—I can only give the answers in this House as I am directed by my noble friend the Secretary of State for India. I have given the answer he directed me to give.

MR. CREMER.—I give notice that I will repeat the question tomorrow and until I get an answer.

KASHMIR is a glorious place when one gets there—a sort of Paradise; but then the road to Paradise is known to be beset with difficulties. The road to Kashmir has these in the form of landslips, and every now and then one comes on a notice "Closed for repairs," or something to that effect, which is a little tantalising to the seeker of Paradise.

PROMOTION comes often by leaps and bounds, but it is not always as valuable and permanent as when it comes slowly. Owing to the sudden movements of troops in many directions from one station, we see that a modest Captain has suddenly burst forth into Commanding Officer, Cantonment Magistrate, Station Staff Officer, Officer Commanding the Station, and Company Commander; and no extra pay.

STORIES about children, provided they are true and not made up, are always delightful. It is related of Sir Henry Daly, when he was Governor-General's Agent for Central India, that he was once going round a school where a number of young Rajpoot princelings were being taught, and that, stopping opposite a bright little fellow, he asked him good-naturedly how he was getting on. "Sir," said the boy, with the greatest readiness, "I am now persecuting my tutor with the utmost acidity." This, of course, came of rather rash diving into a dictionary, but after all it was just as good as saying that he was prosecuting his studies with the utmost assiduity, which was of course what he meant.

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.
